THE BEWITCHING FAVORITE WITH A MILLION FAN FRIENDS

Not in recent history of the Motion Picture Industry has any feminine Star achieved such heights of popularity and such unprecedented box office power as Evelyn Brent.

From Maine to California and from Washington to Florida, in cities large and small, exhibitors praise her for her artistry, her beauty and her drawing power.

Among the fans of the Nation she is a reigning favorite, proven by the flattering expressions of exhibitors as published under the trade paper reports of "What the picture did for me" etc.

And no feminine Star can show such a noteworthy and unbroken list of successes as Miss Brent, among which are included—"Silk Stocking Sal"—"Mid-Night Molly"—"Forbidden Cargo"—"Alias Mary Flynn"—"Smooth As Satin" which played New York's Capitol Theatre to capacity performances for one solid week. "Lady Robinhood"—"Three Wise Crooks" and her latest success "A Broadway Lady" just released.

Miss Brent has earned the brilliant success she has achieved. Her pictures, superbly acted, expertly cast, splendidly directed and widely publicised have made her an outstanding Star and a sure fire money maker for exhibitors throughout the world.

An Equal Break

IF I were an exhibitor I would put one item at the head of the slate this year for thoughtful business consideration—and that is the matter of short subjects.

It's a business matter, plain and simple.

If you want the best of short subjects you have got to pay for the best services of the best kind of people in the making of them. Otherwise you won't get these services.

You, yourself, are writing the short subject ticket. And there isn't any argument about this whatever. Elmer Pearson expressed this homely fact in these columns some time ago; and last week, in his speech of acceptance of the Riesenfeld medal for the best short subject of the year, Earl Hammons said some blunt truths which ought to be thoroughly broadcast and seriously received.

What do you, an exhibitor, intend to do about short subjects in 1926?

Here's the pertinent little story about the man who made "The Voice of the Nightingale," which captured the Riesenfeld medal:

He came to Paris with an idea, got working space and equipment in the studios of Pathe Freres, and worked day and night for sixteen months to turn out some few thousand feet of negative.

All very well! But this man, L. Starevitch, will certainly not give the rest of his life and his brains to further creations if the theatre man continues to buy attractions by their length and not by their quality.

Would you spend a year on a short subject when you can get much more for a longer subject made in a few weeks?

There are a lot of unsound traditions in the theatrical business; and perhaps the most ridiculous of them all is the one back of short subjects.

In the early days of this business all films were short. But the salient fact is—and this the exhibitor may not clearly have in mind—that these were simply the first crude efforts toward longer films of a dramatic order. They belong to the class of longer films, in other words. They have nothing to do with the scenics, cartoons, news pictures, novelties and modern day comedies which were later originated to fill the demands of educated audiences in high class theatres.

Today the exhibitor builds his program just as an editor builds his magazine, with a variety of subjects to please a variety of people. This variety is absolutely essential to the success of any theatre, high or low. The short subjects have got to be as fine as the long; indeed, it is a fact that generally they are finer, if we are to judge by the applause they get.

Yet, while the exhibitor accepts these facts and acknowledges this necessity of high quality in short subjects, he wants to pay rentals on the basis of tradition.

In the early days of short subjects and when all the selling pressure was put on the multiple reel dramas, the exhibitor sort of expected the short length picture to be thrown in. In those days distributors of the longer subjects found it simply impossible, because unprofitable, to handle the short picture.

Today we have short features as well as long and they have their own especial distribution. But any man with a pad and pencil can quickly figure that the rental paid per reel as compared with long features, and their respective costs of production, is neither fair nor calculated to uphold the advance of short subject quality.

We've got to convince the Starevitches that we will work for them when they work for us.

We's got to give short features and long features an equal break.

Speaking Editorially

JOHN C. FLINN, President of Metropolitan Productions and Vice-President and General Manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, told the A. M. P. A. in his speech the other day that the industry is in the throes of a theatre panic.

We do not remember that the word "panic" had been previously applied to the situation by an important official in the business. But, without doubt, Mr. Flinn has hit upon the term which, more accurately than any other, describes what is going on. He pointed out—in one of the most interesting, one of the sanest speeches we have ever heard—what the future probably holds.

One of the things foreseen by Mr. Flinn is some form of centralized distribution. As for the independent producer, he will always be able to market quality product. And the big reward should go, in Mr. Flinn's opinion, not to the exhibitor or the distributor, but to the creator of pictures—the producer himself.

Mr. Flinn's analysis will be found elsewhere in this issue. It is progressive, wise, and, in every way, a significant study of the present feverish situation.

definite "come-back" with the release of "Tumbleweeds," his first picture for United Artists. It is showing this week at the New York Strand and is attracting crowds—glad to renew their acquaintance with the "two-gun" man and to find that his film magic has not decreased one whit, but, on the other hand, has grown in its witchery.

"Tumbleweeds" is a first-rate picture. May it have long and vigorous life at the box-office, as we believe it will. Incidentally, it may be remembered that we prophesied several weeks ago Mr. Hart's triumphant return to the screen. The picture now released bears out that prophecy in every detail.

PATHE comes forward this week with a special announcement of its product for Laugh Month in the form of an attractive twelve-page insert—effective, as the Pathe copy always is, for its direct message and its showmanlike appeal. An interesting array of product is scheduled.

FOR a long time the leaders of national and State exhibitor organizations have stressed the value of the theatre owner as a force in his community. It is an important work—we know of no work more important—this task of getting the individual exhibitor to see that his theatre is far more than a mere business institution, or it can be made so if he will but do it.

And the signs are not wanting that the exhibitor is becoming recognized more and more as a factor in public service. For instance, one of the members of The M. P. T. O. of New Jersey—Walter H. Olden, of the Garden theatre, Princeton—has recently been elected to the State Assembly—the first exhibitor in the State, we believe, to win that honor.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

LASKY'S TWELFTH MILESTONE

TWELVE years ago, Jesse L. Lasky began producing "The Squaw Man" in a barn in Hollywood (yes, that was in the barn-storming days of pictures) on the site of the present Lasky studios covering two city blocks.

The other day, on the 12th anniversary of that first beginning, Lasky entertained 50 representatives of the press and a number of film people in that same barn—but this time the addition of floral decorations and tapestries had made it a thing of beauty.

At the close of the luncheon, Ernest Torrence presented Lasky with a beautiful painting of "Old Ironsides," which is to be the subject of an elaborate picture. In responding, Lasky told something of the struggles of the early days. He received scores of floral tributes and congratulatory telegrams.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

THE long arm of coincidence reached out in remarkable fashion during the filming of "The Johnstown Flood" for Fox by Director Irving Cummings. Cummings was naturally anxious to reproduce this historic disaster as accurately as possible, and went to Santa Cruz, near where he believed he could find a location similar to the Conemaugh Valley in Pennsylvania. Days of search were fruitless, and he confided to Robert Jones, proprietor of the St. George Hotel where he was registered, that he was going to give it up—whereupon, Jones calmly remarked that he had covered the famous flood for the Chicago Daily News, and that he could lead Cummings to the very location which he desired. This he did, and was with the company during the filming of most of the exteriors, insuring absolute accuracy.

Buster Brown, Mary Jane and Tige (otherwise Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Pete) extend a very Merry Christmas to the patrons of Buster Brown comedies, produced by Sern Brothers for Universal.

The building at 1560 Broadway, New York City, where the F. B. O. Home Office organization will be housed on the 16th floor shortly.

Iris Gray, one of the Paramount Junior Stars, has a brand new coiffure, which she will wear in "Glorious Youth," and is nothing if not attractive.

Dorothy Mackaill as "Joanna" in the First National picture of that name introduces something new—knee muffs of mink fur to match her coat.

A NEW MOTHER ARRIVES

ALAS and alack! The old screen conventions are disappearing, one by one. Starting with "A Woman of Paris" and the Lubitsch compositions, our villains are becoming more polished, more suave, more clever and more good humored—until they are practically light comedians. Our heroines, once wide-eyed and golden-curved, and as innocent of the knowledge of evil as the tiny bacilli reared in an incubator, are now permitted to know something of the facts of nature as high in the animal kingdom, say, as the propagation of amoeba princeps, and we have even had one or two heroines who were slightly soiled. In "Lord Jim" we have a hero who fails to rise to his duty in a crisis.

What are things coming to, anyway? Pretty soon we won't know who to applaud and who to hiss. And now comes the "most unkindest cut of all." The screen mother, one of the fixed symbols of screen dramaturgy, bids fair to be metamorphosed along with the other celluloid figures. The be-shawled and be-spectacled mother of children 10 or 12 years old, who appeared to be at least 80 and could barely totter about, is threatened with oblivion. No more, perhaps, will she place the light in the window, while she suffers and suffers—and suffers.

For in "Stella Dallas" there is brought to the screen a new mother—one who is still a young woman, still attractive and still a part of the life around her. Belle Bennett makes Stella as attractive a figure in every way as the heroine. She wears modish clothes, does not hobble about feebly, or peer dimly over spectacles—yet what more appealing, nay, heart-rending, picture of motherhood and mother's sacrifice has the screen shadowed? None that we can recall, and with all respect to the screen mother of yesterday we believe that the newer type, drawn closer to real life, will prove more popular. At any rate, the fact that the screen seems to be discovering that "there is so much bad in the best of us, and so much good in the worst of us," may be a sign that the movies are coming of age.

BOOSTING BUSTER

STERN BROTHERS are registering no little pride and joy over the latest achievement of Buster Brown, their youthful and mischievous comedy character. For last week the bill at the Capitol theatre, New York City, included "Buster's Bust-Up," one of the series, and as everyone knows the short subjects at this theatre are selected with great care. This is the first series which Stern Brothers have produced, but they are understood to be considering others. Surveying the short subject field as a whole, there seems to be quite a well defined trend toward the series with a central character, as against the miscellaneous subjects related only through having the same star. It adds, in a measure, the appeal of the serial to the sure-fire appeal of comedy.

This pleasant Yuletide fireside scene is the O'Malley household. The gentleman holding the baby is Pat O'Malley, the Universal star, who is married and proud of it—and is proud of the little O'Malleys, too.

LAUDING LATTA

C.J. LATTA, the Shenandoah, Iowa, exhibitor who achieved front page fame overnight by advertising for his patrons to remain away because the picture was not up to his hopes, is receiving laudatory comment from all over the United States as a result of his simple, logical (and therefore exceptional) action.

"I believe that in the end you will profit three-fold," one man wrote from Bangor, Me. "The fathers and mothers of your vicinity will rally to your efforts to raise the standards of pictures," wrote the superintendent of the St. Joseph, Mo., Humane Society. Manager Charles Moning of the Colonial theatre, Plymouth, Mass., declared that he, too, had found that the policy of honest advertising paid. Mrs. H. B. Rice, amusement inspector of San Antonio, Texas, congratulated Latta warmly, while another letter from St. Louis said, "It is honest and will win, and make you friends who will be loyal to you and build up your business and make it an even greater success."

Although the next exhibitor to try this strictly honest advertising policy probably won't win national publicity, he will win a lot of friends and confidence in his own community, which is what counts the most.

Hal Roach's rascals appearing in Pathe's "Our Gang" comedies devote their holiday efforts to helping provide a Merry Christmas for other and less fortunate youngsters.

VISITING THE VOLGA

THEODORE ROBERTS, who is happily reported well on the way to recovery after a long illness that has kept him away from pictures largely since "The Ten Commandments," was a recent visitor on the Russian sets at the De Mille Studio, where C. B. is at work on his current personally directed production, "The Volga Boatman."

Roberts, with his cigar and his loveable irascibility, his touches of comedy and real sense of character shading, have been missing from the screen all too long, and it will be welcome news when his return is announced.

A TRIO OF STARS

THREE releases, two features and a short subject, came in for special mention this week by the National Board of Review in handing out the asterisks. The first merit star went to "Three Faces East," Producers' film version of the Anthony Paul Kelly stage melodrama of spies and such. The second was awarded to Robert F. Kane's production for First National, "Bluebeard's Seven Wives." The third and last went to a subject which has been capturing the little asterisks almost as frequently as released—Pathe Review No. 52.

Alice Joyce, Paramount player, like all proverbial parents preparing gifts for their children, has a lot of fun playing with the toys before putting them under the tree as a gift straight from Santa Claus' workshop.

THESE ENGAGEMENT RUMORS

CLARA BOW and Donald Keith, members of the "Dancing Mothers" cast at the Paramount Long Island studio, are much perturbed over reports of their engagement, which, through someone's careless oversight, crept into the daily press. Both have received, according to the ever veracious P. A., indignant telegrams from their Boy Friend and Girl Friend, respectively, in Hollywood, wanting to know what it's all about. And both want it known that there is nothing whatever to justify such a report.

Which reminds us of an occasion, perhaps two years ago,

Olive Hasbrouck, Universal leading woman, should spend a very Merry Christmas, for the past year has advanced her far along the path that leads to stellar fame.

when one of our most charming young screen actresses and her leading man, now a stage star, stood around the studio on a rainy afternoon discussing the temporary scarcity of publicity, when they perceived a lady interviewer approaching.

"I'll tell you what!" said the c. y. s. a. to her l. m. "Let's tell Lulu that we're engaged and maybe she'll give up a story."

"Lulu," which we use because it happens not to be her name, did give them a story—and it went all over the country, front pages and all. And then they had to deny it.

But that, of course, like the G. & S. flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la, has nothing to do with the case.

PLANS EFFICIENCY PLUS ART

F. W. MURNAU, Germany's directorial ace, who is to be loaned by UFA to Fox Films, is coming to Hollywood not with the intention or expectation of bringing something entirely new, but to make a picture or two with superior American actors and equipment, backed by superior American organization, says Hermann Bing, Murnau's assistant and technical director, who is now at the Fox Film studio, preparing for the director's coming.

"Murnau's intention," says Mr. Bing, "is to try to make pictures which will please the American theatre patron—commercial successes because of their artistry. He will bring his Central European training, experience, knowledge, and his individual originality to Hollywood because here is assembled the pick of the world's actors, the best of the world's motion picture equipment; here, within fifty miles of the studios, is scenery duplicating any in the world and behind it all the best type of film organization.

"Here in America you have an expression 'Turn a man inside out.' That comes near to expressing Murnau's intention, but not quite. He aims to turn a man's mind, his heart, his soul inside out and then put him on the screen for other men to see. To Murnau, no man is good, none is bad. All are fifty-fifty; good and bad, and this is what he tries to show in pictures.

"To this Cinema melting pot and its background, Murnau will bring the ideas and ideals of Central Europe, different entirely from those of America because of the psychic morbidity that has come into the depression that followed the war. You in America who are so busy with the more practical ideas that have brought material prosperity, may not realize the awful difference between your land and the countries of Europe. But over there a man can't escape subjective thinking.

"To put this subjective thought on the Screen, to open up the mind, the heart, the soul—that is Murnau's aim. Several European stories with this intention have been submitted to Fox Films. One or maybe two will be selected.

"The story or stories chosen will be 'painted' in motion pictures—that is reproduced as the painter reproduces—not as the photographer. In accomplishing this Murnau will do nothing spectacular. There will be no elaborate sets, no big scenes, no splurge, no blustering effects.

"The story will be told in the pictures, not in the titles, as Murnau uses titles only when absolutely necessary, because he holds that a man can reproduce his ideas in films just as another man can express his ideas in paints and oils or in marble or in the printed page.

"I doubt that Murnau would undertake the production of an American story. Your manner of thinking is so different from that of Europe that it would be difficult for him to absorb your viewpoints and for this reason I believe that he will adhere to his expressed intention to return to Europe and stay there when his work with Fox Films is completed."

Ufa Deal Draws American Film Representatives to Berlin

Trip "Merely Informatory," S. R. Kent Announces

(Special Cable to MOTION PICTURE NEWS)

Berlin, December 22

Sidney R. Kent, General Manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in Berlin in connection with the pending Ufa deal, stated to your correspondent today that the purpose of his trip was merely "informatory".

Carl Laemmle, President of Universal, when interviewed, said he hoped to settle the details of the deal and close it shortly on behalf of his company.

TWO weeks ago Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, announced that his firm had closed a deal with Ufa whereby it would loan about $3,600,000 to Ufa for 10 years at eight and one-quarter per cent. interest, receiving in return valuable concessions in the distribution and exhibition of Universal pictures in Germany. A few days later he sailed for Europe on the Leviathan to close the final negotiations.

On the same ship were S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky, Leopold Friedman of Metro-Goldwyn, and others, all possessing a keen interest in anything vitally affecting the German market—second only to England as the richest source of revenue abroad.

The first intimation of the trend of affairs came in a cablegram to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, from its Berlin correspondent, a man intimately familiar with the situation, stating that it was rumored there that Kent and Friedman had succeeded in delaying consummation of the deal.

A dispatch to the New York Sun indicated that Kent and Friedman had been joined by John Graham, the Famous head in England, Herman Wobber, of Famous; Ike Blumenthal, general European representative of F.P.-L.; Albert Aronson of M.-G.-M.; Sam Rachman, and others, showing the high importance of the situation.

The same dispatch stated that it was considered likely that the final papers would be signed at any moment, presumably by Universal and Ufa, but the possibility of the deal taking another turn was seen by several observers.

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, told MOTION PICTURE NEWS that he had received no direct advices concerning the final signing of the papers in the deal.

Before leaving the U. S., Laemmle received copies of the initial agreement, signed by Ufa officials and which needed only his signature, presumably, to become binding on both parties. This agreement, however, was incomplete in several respects, a number of details remaining to be worked out, and it is in connection with these details, apparently, that a possible hitch may have developed.

According to men in New York closely in touch with the situation, the contract sent to Universal was signed by Erich Pommer, who, rumor has declared, may be succeeded by Dr. Kalmann, former head of Ufa—an event which might also have some bearing on the situation.

In order to make plain the situation which exists—and which may have been cleared up before this is read—it is necessary to review something of the events leading up to it—much of it heretofore unpublished in this country.

Ufa, from rather modest beginnings, has grown since the war to be the outstanding German company by a considerable margin. Like nearly all German corporations, the laws passed in connection with the paying off of indebtedness with depreciated currency made it possible for Ufa to "clean the slate" and start fresh in a most advantageous financial position at the close of that period.

Dr. Kalmann, the head of the company at that time, is a shrewd and resourceful financier, and has frequently been compared to Adolph Zukor as an executive. Under his sagacious management the company weathered a trying period and expanded its activities through amalgamation with other firms, notably Decla-Bioscop, a strong producing company.

Ufa pictures, at that time, were made at a moderate cost and earned a reasonable profit despite generally unfavorable conditions.

One of the men brought in by the union with Decla-Bioscop was Erich Pommer, a production executive of considerable reputation, young and aggressive. Finally the Ufa board of directors decided that the time had come when the company must expand into the world market, and must produce pictures worthy of that market. Erich Pommer seemed the logical man to carry out that aim, and he was accordingly put in charge of production and of all expansion outside of Germany.

He instituted a production program of some 36 features, to be produced on a magnitude then undreamed of in Germany—pictures to reach a world market and, especially, the United States. Toward that end a branch office was opened in New York City under the direction of F. Wynne-Jones.

This led to the sale of "The Last Laugh" to Universal, and to preliminary showings of "Siegfried." Pommer, Fritz Lang, the director of "Siegfried," and Dr. Kalmann visited New York and Los Angeles to observe American conditions at first hand.

At this time Ufa was indirectly financed by the Deutsche Bank, virtually a government institution, and under the further protection of a friendly Kontingent which limited the amount of importation into Germany, conditions seemed generally favorable.

Had American release been obtained on a substantial amount of the Ufa product, all would presumably have gone well, but if reports current until recently in the German press are to be believed, the elaborate production program has led to a temporary financial stringency, although the assets of the company are large and the general financial position absolutely sound. It became necessary, however, to obtain additional funds to carry on the production program, and to continue the active theatre building schedule in Central Europe.

Various American companies were approached as much as six or seven months ago with the object of negotiating a deal similar to that now pending with Universal. These companies, however, did not regard the deal as sufficiently attractive, or sufficiently practical, to warrant further consideration. Wall Street banking firms are also understood to have been approached.

During Carl Laemmle's visit to Germany the past summer, the same proposition was discussed with him, and an offer made. Scores of cablegrams were exchanged between Berlin and Universal City, leading finally to the agreement which brought Laemmle to New York and thence to Germany.

As soon as announcement was made that Universal was about to close with Ufa a deal which would give the American company virtual control of the export business with Germany, the events set forth in the opening paragraphs of this article followed in rapid sequence.

It is, on the whole, a highly interesting situation and a most significant indication of the importance assigned to the foreign market today. The board of directors of Ufa is scheduled to meet on December 30th, and final steps will doubtless be taken by that time at the very latest, and more probably somewhat sooner.

The financial statement of Ufa, just issued, shows a healthy condition on the whole, a six per cent. dividend being declared.

It may or may not be significant to chronicle the fact that Famous Players is this week showing Ufa's "Siegfried" in its Rialto theatre, New York City.

Poli To Retire As Active Head: L. M. Sagal To Direct Circuit, Is Report

A REPORT from New Haven states that Sylvester Z. Poli will retire as active head of the Poli Theatrical Enterprises and that L. M. Sagal, present general manager and a big stock holder in the company, will succeed to the directorship of the circuit. No formal announcement has been made; the sources from which the report emanated claim that definite plans to bring about this change have been made.

It is understood that O. C. Edwards, present manager of the Palace Theatre in New Haven will succeed Mr. Sagal as general manager and that James F. Powers will be transferred from the Bijou to the Palace to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Powers' promotion.

During the past year there have been many rumors that the Poli circuit was about to be sold, Famous Players-Lasky being one of the organizations which is known to have negotiated for the purchase of the chain.

Mr. Sagal, who is also Treasurer of the M. P. T. O. A., has steadily assumed more responsibility in connection with the organization during the past few years, and his succession to the active direction of the circuit is regarded a logical step.

Celebrities To Attend Dinner

12 Immortals of Industry Nominated by
A. M. P. A. to be Guests at Naked Truth

THE committee in charge of the Annual Naked Truth Dinner, to be held in February in New York, of the A. M. P. A. are directing their efforts toward making the coming affair the greatest in the history of the organization in plans that are being worked out for the event.

An announcement from the committee this week states that the "12 immortals of the industry" nominated by the A. M. P. A. will be guests at the dinner. These men, whom the organization named as the most representative men who stand as the ideals in the progress, growth and expansion of the industry are: Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky, Will Hays, Marcus Loew, William Fox, Roxy Rothafel, D. W. Griffith, Joe Schenck, Carl Laemmle, Sidney Kent, Dick Rowland and Sam Katz.

A large number of the leading stars of the screen will attend the Naked Truth Dinner. Requests for tables have already been received from eighteen of the best known stars.

At the special meeting of the A. M. P. A. last week, it was unanimously voted to have no speakers and no speech making, thus this year's affair will far eclipse any of the former ones in many ways. Instead of one orchestra there will be two famous orchestras of New York City with music and dancing continuously.

A timely suggestion is offered that all those who wish to be present at this year's party, communicate immediately with Charles Einfeld, 365 Madison Avenue, New York.

Admission Tax Is Unchanged

House Adopts Committee Recommendations on Motion Picture Shows

ADOPTING the committee recommendations for the admission tax as submitted, the House on December 18 passed the revenue bill, under which no change is made in the present rate of one cent on each ten cents of admission in excess of 50 cents, with the adoption of the exemption from all tax of the spoken drama.

A valiant effort was made by Representative Griffin of New York to strike out the tax in its entirety on the ground that it was a burden upon the public. He declared that it requires a small army of Treasury employees to collect the tax, it could not be collected with facility and fraud was easily possible.

Mr. Griffin was supported by Representative Rainey of Illinois, who pointed out that when Queen Victoria died and a period of mourning was decreed for two weeks, during which all places of amusement should close, it was found that the populace was getting so unruly that after 48 hours the order was rescinded. It is an "emotional outlet," he declared, which should be made as free to the people as possible.

Admission taxes should be left as a source of revenue to the individual states, it was asserted by Representative Moore of Virginia in speaking in favor of repeal. The tax systems in many states are unsatisfactory, they are in urgent need of revenues, and there is no tax that can be more readily levied by a state seeking new avenues by which they may escape from present methods.

Favoritism of wealth on the part of the ways and means committee was charged by Representative Lozier of Missouri, declaring that the admission tax was a war measure which should not be continued in time of peace.

The House, however, rejected the amendment, and also an amendment offered by Representative McKeown of Oklahoma, increasing the exemption from 50 cents to $1.50 and making the admission tax on amounts in excess of that figure two cents on each ten.

Cleveland May Reinstate Sam Bullock

Sam Bullock will be reinstated as field representative of the M. P. T. O. A. of Ohio, if the members of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association have anything to do with it. At a meeting of the Association last Tuesday, a petition was voted, to be signed by its members, and to be circulated among the exhibitors of the state, asking that Bullock be returned to his former position in the state association as field representative, which position he held for several years and until last summer.

The Cleveland exhibitors expressed their appreciation of the organization work Bullock has done, in the city, in the state and in the national exhibitor association. Bullock was instrumental in forming the present local association. He has fought for local and state exhibitor rights.

Gregory and McKay Join N. Y. Inst. of Photography

The New York Institute of Photography has added to its staff Carl L. Gregory, F. R. P. S., and Herbert C. McKay, M. R. P. S. Mr. Gregory is widely known as an authority upon motion pictures and the author of a widely read text-book dealing with that work. Herbert C. McKay, M. R. P. S., is also widely known as an authority upon motion pictures and the author of the first text-book ever published dealing exclusively with the amateur aspects of the art. Mrs. Gregory and Mr. McKay collaborated in designing the new motion picture camera recently introduced by the New York Institute and it is understood that they will collaborate further in the preparation of a series of up-to-the-minute text-books dealing with the latest advances in the world of the motion picture.

Walrath May Be Named On N. Y. Commission

IF anyone is appointed to the New York State Motion Picture Commission to succeed George H. Cobb, whose term of office expires on January 1, it will probably be John H. Walrath, of Syracuse, the retiring Mayor of that city. It is said on good authority that Governor Alfred E. Smith has tendered Mr. Walrath a $7,500 place on the Commission, but with the understanding, however, that there is a good likelihood of the Commission being wiped out of existence not so very many months hence. Walrath was at the State Capitol in Albany, one day last week, and had a long conference with Governor Smith on the proposition. No announcement has yet been made as to his decision.

Stanley Stock Increased to a Million Shares

THE new financing plan of the Stanley Co. of America, providing for an increase in authorized capital stock from 100,000 shares Class A and 60,000 shares Class B to 1,000,000 shares of no par value, was ratified by the stockholders at a meeting held in Philadelphia last week.

Two shares of the new stock will be given in exchange for each share of Class A and Class B stock. A stock dividend of 10 per cent in new stock will be declared payable on January 11.

There will be 334,306½ shares of the new stock outstanding when the new plan becomes effective.

Theatre Panic Analyzed by Flinn

P. D. C. Vice-President Makes Interesting Speech Before A. M. P. A.
on Major Problems of Industry

THE motion picture industry is passing through one of its most critical eras, in the opinion of John C. Flinn, vice-president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, who gave an interesting, if not altogether conclusive, analysis of some of the present problems of exhibitors and producers, in an address last week before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York. Mr. Flinn, a former president of the A. M. P. A. was the guest of the association at one of its weekly luncheons. Between sixty and seventy persons were present.

Mr. Flinn read an excerpt from a recent statement made by Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the M. P. T. O. A., in which Mr. Seider stated that exhibitors who have built up enterprises of strength in different sections of the country are looking dubiously into the future on account of the rapidity with which national producing and distributing organizations are building up their own exhibiting circuits in opposition to established theatres which heretofore had consistently given representation to the firms which were now becoming active competitors.

"It is no secret to men engaged in motion pictures in its various activities that there is at present a panic among theatre owners," said Mr. Flinn. "Individuals and corporations which have built up great theatre enterprises in the past decade, are face to face with the problem of whether they shall continue to operate their business independent of direct affiliation with one or more of the larger national distributing organizations. With scores of productions of the calibre and cost entitling them to first run representation everywhere, it has become incumbent upon independent theatre operators to provide adequate outlet for all the larger companies, or face the alternative of having to meet exhibitor competition from the companies themselves. A great deal of bitterness has been caused by producer acquisition of theatres, but bitterness will not solve the problem. The facts are: that the business itself is in a stage of evolution, and the process is beginning to pinch in quarters

"Duplication of eight national distributing organizations in America with the costs of maintenance of scores of branch offices in principal cities is a costly system for the industry to support. National distributing organizations yearly cost between thirty and forty million dollars to maintain. Is there a remedy for this heavy burden in centralized theatre booking control? It is not unlikely that eventually motion pictures will be booked throughout the country through some such impartial mechanism as that established in the vaudeville business by the Keith United Booking Offices. Four or five national booking agencies may be the outgrowth of the present tendencies.

"So far as I know no one has come forward with any solution. Perhaps Mr. Zukor and Mr. Katz have a solution but it is not generally known.

"There is one forbidding menace which faces the independent theatre operator who sells part of his enterprise to one of the national companies on the theory that by so doing he guarantees his theatre with attractions for the future. He must not lose sight of the fact that the variety entertainment offered to the public has been the principal cause of his past success and any affiliation which may exclude good pictures from his screen no matter from what source they may be obtained, is a step backward and one inviting commercial failure.

"The one division in this business which must be fostered and supported is the producing department. However tightly theatre control may be vested in the hands of one or more great theatre circuits, there is no guarantee in that direction that good pictures will be forthcoming, just because the theatre circuit is affiliated or owned by a large producing company. The pendulum of production sways too rapidly. Everyone in the business recognizes this fact in the history of the past few years. A short time ago by virtue of a series of productions like "Ponjola," "Black Oxen," "Flaming Youth" and "Sea Hawk," First National was regarded as the outstanding company of the business. Another season Paramount held the lead with "Covered Wagon," "Ten Commandments" and its starring vehicles for Swanson, Meighan and Negri. During the past season the business has heard more of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures than of any other company. "Unholy Three," "Merry Widow," "The Big Parade" and "Ben Hur," which is on the threshold of public exhibition, are responsible for the present vogue of that company.

"It may be perfectly feasible to control the outlets of exhibition by owning brick and mortar, but the history of the business reveals the impossibility of controlling the brains and the inspiration of production. And production is the food upon which the industry thrives.

"Let that theatre owner at present worried over the future, take clear counsel with himself, therefore, before he casts his life's investment into business association with any one of the companies. Good motion picture entertainment will be available from sources other than from one or two companies. Like all panics, the present nervousness is due more to unsound thinking than to unsound entertainment.

"The present time demands steadfastness and courage, not capitalization.

"Our own company is dedicated to one purpose—to make the best pictures possible; confident of our ability to find representation before the public of meritorious entertainment."

F. G. Bradford Passes Away in Los Angeles

F. G. Bradford, vice-president of Lee-Bradford Corporation, passed away in Los Angeles last week. Bradford had had little to do with the company's affairs for some time and had spent the past four years in California because of ill health. He was about fifty years of age.

Peck Wants Producers For Canada

RAY S. PECK, director of the Canadian Government motion picture studio at Ottawa, Ontario, who was recently quoted as being anxious to see Canada adopt the film quota plan as suggested in Great Britain, declares his statements were misunderstood. In a later statement, Peck says: "I am not particularly interested in a film quota system for Canada at the present time; I am more interested in encouraging moving picture producers to come to Canada where they can obtain new locations, new scenic backgrounds for stories and also the opportunity of making motion pictures that would receive the advantage of benefits to be derived through having been made in the British Empire."

Universal Chain Signs R. T. Newton

THE new Universal Chain Theatres, Inc., has signed R. T. Newton in an executive capacity and he has left New York for an extensive trip through the South, during which he will look over location sites for new theatres and investigate potential theatre purchases.

Newton recently resigned from Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, after having been connected with the S. A. Lynch Enterprises and the Southern Enterprises for eight years. During his experience with Famous Players he managed various groups of theatres in cities throughout the south.

Lasky Signs Marshall Neilan to Produce Series of Paramount Specials

JESSE L. LASKY has signed Marshall Neilan to a long term contract, under the conditions of which the director will make a series of special productions for Paramount. His first picture will be a big special, the story of which is now being worked out. He probably will start production on this the middle of February and the picture will be released next Fall.

Following that production Neilan will direct Betty Bronson in a picture of the type that has made him famous as the director of many of the big Mary Pickford successes. The story has already been selected.

Neilan in his productions will have back of him the resources of the Paramount production department and the help of the producing organization in the Lasky studio.

Griffith Talks to Canadians

Hints Great Britain Should Have Its Own Motion Picture Industry

AGENTLE hint that Great Britain should have its own moving picture industry was thrown out by David Wark Griffith when he gave an address as the guest of honor at the Canadian Club in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on December 14, before a crowd of 450 prominent business men of Canada, including many high officials of the moving picture business in the Dominion.

Mr. Griffith, the famous director, emphasized the importance of the moving picture as an international factor and declared that the pictures were a great international advertiser and ambassador.

"In war and in peace it is a key industry," Mr. Griffith said. "I would go so far as to say that no great country of the future can control territories throughout the world if it does not possess a great moving picture industry. It is as of great importance to national commerce as banks and steel industries. No other business propaganda can compare with it."

"We may brag about being citizens of the United States and I am proud of it," continued Mr. Griffith, "but if I did not realize the importance of British thoughts and ideals and feel deeply when Great Britain is threatened I would indeed be a fool. There is no denying that, at present, she is threatened with radical ideas and they must be fought. What better work for the motion picture than to speak sweetly and clearly to the world against Sovietism, the deadliest foe of the English-speaking race?"

There were two great nations, both English-speaking, to him—the United States and Canada—which were bound by self interest and mutual interest to continue friendly toward each other. Dwelling on the evil of intolerance, Mr. Griffith declared that this feeling might be tolerated in view of the fact that ultimately it is fairly certain to bring about tolerance. He protested against the restraints which were being placed against motion pictures when literary productions were allowed so much toleration.

Noted at the head table were J. C. Brady, proprietor of the Madison Theatre, Toronto, and president for several years of the Ontario M. P. T. O.; N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, and Ray Peck, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, Ottawa.

Kansas City to Enforce Ban on Standees

Kansas City exhibitors were given something to ponder over this week when it was announced by Walter A. Besecke, superintendent of buildings, that the city ordinance prohibiting persons in theatres from standing in passageways to aisles would be strictly enforced. The ordinance heretofore has not been enforced.

"If the interpretation of the ordinance means merely that passageways are to be left open, we expect to comply with that, but if it means that persons will not be allowed to stand in foyers or other places away from the aisles, then we will oppose such a measure," said R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri.

Bill Would Give Elmira Sunday Pictures

Alderman John B. Sheeche has introduced an ordinance which provides for the legalizing of Sunday motion pictures in Elmira, New York. The common council will soon consider the measure, which, it is understood, will be fought by the Ministers' Association of the city.

Seattle Board of Trade Elects Officers

New officers of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle were elected at a meeting of that organization held a short time ago, and will hold office during the year 1926. Installation ceremonies will be held this month, at which time the present officials will give way to Jack J. Sullivan, manager of the Fox Film exchange, president; William J. Drummond, manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange, vice-president; J. A. Gage, manager of the Educational Film exchange, secretary and treasurer; and Al Rosenberg of De Luxe and Fred G. Sliter of First National, trustees.

Washington State Gets Censor Bill

SENATOR CHRISTENSEN of Washington took advantage of the last day for the introduction of new bills at the Olympia session to advance a measure providing for the creation of a state censorship commission of five to be appointed by the Governor, with full power to pass upon all films introduced into the state.

Objectable matter provided in the bill would include: films glorifying or justifying crime, display of murder or violence, obscenity or inciting to crime, prejudice to any religion or race, disrespect to parents or home life. Violations would be met by a $500 fine, a sixty day jail sentence or both, and the confiscation of prints.

The commission is to consist of two women, two college professors and one drawn at large. Each would serve from one to five years and have the power to determine the method of assessing distributors on a basis sufficient to meet administrative expenses.

"Dark House" Insurance for Mid-West

THE Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., a Kansas City corporation, has established in the Kansas City territory among the small town houses what is to be known as "dark house" insurance. Many times during an extremely cold period when blizzards raged, small town theatres have been stranded without a picture for the night and patrons turned away. For $7.50 the Midwest concern will allow the exhibitor to retain a feature picture in his possession for a month, to be used in case of emergency. Although in its infancy here, the plan is proving a popular one.

Two more Missouri theatres have come under producer control—the Princess and Kennedy theatres of Kirksville, Mo., which have been acquired by the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc.

The Princess seats about 800, while the Kennedy, a new house, will seat about 1,000, according to C. E. Rhoden, manager of Midwest. Jack Moore, former exhibitor of St. Joseph, Mo., will manage the theatre.

Fox Buys Interest In Ascher Circuit

19 Theatres in Chicago Chain, Several in Competition with B & K;
Famous Will Build New House in Denver; Other Deals Reported

AN interest in the Ascher Bros. chain, numbering about 19 neighborhood theatres in Chicago, has been acquired by Fox Theatres Corp., the newly formed theatre organization of Fox Film Corporation. It is reported that the downtown theatre organization of Fox Film Corporation be carried on as an enterprise independent of the affiliation with Aschers.

Since many of the houses in the Ascher string are in direct competition with Balabar & Katz theatres, many observers declare that the move by Fox narrows the lines of conflict between these two interests in Chicago's film theatre situation, with Fox contesting the alleged ambition of B & K to dominate the situation.

In Denver, Paramount has made what seems to be a definite announcement of plans for a new million dollar theatre. One of the striking features of the plans is the fact that the building will be located away from the present first run theatre district, Curtis Street. The new house will be at Sixteenth Street and Glenarm Place.

The Paramount announcement is the fourth proposing plans for new theatres to be erected in Denver during 1926. Plans have already been announced for the new Aladdin Theatre, a $300,000.00 structure which will be placed under construction at Colfax Avenue and Race Street on January first by Harry E. Huffman. A new three thousand seat Orpheum Theatre will be constructed on a down-town location. There will be a new two thousand five hundred seat

Kansas City Approves All-Comedy Bill

THE all-comedy bill seems to have become all the rage in the Kansas City territory since the successful experiment of Walter Fenny at his Best theatre, Parsons, Kas., recently. About twenty-five theatres have contracted for all-comedy bills in the near future, it is said.

South Denver Theatre at First Avenue and Broadway, this being under the direction and construction of the D. & R. Western Enterprises Company already operating a chain of theatres in Denver and Colorado.

Theatre reports from the Pacific coast indicate that West Coast Theatres, Inc., will build a theatre in Phoenix, Arizona, a move which will bear out rumors current for some time that West Coast would branch out into new territory. The report states that A. L. Gore recently visited Phoenix for the purpose of negotiating for a site on which a $750,000 theatre and office building will be erected by West Coast. This development will be watched with interest owing to the fact that the theatre situation in Phoenix is now practically in the control of Rickards and Nace.

It was reported during the week that Loew's, Inc., has acquired property in Stamford, Conn., and will build a 2,500 seat theatre on the site. The property is located on Main Street, a location which will bring this proposed house into competition with the Palace which Charles Vuono, owner of the Strand in Stamford, is now building.

The Grand Theatre, Chester, a 1200-seat house which was operated for more than 12 years by Gilbert Bernstein, has been purchased by the Stanley Company. The Stanley Company will take immediate possession and will make extensive improvements. As the Stanley Company now owns the Washington, the largest motion picture theatre in Chester, it will now have practical control of the first run houses in that city.

Famous Players is reported to have acquired several business properties on Penn Street, near Sixth, in Reading, Pa., for $600,000, with the ultimate intention of erecting a theatre there. The properties were owned by the Reading National Bank which declined to confirm or deny the report.

Famous is preparing to raze the Peter Blow Building, on the site of which a new theatre will be erected in Knoxville, Tenn. Tenants in the building have been served with notification to vacate.

According to a report from Muncie, Ind., Fitzpatrick and McElroy have completed negotiations for the Strand theatre there. The house was owned by Leonard Sowar, who will become general manager of the Muncie interests of Fitzpatrick and McElroy, whose other holdings there embrace the Columbia, Star and Lyric.

Jersey Body Backs Local Option Bill

State Theatre Owners Hold Eight Hour Session At Trenton; Clause To Prevent Conflict With Church Hours

A LOCAL option "open Sunday" bill similar to that which was successful in New York and containing a clause providing that no theatres would function on the Sabbath in competition with the regular hours devoted to church services, will be introduced in the New Jersey Legislature by the Theatre Owners of that state.

The legislative committee of the New Jersey M. P. T. O. was instructed to introduce the bill by the Board of Directors of the organization at a meeting held in Trenton, December 16th.

The meeting, which occupied an eight-hour session, was addressed by former Governor Stokes, who approved the move to legalize Sunday picture shows and commended the picture industry. "You men are entitled to recognition," he said. "You are an advocate for good. You are an educational and moral force. You have nothing to apologize for."

The Honorable Walter H. Olden, a Princeton theatre owner who was recently elected to the New Jersey Legislature, assured the directors that their fight of years against the Blue Laws in New Jersey is rapidly nearing victory.

That the theatre owners of the entire country will soon be emancipated from political dominance in such things as Blue Laws, was declared by President Joseph M. Seider, in

Marin Back After Tour Through West

NED MARIN, Western sales manager for First National returned during the week from a five weeks tour during which he visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Des Moines and Detroit.

Marin was impressed with the personnel in the First National exchanges and with the enthusiasm they showed over the product of the company for the coming year. He found every one working at full capacity to make an outstanding success of First National Month.

making his report to the meeting. Mr. Seider urged the necessity for harmony in the entire industry, asserting that the salvation of the theatre owner reposes not only in his state organization, but in the national organization as well.

It developed at the meeting that the business of the Jersey organization has increased to such an extent that monthly meetings of the Board of Directors may not suffice to dispose of the matters with which it is concerned and that in the near future the directorate may be divided into several Administrative Committees, which may meet several times a week, so that all details of the organization may be given thorough consideration.

An outstanding event at the Trenton meeting was the report of J. B. Fox that he had collected over $1,000 for state and national dues in Camden County during the past month. Mr. Fox reported that never before had he found the local organization so highly regarded.

Other resolutions included one providing that the organization will never make a membership affiliation with the M. P. P. D. Association. In this respect, however, the point was emphasized that New Jersey will continue to function and co-operate for the common welfare of both producer and theatre owner.

The association also went on record as opposed to the bill to be introduced by Congressman Randolph Perkins authorizing collection of a tax by music publishers in excess of what the association believes to be a fair profit.

The next meeting will take place at Morristown, when the directors will be the guests of National President R. F. Woodhull and I. A. Roth.

"Beau Geste" Will Be Herbert Brenon's Next Paramount Production

HERBERT BRENON will produce "Beau Geste," from the novel of that title by P. C. Wren, as his next work for Paramount, it was announced this week by Jesse L. Lasky. The production will be filmed in Paris, Marseilles and the Algerian Sahara, the exact locations of the original story, which deals with the French Foreign Legion.

Mr. Brenon will sail January 16 for abroad. He will be accompanied by his mother and with her will visit Ireland before going to Paris to start his production unit, which will be composed of about thirty persons, including players and technical men, will sail on January 30, and will join Mr. Brenon in Paris. The cast has not been definitely decided upon as yet.

In announcing the production of this work under Mr. Brenon's direction, Mr. Lasky said: "We expect to make of 'Beau Geste' one of the greatest and most colorful pictures of its sort ever filmed," Mr. Lasky explained. "For that reason we have considered it imperative that the scenes be made actually in the places visualized by the author, so that both the locale and the atmosphere may be faithfully reproduced."

While the major sequences will be made in the Sahara, a number of scenes will be made also in Paris and Marseilles. Those in Paris will be street views and scenes about the Foreign Legion recruiting bureau. The Marseilles scenes will record the waterfront and panoramas of the harbor. The African scenes will be made in Sidi Bel Abes, Foreign Legion headquarters in the Sahara Desert.

Cooperation for Laugh Month

Metropolitan Newspapers are Devoting Much Space to Forthcoming Project

WHOLE-HEARTED cooperation in boosting National Laugh Month is reported on the part of newspaper editors, columnists and cartoonists in various parts of the country. Column after column has been devoted to this unique idea, and, as January 1st, the beginning of National Laugh Month, approaches, an increased number of newspapers are falling into line behind the drive.

Several of the metropolitan dailies in New York City have been especially enthusiastic over Laugh Month. Arthur Brisbane, the noted Hearst newspaper editorial writer, has given it significant space. The New York World is an ardent supporter of the Laugh Month idea. Heywood Brown and F. P. A. both have devoted an entire column to the idea, in the World, while similar Laugh Month copy has appeared in the N. Y. Evening World. Frank Sullivan, feature writer of the Evening World devoted a column of his space to the drive, Palmer Smith gave it the better part of his section early this week, and Haenigsen, the Evening World cartoonist came through with a witty brace of pictures.

In the Atlantic Journal recently, John T. Boifeuillet, the widely read Southern columnist, devoted his entire column to National Laugh Month, using the name of the drive as a head for his column. The Los Angeles Examiner is to print a double-page spread of Laugh Month material soon.

Reports from other sections of the country indicate an equal interest in the Laugh Month propaganda. This valuable publicity will reach its climax during the early days of Laugh Month and will be of great value to exhibitors. Laugh Month actually is being "sold" to the moving picture public in advance, thereby giving every exhibitor a ready-made patronage for his concentrated Short Comedy programs during January.

Penalties are provided for infringement and in the case of the infringement by motion pictures of an undramatized or non-dramatic work, if unintentional, damages to be recovered by the copyright owner are not to exceed $100; in the case of a motion picture infringement of a copyrighted dramatic work under such conditions the damages to be recovered shall be not less than $250 nor more than $5,000.

In the case of deliberate infringement, provision is made for restraining injunctions and the payment of such damages to the owner of the right infringed as he may have suffered due to the infringement, as well as all the profits which the infringer shall have made from such infringement, and the owner of the infringed right has the option of permitting the court to assess damages between $250 and $5,000 or may collect, in the case of a motion picture infringement, $100 for the first and $50 for every subsequent infringing exhibition. The infringing films also are to be confiscated.

The bill reserves to the owners of musical copyrights the sole right to broadcast or play their compositions in public, or to permit such broadcasting or public performance.

Swings Fine Campaign On Title "Cobra"

Repetition of picture title was the keynote of "Cobra" campaign conducted by Manager G. E. Brown of Loew's Palace, Memphis.

This was started a week in advance with a special billing campaign in the form of one letter tack cards. Five hundred of these were placed in the downtown and residential sections of the city, each card carrying one large letter of the five in the word "Cobra." Printed yellow on black, and tacked so as to read in sequence as one rode or walked down a street, they were conspicuous at long distances.

Five days prior to opening date, this was followed up with a teaser campaign in the local newspapers. Each daily ad was headed with a word corresponding to a letter in the photoplay's title. Last day's ad of the series carried an announcement to the effect that to each of the first ten persons sending in mounted ads in proper order, the theatre would award a pair of seats to the opening of "Cobra."

The possibility that Publix Theatres, Inc., the Paramount chain of houses, may have its own newsreel service was seen in rumors circulated this week, which further declared that Courtland Smith, of the Hays organization, was to head the new topical film service.

Smith, when interviewed, declined to comment on the report in any way, neither denying nor confirming it. He is a newspaperman of wide experience.

There have been several previous reports that Famous would form a short subject department, with a newsreel as a possibility in connection with it, but in this instance the projected service is said to be under consideration solely for the Publix houses.

Owing to the popular success scored with the first performance over radio of the orchestra at Loew's Palace, Memphis, Tenn., under the direction of Frank Bracciante, this organization has been booked as a feature broadcasting attraction each Friday night on the "Midnight Frolic" program from station WMC.

The orchestra is composed of thirteen musicians, the majority of whom play more than one kind of instrument. They have an extensive repertoire, including arias from grand operas, musical comedies, and the popular dance music of today.

The debut program of the orchestra was varied, and of such merit as to evoke a flood of telephone calls, telegrams and letters, all of which were highly complimentary to the theatre and its musical organization.

WITH the arrival at the west coast studios of J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production for F. B. It is planned to group together at least twelve Gold Bond specials on the 1926-27 program. There will also be star series features starring Fred Thomson, Evelyn

The reason advanced for these more elaborate productions is the increased popularity gained by the star during the past year.

Lasky Completes Big Details

Extends Pola Negri's Contract and Reorganizes Coast Production Staff

BEFORE departing Hollywood for New York, Jesse L. Lasky completed a number of matters that will have an important bearing on Paramount production in the future. Not the least important of these was the signing of Pola Negri to a contract extending her alliance to the organization for two years longer.

One of the most far-reaching moves of Lasky was the reorganization of the executive staff at the West Coast studio, in which Hector Turnbull and B. P. Schulberg were made associate producers and Victor H. Clarke became general manager of the studio.

In addition Lasky launched other ambitious production plans, including the filming of "Old Ironsides," a story employing the dramatic incidents surrounding the frigate Constitution, and the making of "The Rough Riders," a picturization of the dramatic part played by Theodore Roosevelt and the men under his command during the Spanish American war.

"We are launching a production program that aims far above and beyond anything Paramount has attempted before," said Mr. Lasky. "With James Cruze in Tripoli making preliminary scenes and obtaining location material for 'Old Ironsides,' with other men in Cuba obtaining material for 'The Rough Riders' and with our organization preparing for other pictures of similar importance, all of magnitude, which even a year ago seemed impossible dreams, we are about to make what I am sure will be tremendous strides."

Mr. Lasky's last few days in Los Angeles were busy ones. On Monday night he was guest of honor at "Jesse L. Lasky Night" at the Metropolitan theatre. On Wednesday he was host at a luncheon given the press and the executives, players and directors of the studio. Both events were in celebration of the Twelfth Anniversary of the founding of the Lasky studio.

Will Build Across City Line to Beat Blue Law

Springfield, Mo., which several years ago voted against Sunday amusements and ratified that action about a year or so ago, now plans to erect a motion picture house just over the city line to get away from the blue law ordinance.

The new theatre will be located on Cherry Road and will give shows on Sundays only according to the present plans. A club and an all week picture show are expected to develop from the venture.

Skate Champions Signed With Junior Stars

Director Sam Wood has added Norval Baptie, world's champion speed and fancy skater, and his partner, Gladys Lamb, to the cast of the Paramount Junior Stars' picture, "Glorious Youth." He has also engaged an ice ballet of eighteen skaters, who are now performing at Madison Square Garden.

These skaters appear in the picture in an ice carnival at Mountain Inn, the Winter resort hotel around which the action in Byron Morgan's story centers.

F. B. O. Home Office In New Quarters

THE Home Office of F. B. O., together with R-C Pictures Corporation and other subsidiary companies has vacated its quarters at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York City for the more spacious quarters taking in the entire sixteenth floor of the new Embassy Building at 1560 Broadway. The offices are being vacated this week and the company will be in its new quarters December 21. The move was made necessary because of the increased personnel and business of the concern.

The new quarters are handsomely equipped with all modern conveniences and with a projection room that will seat forty persons. F. B. O. will retain shipping space at 723 Seventh Avenue and its New York exchange will remain at that address.

Big Feature Rights Corp. in New Quarters

Big Feature Rights Corporation has taken up new quarters in Louisville in its own new exchange building at 917-23 West Jefferson Street. The concern started business nine years ago with quarters in a small theatre dressing room. The company now employs approximately fifty men and women. Colonel Fred Levy is president and Lee L. Goldberg secretary of the Big Feature Rights Corporation.

Two Added to Field Force of Pro-Dis-Corp.

Two important additions to the executive field force of Producers Distributing Corporation are announced by Sales Manager W. J. Morgan in the appointments of Harry I. Goldman as manager of the New Haven branch, and Jacob B. Cohen as manager of the Pittsburgh branch. Both Goldman and Cohen are well known in exhibiting circles.

Cast Completed for "I'll See You Tonight"

Director Malcolm St. Clair has completed the cast for "I'll See You Tonight," Adolphe Menjou's next picture for Paramount. The latest additions are Josephine Drake and Ida Waterman. Others previously announced are Chester Conklin, Feeman Wood, Roger Davis and Hugh Huntley. The story is by Monte H. Katterjohn and production is scheduled to start December 21st.

Virginia Browne Faire in Hoot Gibson Cast

Universal has signed Virginia Browne Faire to play the leading feminine role opposite Hoot Gibson in "Chip of the Flying U," from the novel by B. M. Bower. Lynn Reynolds will direct Gibson and expects to start work within a week. Philo McCullough and Harry Todd are other late additions to the cast.

Chadwick Returns to Coast to Start New Productions

I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has returned to Los Angeles after a visit to the New York offices of the company. Mr. Chadwick will start production soon on "The Test of Donald Norton," a Robert E. Pinkerton story in which George Walsh will be starred.

Melville Brown to Direct for Universal

Universal has elevated Melville Brown from the scenario staff to a directorial berth. He has been signed to a contract to direct feature pictures. Brown is credited with the adaptation of some of Universal's most successful pictures, among them being "Poker Faces," "What Happened to Jones" and "I'll Show You the Town."

More Field Changes in Associated

E. J. SMITH, general sales manager for Associated Exhibitors, continues to make changes in the field forces of the organization and feels that he now has assembled a staff of real go-getters. Among the latest appointments was that of A. E. Atkinson, who was named manager of the Indianapolis branch by Lew C. Thompson, Central Sales Supervisor. Atkinson was connected with Metro-Goldwyn for three years.

Dan B. Lederman, Western Sales Director, has appointed Fred Horn, manager of the Des Moines branch. For the past seven years Horn has been with Metro-Goldwyn. The Cincinnati branch has been placed in charge of Otto Horowitz, who has been connected with the Philadelphia branch of F. B. O. for the past three years.

Fred Voight has been made branch manager at San Francisco. He was formerly in charge of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in that territory.

For the good of all - Laugh Month January 1926

When the "Laugh Month" idea was started no one ever thought of the possibility that there would not be enough comedies to meet the demand.

Bookings for January have been so tremendous that our laboratory has been called upon for many extra prints of many comedies.

Producers have also put their best foot forward. It is, therefore, our privilege to announce herewith the release, during January, of ten corking comedies; and to promise that even though they are released throughout "Laugh Month," prints on many of them will be available for pre-release bookings.

If you have not already made provision for enough comedies to adequately tie up with the popular "Laugh Month" movement, may I suggest that you get in immediate touch with your nearest Pathe exchange.

"Laugh Month" is a great idea.

It benefits everybody.

But it benefits most those who cooperate best.

When have you seen a two reel comedy with a cast like this? Not one star but five; and a flock of others not named. And the comedy in it —!

It's a wise actor who knows where his next meal is coming from—if he's a troupier and the manager has just faded out with the B. O. receipts.

This troupe was a panic. Many a better one has been stranded in a smaller town, but none was ever so hungry. They were as empty as drums, as flat as a bride's first cake.

A snappy, scrappy tale of a stranded "turkey."

A snow picture, the Gang's first, with the inimitable Gang at the bottom of all the fun and all the drifts.

Over ten thousand exhibitors have found that when they play a Gang comedy and tell their people they've got it, it will outdraw the feature.

This remarkable crew of kids is advertised on more marquees and in more newspaper advertising than probably any short comedies ever made.

Every month is Laugh Month if you play "Our Gang."

Advertise Your Comedies During Laugh Month And Every Month Thereafter !

You know that the right way to get a full house is with a full program, not with half of one.

That a program is only half effective if it has no short comedies on it. That is why you make up a "balanced program."

You know, also, that if you only advertise the feature your public can't know that you've got a bright sparkling comedy to go along with it; that the words "and a comedy" stuck down in the corner of your newspaper ad don't mean anything as the public is justified in thinking the comedy can't amount to much or you'd tell them who made it and who's in it. You know, too, that the extra dollars come to you by making use of the very thing that has the extra pull—the comedy, and that the way to get that money is to come right out and mention brands and names.

The only pictures your public knows you've got are those you advertise. Telling only half the story may cause the loss of half the possible profits.

A circus doesn't advertise just its elephants. The big Keith-Albee Vaudeville Circuit doesn't advertise just one act but all. A department store doesn't advertise just the hosiery but everything.

The showman who gets all that's coming to him doesn't keep any part of his bill a secret. He gets the benefit of the last ounce of pull of every part of it.

The big little comedy has saved too many shows from the curse of a bad feature to be treated like a little orphan Annie.

Pearson Asks Co-operation for "Laugh Month"

LAUGH MONTH was a great inspiration coming at a most opportune time. January comes around every year bringing unpaid bills, cold weather, Congress and the coal problem, but this year along comes Laugh Month to the great relief of a sorely tried public, says Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange. Continuing he prophesies that: When the full length of Laugh Month has swept across the country cooperated with by people in the public eye, magazines and newspapers, it will so fasten itself upon the Nation that it will spontaneously repeat itself year after year bringing cheer and courage to multitudes yet unborn.

Every retail merchant heretofore has found it necessary to force sales at tremendous price reductions in order to do any business that month at all because during that month the public is depressed as during no other time of the year.

The influence of Laugh Month can overcome this harmful condition of the public mind and Laugh Month deserves the thorough cooperation of every business institution of the land.

Each exhibitor can bring a great boon to the business men of his locality by assuming the leadership of the Laugh Month campaign among his fellow merchants and induce each of them to carry the Laugh Month Slogan in their advertising, in their window displays, and they will do right well to have a seat in his theatre at every performance.

Since September this industry has seen the release of a great many of the wonder works of the great producers of spectacles, drama, sex and weepy mello's in reelage from eight to twelve. The public has responded as never before, but any good showman knows that there is such a thing as becoming surfeited with heavy entertainment of this character, and particularly in January must the public be offered something of a very much lighter nature. Thus again Laugh Month is, indeed, a panacea for what usually ails all business in January.

All great ideas have modest beginnings. J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska started Arbor Day. The Pilgrims started Thanksgiving Day. The Short-Subject distributors have started Laugh Month.

The industry ought to get behind Laugh Month as it never got behind any similar movement before. It is going to live forever to the great benefit of all peoples and all business every January. How much benefit the industry derives this year will depend entirely upon the extent and quick reception of its individuals to take advantage of a great opportunity.

Laugh Month is a grand idea in that everybody profits by unselfishness. Even the feature distributors have comedies. They are bound to profit. The exhibitors, merchants, distributors, producers and the public will be tremendously benefited by the celebration spirit Laugh Month inculcates.

'Aesops Fables' and 'Topics' for 'Laugh Month'

THE Court Jester with his laugh producing antics was as vital a part of the King's household as the drawbridge over the moat and the key to the postern gate in the days of old. The head of many an unfriendly foe escaped the anger of an enraged monarch through the unexpected tapers of the lowly comedian, according to A. V. Mack, short subject sales manager of Pathe.

Harold Lloyd built his future on acceptance of the fact that "A little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men." Motion picture producers like Hal Roach and Mack Sennett have staked their fortunes on the assumption that people the world over enjoy hearty laughter in large doses.

The designation of January as Laugh Month was a happy thought. Starting the New Year with a laugh and a smile augurs well for a year of sunshine and happiness in our business.

During the month of January and every month next year audiences in the United States will be guaranteed fifteen minutes of laughter by the gloom chasing twins "Aesop's Film Fables" and "The Topics of the Day." Both of these subjects are being shown regularly every week in the finest motion picture palaces throughout the land.

The wide distribution enjoyed by these two subjects in every civilized country of the world is ample testimony of the public's desire for merriment. The single reel comedy released through Pathe every other week by Hal Roach fills an important spot on the programs of our leading theatres and will contribute largely to the success of Laugh Month.

Mack Sennett Comments on Comedy Situation

A GOOD comedy covers the world. There has never been a time when the public did not want comedies. In "Laugh Month" everybody will be able to enjoy a full share of laughs, is Mack Sennett's comment. We have gone through many phases of melodrama, costume, sex and problem pictures. They have their day and pass on to the next sensation. These pictures are limited to localities. The sophisticated audience of a large city demands something different from a country town. A heated love drama will appeal to youth and old age will be held by human interest. A woman will rave over a romantic hero; while her husband is bored to slumber.

The great problem of the movie-producer is to find an idea which will cover the whole territory. 'A good comedy does this as no other kind of play.' All audiences seem to laugh at the same things.

Laughs are Box Office Magnets, Says Frank

LAUGHS are box-office magnets and no one can dispute the fact because box-office reports are positive evidence that the public likes comedies, is W. B. Frank's, vice-president of the Hal Roach studios, summary. Continuing, take for instance, the experience of our organization when Harold Lloyd was under our banner and we promoted a "National Laugh Day." The idea went over the entire country like wild fire.

Following out this idea in a way, although not designating it as "Laugh Day," Max Graf of San Francisco has played all-comedy bills and billed them as Comedy Circus Day. Fine idea! Who does not react to the lure of the circus? From our kid days the circus has been our idea of a real good time. The clowns in the circus keep the audience laughing; they are the "comedies" on the bill. So when Manager Graf designated a movie comedy day as circus day he had the right idea.

Cohen Claims News Reels Should Have Humor

EVERY news film release should contain some element of humor—not only during "Laugh Month," but all the time, is Emanuel Cohen's, editor of Pathe News, contention. Continuing, he says in part: Such humor is derived from subtle incidents caught by the news film camera. Unrestricted glimpses of popular personages have their touches of humor. Unique shots of little animals cavorting before the camera always cause ripples of laughter. Unusual sensations for the audience secured by photographing the scenes so that the onlookers experience just what the cameraman encountered when he filmed them often rock a theatre with laughter.

So important do we consider the element of humor in Pathe News that we instruct each cameraman to catch the lighter side of life wherever and whenever possible. There are dramatic incidents galore in any news film and the humor touches are a welcome and entertaining relief.

All humanity responds to the screening of a news film because it mirrors life in its actuality with its drama and its humor. It is said that a certain percentage of theatre patrons were first attracted to theatres by the news film. And this is undoubtedly very true, for it combines humor with its drama and it is timely.

Numerous instances of humor gems caught by Pathe News cameramen come to mind.

One sure-fire way to tickle the ribs of an audience is to have the cameraman take his scenes so that the audiences experience unusual sensations, as I remarked above. Examples of this stunt in recent reels are looking at the world while riding a hippo and an elephant and while tied to a wing of a giant windmill. A cameraman rode a hippo at the Bronx Zoo to get his scenes and another rode an elephant in a circus parade in Chicago. The riding-a-windmill scenes were a Pathe News Fifteenth Anniversary feature taken at San Francisco.

Yes, indeed, every news film release should contain some element of humor and I have instructed my staff to play up the lighter side, especially during "Laugh Month."

Storey Speaks on Short Subject Recognition

FOR years the producers of Short Subjects have made very largely thankless efforts to win for their product something like fair and just recognition from exhibitors, says J. E. Storey, assistant general manager of Pathe Exchanges, in a recent statement. Following is the text of his statement: They have devoted millions and millions in money and time to the perfection of an art that has been all but ignored by the market. They have steadily and consistently improved their product until it actually vies with the finest features. They have developed stars whose names have tremendous box-office value. They have given this product to the picture loving world only to have it used merely to round out programs that glorify feature-length subjects, and they have known all the time that however poor the feature might be and however meritorious their short subjects, the feature would get the billing.

This was not only discouraging, it was manifestly unfair and unjust. It meant that nothing less than feature-length pictures could expect recognition in advertising, exploitation and publicity. The feature alone was so honored for no reason other than that its length put it in the feature class.

This is all in the past, however. A very different state of affairs exists today. The past year has seen a marked change in the attitude of exhibitors and public. Through constant and patient hammering home their arguments, the Pathe Sales and Exploitation departments have succeeded in bringing about a more equitable state of affairs.

Today it is no unusual thing to see the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett comedies billed in electric lights and featured in advertising. No more convincing proof could be offered in support of the contention that the short subject is coming into its own.

"Laugh Month," as the coming January has been designated, seems destined, even thus far in advance, to prove a decidedly valuable ally for Short Subject distributors and all who have at heart the best interests of this form of picture entertainment.

Bill Short Subjects as to Merits, Says Scott

SO much has been written and said concerning the box-office value of short subjects and their ever growing importance in the field of motion picture entertainment that certainly by this time the message should have registered with telling force, was Harry Scott's comment on the short subject situation. Continuing he said: Every conceivable medium has been used to get this idea before the exhibitor and to convince him of its value to him, and yet we have not perfected our work to the point where we may sit back and consider it completed.

It is true that the past year has seen a marked advance along this line. Concentrated sales and advertising effort have served to bring home to exhibitors generally the fact that they have been overlooking vast money making possibilities by their practice of literally ignoring short subjects in the past. The year 1925 may well be looked upon as the year of a great awakening in the motion picture industry—an awakening to a realization of the vital place short subjects occupy in the world of motion picture entertainment.

It now becomes the duty of motion picture distributors dealing in short subjects to make 1926 the year for definitely establishing as a fixed policy in all picture theatres the practice of according one, two and three-reel pictures advertising, publicity and exploitation consideration in proportion to their box-office merit rather than to their length. In this connection, distributors of short subjects should most enthusiastically support the "Laugh Month" movement that has been proposed for January, 1926.

The House of Pathe, long recognized as leader in the short subject field, has a vital contribution to make to the cause of Laugh Month. The entire two-reel comedy output of Hal Roach and Mack Sennett, the industry's foremost comedy producers; the Roach one-reel comedies, the Harold Lloyd productions, and Chaplin subject "A Dog's Life," Aesop's Film Fables, and Topics of the Day are regular releases on the Pathe program and admirable ammunition for Laugh Month.

Scenes from Pathe's contributions to 'Laugh Month.' Left to right: Hal Roach two reel comedy starring Charles Chase, titled "Charley, My Boy"—"Hot Cakes for Two" a Mack Sennett comedy, starring Alice Day—a Harry Langdon comedy made by Mack Sennett, titled "Saturday Afternoon"—and "Whispering Whiskers" also produced by Mack Sennett.

Hal Roach Inaugurates New Comedy Policy

LAUGH MONTH is dedicated in a special sense to comedy, and accordingly it furnishes an ideal occasion to announce what probably amounts to the most radical change in production policy ever launched by a comedy studio, in the opinion of Hal Roach, comedy producer for Pathe.

This policy is, briefly, to introduce into our short comedy production such names of outstanding prominence that they will exercise for the exhibitor a definite box-office draw. This policy has been shaped entirely with a desire to meet the demands of the present-day market and assist the exhibitor in increasing his attendance.

Frequently, the theatre-owner is faced with the necessity of showing a program feature in which there are no prominent box-office names that he can display. The feature itself may be an entertaining piece of work, but without the names to exploit it the exhibitor is powerless to get the people into his theatre. It is right here that our new production policy fits into the scheme of things. The exhibitor may not have the names to bill on his feature, but he will have them in our two-reel comedies.

Assuming that he has a feature with all the advertising possibilities of well-known names, our two-reel comedies with their additional box-office names will augment the drawing powers of the feature's stellar lineup. Thus our purpose is to meet the exhibitor's need for box-office names that will get the discriminating movie-going public off the street and into his seats.

The facts leading up to this change in policy will be of interest to the trade. Some few years ago we set out to improve the quality of our short comedies by the acquisition of the best material available in the way of stories, directors, acting talent, technical craftsmen, and so on. We have improved our product consistently until today we can claim without fear of contradiction that reel for reel our comedy product is superior in entertainment value and screen technique to the average run of feature productions.

What we set out to do was to make of our two-reel comedies program features of definite box-office value—screen units that would possess a real, tangible "draw" that the exhibitor could gauge in terms of dollars and cents at his box-office. First, we had to build real substantial quality into our productions. Next we had to develop players and directors as proficient in their respective roles as any set of performers or directors on any feature lot. We have succeeded in these first two steps beyond our fondest expectations.

We have now reached the third phase of our campaign to make the two-reel comedy of definite box-office value. For the exhibitor's advertising purposes a well-known name of established prestige is of the utmost importance. We are out to secure outstanding names of proved box-office "draw"—names that any exhibitor can put in his marquee lights, in his lobby displays, in his newspaper advertisements and posters with the certainty that such names will exercise a definite, tangible "pull" for his box-office.

Waite Discusses Advantages of Laugh Month

A GREAT number of slogans have been suggested to the theatre owners with which to exhort their customers to attend their performances more regularly and more often. Practically every industry and every movement for the promotion of business in all lines had a day, a week or a season. In our own business we have had a Greater Movie Season and even the conservative members of our business have been greatly surprised with the benefits which have accrued to them from this movement. All campaigns for increased business that have been successful have enjoyed concerted and wholehearted co-operation from every member of the business to be benefited.

The showmen and exhibitors of this country can make Laugh Month just as effective in improving their business as they are willing to. It will depend entirely and absolutely on the manner in which the theatres of the country exploit the idea and follow up according to Stanley B. Waite, sales manager, two-reel comedy department of Pathe.

It is unnecessary to point out to the real showmen of America that the basis of moving picture entertainment should be comedy subjects. Within the last couple of years the theatre-going public of America have definitely established the fact that they prefer this type of picture to all others. More com-

"Shorts" Will Fill Theatres Says Van Beuren

IF exhibitors will tie-up the front of their theatres with the "National Laugh Month" campaign of the Short Subject producers, they'll find their January receipts the greatest ever, summarizes A. J. Van Beuren, president of Timely Films and Fables Pictures, Inc., in an interview part of which follows:

There is absolutely no question about the possibilities of short subjects. Give the "shorts" a chance in the "lights" and the newspaper displays and they'll bring in the millions who are thought to be staying at home with their radios. No exhibitor wants to stand still. He must progress. But he can't do it unless he lets people know what's at his theatre. That's the way to build business. Buy the best, and then advertise that you've got it.

edies have appeared on the programs of all the leading producers of motion pictures and the season of 1925-26 has rightfully been termed a "Comedy" year.

It cannot be denied that the motion picture fans of the country want every program they attend to contain some comedy subjects. By an examination of the amusement pages of the newspapers in all the larger cities, it is apparent that the regular theatre fans have established their preference as well for comedy plays. For one dramatic play in the theatres of New York and Chicago, there are ten comedies or comedy dramas. This is an undeniable indication of the type of entertainment desired by the theatre-goers of America.

Surely no exhibitor who is in touch with his patronage has failed to notice their preference for comedy subjects and there can be no happier or more appropriate time to start a concerted campaign to reach new customers and make new fans of irregular patrons than during the first month of the new year. The moving picture theatres who get behind this move and avail themselves of the opportunities for increasing their business can definitely establish the practicability of this campaign.

If the possibilities of Laugh Month are fully appreciated and availed of, the theatres of this country will enjoy more business during the year 1926 than ever before. It will be a happier year for the moving picture industry, for the exhibitors of the country and for the theatre-going public.

Theatres Rally to Laugh Month

First Run Houses in All Sections of America Express Approval and Pledge Cooperation in National Movement

BROADWAY rallies to the National Laugh Month banner with the receipt this week of assurances of active co-operation from Herman S. Heller, Managing Director of Warner's theatre. While the theatrical capital of America was taking its place in the ranks of the "Laugh Month" sponsors, the national capital was likewise declaring itself in on the nation wide movement through word from its foremost exhibitor, H. M. Crandall, to the effect that the Crandall houses were lining up especially strong comedy programs in celebration of January as Laugh Month.

Another section prominently registering its approval of the plan this week is New England where hundreds of theatres have voted to participate in an active way in the Laugh Month campaign. At the same time reports continue to be received by the Laugh Month Committee from all parts of the country describing special activities under way by leading theatres in preparation for Laugh Month, and listing additional theatres that will take part in the Coast-to-Coast campaign.

In his letter assuring cooperation with the Laugh Month plans, Managing Director Herman S. Heller of Warner's theatre characterizes the comedy as always "essential in a Broadway program."

Mr. Crandall endorses the campaign in the following enthusiastic terms:

"May I take this means of saying that we are heartily in favor of the 'Laugh Month' plan, as outlined in the trade papers for January. We have arranged our bookings so as to have a goodly share of our entertainment for the month of January consist of comedies. We have always in the past made it a policy to advertise our comedies along with the rest of the program, and will continue to do so in the future. I am always happy to cooperate in anything that is for the general good of the industry, and I think this present plan of a 'Laugh Month' a very happy one."

The powerful Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests of Baltimore have joined up under the auspices of the circuit's General Manager, William M. Whitehurst, who in a letter to Jack Peggler of Pathe's field exploitation staff, writes as follows:

"Allow me this opportunity to express my full accord and support of the plan for 'Laugh Month,' as outlined in the national motion picture trade papers of recent date.

"As general manager of the Baltimore string of Whitehurst theatres I want to voice an appreciation of the worth while efforts of the short subject producers during the past year in giving to the exhibitor, regardless of production cost, condensed comedies that have unquestionably enhanced the value of our exhibition programs.

"The advocacy of 'Laugh Month' would seem the natural deduction expected and the display of showmanship in making it a national issue is appreciated, I am sure, by the wideawake exhibitor.

"The short subject comedy has come into its own and the exhibitor who fails to recognize the fact is turning real money away from the box-office."

J. M. Johnston of the Cincinnati office of Educational Films reports that "a great many exhibitors throughout the territory have expressed a willingness to cooperate with the movement. I have personally called upon Mr. Libson, who has theatres in our three key cities in this territory. He has given me the assurance that he will make a special effort and use additional publicity for Short Subjects during this period."

There is especially encouraging evidence of the way exhibitors are taking hold in the way of active preparations for the opening of the national campaign. Among those putting in heavy orders for Laugh Month banners, posters, and pennants during the past week were Roy Tillson of the Fuller theatre and General Manager Beatty of the Butterfield Circuit.

Among the New England theatres that have signified their intention during the past week of co-operating in an active way with the Laugh Month Campaign are the following:

In Massachusetts — Merrimac Square, Lowell; Empire, New Bedford; Olympia, Chelsea; Universal, Fitchburg; Palace, Pittsfield; Central Square, Cambridge; Harvard, North Cambridge; Allston, Allston; Strand, Dorchester; Codman Square, Dorchester; Fields Corner, Dorchester; Union Square, Somerville; Family, Worcester; Olympia, Lynn; North Shore, Gloucester; Strand & Plaza, Worcester; Fox, Springfield; Plaza, Salem; Modern, Lawrence; Allen's Charette Co., Inc., New Bedford; Allen's, New Bedford; American, New Bedford; Capitol, New Bedford; Casino, New Bedford; Colonial, New Bedford; Comique, New Bedford; Orpheum, New Bedford; Princess, New Bedford; State, New Bedford; Colonial, Brockton; Metropolitan, Boston; Modern & Beacon, Boston; Lancaster, Boston.

In Rhode Island — Strand, Pawtucket; Laurier, Woonsocket; Strand & Majestic, Providence.

In Maine — Opera House, Bangor; Music Hall & Strand, Lewiston; Colonial, Augusta; Opera House & Central, Biddeford; Opera House, Waterville; Columbia, Bath; Colonial, Belfast; Opera House, Gardiner; Temple, Houlton; Opera House, Rockland; Majestic, Rumford; Star, Westbrook; Park, Ft. Fairfield; Dreamland, Livermore Falls; Rex, Norway; Strand, So. Berwick.

In Vermont — Majestic, Burlington; Strand & Grand, Rutland; Park, Barre; Playhouse, Montpelier.

In New Hampshire — Albert & Opera House, Berlin; Star, Concord; Lyric, Dover; Colonial, Portsmouth.

The average weekly attendance at moving picture theatres is 50,000,000 persons at a conservative estimate, and if one-tenth of these can be induced, through the exploitation of Laugh Month, to go to one more show each week, it will mean five million additional admissions to the theatres of the country. Figured on an average of 20 cents per admission, this will mean $1,000,000.

Hammons Foresees Banner Year

Predicts Tremendous Strides for Short Comedies and Features in 1926

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., foresees in 1926 the biggest year for short subjects in the history of the industry. He points out as the outstanding events of the past year the tremendous theatre building activity and the rapid advancement of the comedies and the short features field generally.

Hammons says:

"I do not mean to say that either of these developments is the direct cause of the other, although there can be little doubt that better showmanship as typified in the changing attitude toward Short Features is back of the big theatre progress. But it is mighty interesting to see these two big factors in motion picture progress moving side by side as the outstanding features of the greatest year in the history of the industry.

"Looking ahead in an effort to see what the year 1926 may hold affecting Short Features, the big national campaign for Laugh Month seems to be by far our best guide, and though we make every effort to look at this move conservatively, it still indicates nothing at all if not the biggest year Short Features have had.

"No other exploitation drive of this sort has ever met with such instantaneous and hearty approval and co-operation. From all sides come reports of magazines, newspapers, press syndicates, writers, artists and other persons of public influence falling in line to help along the move to make 1926 a better and brighter year by starting it with a month of laughter. All of this is for the benefit of the exhibitor who uses his comedies and other Short Features as something more than fillers—who boosts them as well as books them. So it is little wonder that practically every big circuit of theatres in the country, as well as countless independent exhibitors had signified their intention to join the band wagon within a few days after the campaign had been announced.

"Everywhere during January comedy will be attracting the particular attention of the picture fan, to such an extent that comedies cannot fail to develop an even greater pull at the box-office than they have had before. And so 1926, it would seem, is going to be a better and brighter year for the showmen who know how to take advantage of their comedies as well as their longer features to build better business at the box-office."

Pathe Acquires "Famous Melody Series"

A new series of one-reelers produced by James Fitzpatrick, presenting musical picturizations of the songs of many lands, has been acquired by Pathe. It is titled the "Famous Melody Series" and will consist of thirteen subjects to be released at the rate of one every four weeks. The initial subject, "Songs of Ireland" will be released January 24th. Peggy Shaw, formerly of the Ziegfeld Follies plays the lead in the subjects.

Fox Arranges Laugh Month Program

AS a special feature for National Laugh Month in January, Fox Film Corporation has arranged an all-comedy program of eight reels to demonstrate the feasibility of an all-short subject show to exhibitors. It includes three two-reel comedies, a Fox Variety and the current release of Fox News.

The subjects making up the program are "Cupid a La Carte," the latest of the O. Henry releases; "His Own Lawyer," fourth of the Helen and Warren married life series; "The Flying Fool," an Imperial comedy, and "The Iron Trail Around the World," a Fox Variety.

I. V. T. A. Signs All Red Seal Product for 25-26

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal Pictures, last week signed a contract with Manager Browitt, of the local offices of International Variety Theatrical Agency of South Africa, under which the latter will distribute in that territory the entire Red Seal program of featurettes, comprising 140 releases, for the entire season of 1925-26.

Hope Hampton

The trade press critics are seldom as enthusiastic as this:

To those exhibitors who constantly search the short reel market for the unusual, the beautiful and the novel to round out their programs, "Marionettes" will prove a veritable gold mine. It is without doubt one of the most beautifully done reels available today. Featuring Hope Hampton—who has never appeared to better advantage—and directed by Henri Diamant Berger, it tells a charming little story . . .

Mention should be made of the exquisite color work used throughout this reel. The Technicolor process has been employed. This is a reel that will undoubtedly prove an attraction for any house. It should not be overlooked. . . .

—The Film Daily

This film not only is one of marvelous beauty but the little story and the manner in which it is presented are delightful. It should please both young and old and charm the lovers of the beautiful and artistic. . . . Should go over big in almost any house. . . .

—Moving Picture World

A novelty that will make a most acceptable presentation on any program.

"Marionettes" is done in natural color and is amazingly reminiscent of "The Voice of the Nightingale," the winner of the Riesenfeld short subject prize. It strikes me that had "Marionettes" been produced before the awarding of the prize, it would have been mighty difficult making the decision . . .

—Exhibitors Trade Review

This is a distinct novelty and one that should be appreciated in almost any house.

Asks Short Subject Support

R. F. Woodhull Urges New York Critics to Support Short Features

THE Short Features Advertising Association was host to the critics of the New York daily newspapers one day during the week, with R. F. Woodhull, President of the M. P. T. O. A. as chief speaker. Woodhull impressed upon the newspaper men the interest there was on the part of the public in short subjects and urged them to stress this angle of the industry in their criticisms.

The President of the National association pointed out that there was frequently more interest in the shorts than in the feature picture. He gave as an example a judge of New Jersey who attended a showing in the Capitol, Broadway, last week and could not recall the feature, but declared that the short feature, "The Suwanee River" was one of the most beautiful things he ever saw.

He also recalled an incident in his home town of Dover, where a patron had said he wasn't interested the least in the feature, but thought Al St. John in "The Iron Mule" was one of the funniest pictures he had ever seen.

Woodhull dwelt at length on the importance of Laugh Month and asked all the support possible for that event. He declared that if the exhibitor ever took the short comedy out of his bill he would soon appreciate its real value if he did not already.

Sums Up Value of Laugh Month

James R. Grainger Declares Drive Will Launch Excellent Propaganda For Picture Theatres

NATIONAL LAUGH MONTH with its emphasis on the comedy form of entertainment and the suggestion that the picture theatre serves as a haven of respite from the drab realities of life, will prove a most valuable form of propaganda for the exhibitors, asserts James R.

Grainger in a statement issued this week, in which he praises the idea behind the campaign sponsored by the Short Features Advertising Association.

"When Fox Films took for its slogan," he declares "start the New Year with a Laugh," we naturally had National Laugh

Month in mind, but we were also of the opinion that if we put sufficient punch behind the suggestion to 'start the New Year with a laugh,' it would be mighty good propaganda for the exhibitor to spread among his patrons.

"Fox Films heartily joins hands with anybody who starts out to distribute smiles and laughter. National Laugh Month is a splendid idea. It should be productive of more genuine mirth and healthy amusement than was ever created by any given agency in the history of the world, if exhibitors of motion pictures will co-operate with the creators of this unique idea. Millions of men, women and children will patronize the thousands of motion picture theatres during January and, in my opinion, if everybody will support the plan, young 1926, starting to work with a broad smile and a hearty laugh, will carry on much in the same manner throughout the year.

"Live-wire exhibitors will grasp the importance of this plan with one accord for it will be to their advantage to give their patrons the benefit of an idea that has been so generously endorsed. To 'start the New Year with a laugh,' means to start the New Year right, and show me the exhibitor who does not want to 'get off on the right foot.'"

The contest is open to exhibitors, the following rules governing the awards:

Warner Novelizations to Be Printed

Warner Brothers and the Jacobson-Hodgkinson Corporation, publishers of New York, have arranged a tieup whereby the latter will publish novelizations of a number of Warner features. These novelizations will appear in "Popular Plays and Screen Library" series, paper bound books having a wide circulation.

The first story to appear will be "Other Women's Husbands," by E. T. Lowe, Jr. The picture is now in production with Erle Kenton directing, and Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Huntly Gordon, Phyllis Haver and Marjorie Gay in the cast.

Century's "Laugh Month" List

Eight "Buster Brown" and Ten Other Comedies Available in Addition to January Releases

IN addition to the January releases of comedies from Century, there will be eight "Buster Brown" and ten other short features available for exhibitors during "Laugh Month" from this company, Stern Brothers, producers of the pictures, have announced.

The pictures which will be available for booking under this arrangement for the National drive in January, include three of the series which ordinarily would not be released until later in the winter and spring. The producers have notified Universal exchanges, distributors of the product, to pre-release all Century Comedies now on hand in addition to the "Buster Brown" series. Comedies set for release up to April, a total of eleven two reelers, will be made available for presentation during "Laugh Month" as a result of this move in support of the Laugh Month campaign.

The Buster Brown Productions offered for pre-release are "Buster's Nose Dive," "Buster's Hunting Party" and "Buster's Sky Rocket." The regular January release,

"Buster's Bust-up," has just completed a week in the Capitol Theatre, New York City.

Including the January releases, the following Century Comedies are included in the pre-release two-reelers for Laugh Month: "Her Lucky Leap," "Flying Wheels," "Yearning For Love" and "Painless Pain," all starring Wanda Wiley; "A Honeymoon Squabble," "The Big City," "Say It With Love," all starring Edna Marian, one of the New Wampas Baby Stars; "Helpful Al," "Accidents Can Happen," and "Al's Troubles," all starring Al Alt; "Crowning the Count," and "A Flivver Vacation" starring Eddie Gordon, and "Too Many Babies," featuring Charles King and Constance Darling.

The four Buster Brown Productions which already have been released, are "Educating Buster," "Buster Be Good," "Oh Buster" and "Buster's Nightmare."

Philly Exhibitors Praise "Laugh Month"

Exhibitors in the Philadelphia territory have launched a campaign to make January "Laugh Month," a banner one for comedies and short subjects. At a meeting of theatre-men held in the Aldine Theatre on December 11th, exhibitors, branch managers and assistants of all the local exchanges were in attendance and addresses were made by various men prominent in the industry.

An effort will be made to induce exhibitors to devote an unusual amount of advertising and exploitation to comedies. The M. P. T. O. has endorsed the movement and its members will co-operate in every possible way.

Many Entries for Laugh Month

Exhibitors All Over Country Send in Blanks for Exploitation Competition

EXHIBITORS in all parts of the country have signified their intention of entering the prize contest for the best exploitation tying up with Laugh Month in which the National Laugh Month Committee is to award $850 in cash prizes. A number of exhibitors have filled in the entry blanks which have been printed in the trade papers and have sent them to the National Laugh Month Committee in advance of the beginning of Laugh Month in order to "get their bids in early." As prizes are to be awarded for the best campaigns conducted each week during the month, however, it will be necessary for each exhibitor to make a separate entry with each week's campaign which he desires to have considered for the cash prizes.

The first prize for each of the four weeks in January is to be $100 and the other prizes will be as follows:

2nd Prize.....	$50 00
3rd Prize.....	25 00
4th Prize.....	12 50

Many Stars for Laugh Month

F. B. O. General Sales Manager Points Out Best Talent is being Recruited

LEE MARCUS, general sales manager of F. B. O., asserts that the National Laugh Month Drive to be launched during January will give exhibitors an opportunity to concentrate not only on laugh-provoking productions, but on stars who have a particular flair for comedy.

On commenting on this particular phase of Laugh Month, Mr. Marcus said:

"Producing and distributing companies are giving as much time and thought to short subjects and short subject stars as to feature length productions and stars who appear in them. They are recruiting the finest talent among players, authors and directors for their comedy subjects. Many of the companies have recruited their talent from the vaudeville stage, the first home of humor, and these players are proving tremendous box office attractions. The short subject today is in the same class with the feature length film, and in many instances, is superior to the feature production.

"Exhibitors realize the value of making their audiences laugh. They want comedies with good stories, clever subtitles, and amusing players. The producing companies who concentrate on short subjects are filling this demand as quickly and ably as they can.

"F. B. O. is concentrating particularly on stars with a comedic bent. We have recently signed Alberta Vaughn to a three year starring contract, and as soon as she completes the Sam Hellman series, "Fighting Hearts" will be starred in full length feature productions. Alberta is one of the few young actresses on the screen today with a distinct flair for comedy. It would not be amiss, at this point, to suggest to exhibitors that they concentrate on Alberta during Laugh Month.

"Alice Ardell, who is being featured by Joe Rock in the series of Blue Ribbon comedies which he is producing for F. B. O. distribution is another comedic "find."

"The three fat men, 'Fat' Karr, 'Tiny' Ross and 'Fatty' Alexander, the trio whose gross weight approximates a ton, and who are being featured by Rock in the series of Standard Fat Men comedies which are also being made for F. B. O. distribution, are taking their place as funmakers of the first rank.

"Dinky Doodle, the cartoon character created by Walter Lantz, has won a place in the hearts of film fans.

"Although not stars on the F. B. O. roster, Al Cooke and Kit Guard are two of the funniest players on the screen today, and their following is enormous."

Joe Rock Starts New Blue Ribbon Comedy

"Alice Blues," a Joe Rock production got under way this week at the F. B. O. studios. It is a Blue Ribbon comedy featuring Alice Ardell, petite French star and a comedian still to be named.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"My Swedie"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a fairly good comedy of the slapstick and knockabout type with Neal Burns and Vera Steadman in the leading roles. It has a story that is above the average for a picture of the kind and the action is fast and continuous. In fact there are parts of it that could be eliminated without detracting any from the humor. It is a little overcrowded with unnecessary gag stuff. The cast is a competent one and the picture consequently, well acted.

The Cast

Jack, a Newlywed..... Neal Burns
Helen, his Wife..... Vera Steadman
Ethel Lorraine..... Anita Garvin
Her Husband..... William Irving

A Christie comedy by Sig Hersig; directed by Harold Beaudine; photography by Alex Phillips and Fred Jacquemin.

The Story—Jack's honeymoon is interrupted by a letter from a former sweetheart threatening the exposure of a number of ardent love letters unless he remits $5,000. The letter falls into the hands of his wife and they contrive separately to recover the damaging missives. Each disguises as a Swedish servant girl and both are employed by the holder of the letters. They recover the letters after ransacking the house, and make their getaway after a number of exciting and humorous incidents.

Summary—This is a good lively comedy, well acted and with a good story and a number of humorous situations. It should go particularly well in the neighborhood houses.

"His Wooden Wedding"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Charlie Chase is the star in this one from Hal Roach and he is ably supported by Katherine Grant. Leo McCarey directed and the story concerns a matrimonial mix-up, providing plenty of funny situations that are good for a lot of laughs.

The Cast

The Groom..... Charlie Chase
The Bride..... Katherine Grant
Gale Henry, Fred De Silva, and John Cossar.

The Story—Charlie is about to be married to Katherine when he receives an anonymous note from a rival suitor who endeavors to make the groom-to-be believe that his intended wife is the owner of a wooden leg. Charlie is shocked at this last hour happening but manages to go thru with the ceremony envisioning throughout the wedding his future family with wooden legs. After it's all over, he tackles a bottle of liquor—gets all lit up and leaves the country. Katherine is very much concerned and confused over the strange outcome but finds the note that Charlie has dropped and the situation becomes clear to her. She and her father follow on their yacht and the villain's dirty work is finally thwarted. The villain, pretending to be a friend of Charlie's has accompanied him and a lot of fun is made over his attempts to gain possession of the engagement ring. At last, the groom sees his bride in a bathing suit and everything turns out all right.

Summary—A very amusing comedy with Charlie Chase and Katherine Grant at their best. The supporting cast is fine.

"Flaming Flappers"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Glen Tryon is the star in this two-reeler out of the Hal Roach studios and while it is not the best one that Tryon has been seen in, it provides a very fair brand of entertainment. Fred Guiol did the directing and the story concerns the present day flapper and her sheik friends. The cast contains a number of popular names and they all do excellent work.

The Cast

Glen Tryon, Sue "Bugs" O'Neill, Tyler Brooks, Jimmie Finlyson, Charlotte Mineau, Yvonne Howell and Sally Long.

The Story—Glen and his friends are attending a co-ed school and are managing to have a very enjoyable time of it—in fact so much so—that Glen becomes engaged to one of the fair co-eds. His sister precedes him to the home town and breaks the news of his engagement to the family. In the meantime Glen and his sweetie enlist the aid of a rickety old flivver to make the visit to the relatives. They have a tough time keeping the old car together and to further add to their difficulties, decide to adopt an orphan baby on the way home. Most of the comedy is furnished by Glen's efforts to keep the old car in the road and the furore that they cause at home when they drive up with the baby.

Summary—Not one of Tryon's best but very fair entertainment that will please the average fan.

"The Feud"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Purdy)

One of the best of the Van Bibber series, a clever burlesque of the old melodramatic Southern feud idea, in which the hero with his usual genius for getting into scrapes, finds himself the possessor of an ancient mansion which he has bought at auction without knowing that he was bidding. Van inherits the feud which goes with the house, and forthwith tumbles into a whirlpool of trouble. It's very funny stuff, the subtitles are snappy and humorous, action fast and we defy the most hard-boiled cynic to refrain from laughing over the treasure hunt and climax in which Van's foes knock out each other, and he is congratulated for having licked the whole crowd single-handed. Earle Foxe fills the Van Bibber role with his customary dash and spirit, his pantomime is excellent; Florence Gilbert, as Sylvia, Frank Beal, as the Colonel, and others in the cast give satisfactory performances.

The Cast

Van Bibber..... Earle Foxe
Sylvia..... Florence Gilbert
Colonel Paddock..... Frank Beale
Southern Mother..... Fanny Midgley
Southern Boy..... Steve Carruthers
Southern Girl..... Gladys McConnell

The Story—Van Bibber and his party motor to a Southern village where an old mansion is being sold at auction. At the sale Van is questioned by a deaf villager concerning the price of expensive autos, shouts at him in reply, the auctioneer takes his answers as bids and Van finds himself the owner of the property. That night an old-fashioned party is held in the mansion. Van accidentally touches a secret spring which reveals the hiding place of hidden treasure. The folks with whom the original owners are at feud appear and carry off the treasure box. Van gets mixed up with them. In the free-for-all scrap which follows the feudist battle among themselves till all are knocked unconscious. Van then restores the treasure to the owners and is hailed as a hero.

Summary—A bright and zippy two-reeler. Starts getting the laughs right from the beginning and keeps the comedy wheel revolving up to the finish. Slapstick stuff amusing and not over-done. Picture well directed and acted. Should please all patrons.

"Sky Hooks"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

CLIFF BOWES seems to be getting better vehicles in his late pictures than he did in the past. This story is well above the average and its comedy situations are an improvement over many of those that have gone before. Helen Foster is featured with Bowes, and in addition to being good to look at she seems to be a capable actress.

In this yarn Bowes gets a job as a laborer carrying bricks to a bricklayer on a lofty roof. He runs afoul of and wins the displeasure of a giant laborer, and the two, as well as Miss Foster do some lofty maneuvering that is calculated to bring a goodly share of laughs.—

"Fins and Feathers"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

For those who like out-door life, fishing and hunting and the scenery that goes along with it, this single reeler will furnish splendid entertainment. Followers of Ike Walton will sit uneasy in their chairs when they see the way trout are caught up in a real trout country—and for those who get their kick out of watching good setters and pointers work with the birds, Ty Cobb will show them the way he goes about it. This is a fine little short subject along these lines.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Noah and His Trouble"

(Pathe-Aesop Fables—One Reel)

It seems as though all Paul Terry has to do is to dip his pen in some ink—and out comes a lot of laughs—and this one is no exception. This time Mr. Terry falls back on that time-honored institution—Noah's Ark—and he shows the very distressing moments and complications that befall the old commander when the stork pays a visit to the variety of beasts aboard the ship. Not a little perplexity and furore is caused when the elephant and skunk families vote an increase in their household.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Searchlights"

(Red Seal-Urban-Kineto—One Reel)

There are a lot of tricks in the first part of this one that your patrons can take home to try out. It brings out the effect that sound waves have and a demonstration is given by running a violin bow over a glass tumbler, etc.

In the second part a collection of rare white (Albino) animals are shown. Species of the deer, rattle-snake, weasel and tortoise are included. There is also a blue frog.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Marvels of Motion"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

Max Fleischer has collected a number of interesting subjects that have to do with out-door sports in this single reeler and they are again made with a special camera which shows the different champions at high speed, slow motion, in reverse and suspended in mid-air. It includes tennis, the rodeo, Ranger, the Wonder Horse, Buff Brady, the lariat twirler, "throwing the bull," "Little Joe, The Midget" and "Straying Feet."—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Entertainment First, is Christie Creed

ENTERTAINMENT first, and less striving for art, will be the keynote of picture producers during 1926, according to Al Christie, prominent comedy producer of Christie Comedies, Bobby Vernon comedies, Walter Hiers comedies and Jimmie Adams comedies released through Educational.

Christie says:

"Gradually the industry has swung back to its first principles. Those first principles of making pictures were 'entertainment' for the masses, whether it was in comedy, romance or melodrama. We are in a business of selling entertainment to the public, and when such pictures now and then achieve artistic merit in addition to their entertainment qualities, so much the better. But first of all they have to be entertainment to register successfully with the public and the exhibitor.

"Because the industry has been convinced of this important consideration in picture making, I believe 1926 will see more companies striving for 'Entertainment first' and losing less money striving for art. Incidentally, by reaching out for entertaining pictures, they will probably happen on to art more often."

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Uses 9 Stunts on "Iron Horse"

A. N. Gonsior's Drive in Champaign Ties Up With Everything From University to Bakeries

FEW exploitation campaigns measure up to the standard of completeness achieved by A. N. Gonsior in his drive for "The Iron Horse" at Champaign, Ill. The campaign was executed in the interests of the Virginia Theatre, which is operated by Mr. Gonsior. In this drive, which enlisted the cooperation of every worthwhile institution or organization in the town, Gonsior was assisted by a Fox exploitation man.

The campaign was launched with one of the most remarkable tie-ups credited to enterprising showmanship. This was the assistance gained from the engineering department of the University of Illinois, which is located at Champaign and which boasts a wonderful collection of railroad photographs—a complete pictorial record of every type of engine used in the history of railroading in this country. This valuable collection was moved to the lobby of the Virginia Theatre through the courtesy of the University heads, and there formed one of the finest lobby displays possible for a picture like "The Iron Horse."

The drive did not stop at this, however effective and flattering it was to the men exploiting "The Iron Horse" in Champaign. Some word of mouth advertising was executed in the following manner. The ushers of the Virginia—who happen to be students of the University, working their way through college—announced to each patron as they ushered him or her to their seat, "The Iron Horse" will play here next week."

For a street ballyhoo, a reproduction of "The Iron Horse" was constructed, but by way of altering the regulation article, the Champaign campaigners had two students carry the imitation locomotive on their shoulders.

A pretentious prologue was staged in which songs incidental to the period of the picture were rendered by a quartet in correct atmospheric costumes.

A special screening was arranged for the preceptors of History from the University, together with Presidents of the various college fraternities.

Other local personages whose splendid cooperation was instrumental in promoting the success of the engagement were the Board of Education officials of Champaign, and the neighboring town of Urbana, railroad officials of the Illinois Central and the Big Four roads, Scout Masters and officers of Boy Scouts, American Legion officials, head of Veterans of Foreign Wars, commanders of Civil War Veterans, principals and teachers of high schools, civic officials and newspaper editors.

On the day the print of the picture arrived in Champaign, the Boy Scouts turned out in a body, marched to the railway station, and escorted the film to the theatre.

So favorably did the picture impress local school heads, that all of Champaign's public schools were dismissed on Monday and Tuesday afternoons to enable the pupils to see the picture.

Special tickets were made up and distributed to the employees of the Illinois Central and the Big Four roads in both Champaign and Urbana. These tickets called for a ten-cent reduction of the usual admission price.

A tie-up was secured with the two largest bakeries in the city, by which advertising circulars on the engagement were wrapped with every loaf of bread.

Girl Solicits Ads In Lobby In "Classified" Tie Up

In connection with a week's run of "Classified" at the Leland theatre in Albany, this week, one of the local papers placed a young lady in front of the theatre to receive classified ads from patrons, while another of the local papers gave a theatre party one night to employees of its classified ad department.

Interests Schools In "The Fighting Ranger" Serial

The particular appeal of serial plays to children is being capitalized and turned to good account at the box office in several towns and cities, especially good work along these lines being done by exhibitors in connection with "The Fighting Ranger." A notable instance of intelligent work in the formation of "Adventure Clubs," an exploitation movement projected by the Universal exploitation department, is the campaign which was executed in Delphos, Ohio, in the interests of the Capital Theatre.

Letters were sent to all the schools. The letters outlined the educational policy of the serial "The Fighting Ranger," and announced a special matinee on Monday afternoon immediately after school. The drive was handled by A. J. Sharick, Universal exploiter.

The formation of an Adventure Club was also carried out. The theatre put on a special school matinee before the serial was scheduled to start which packed the theatre with children. Sharick talked to the kids, explaining the Adventure Club plan, and then had them sign slips with their names, addresses and ages. These were left at the box office, and each boy as he handed in his slip was presented with one of the "Fighting Ranger" booklets put out by Universal. This gave the theatre an excellent mailing list. A slide about the club and an ad in the paper with a place for the boys to sign was also used.

Want Ads for Parrots Tie Up with "Unholy Three"

Curiosity was aroused in Alton, Ill., recently, by the appearance of a prominent display ad in the local paper reading as follows: "Wanted: Parrots! Parrots! Parrots! For use in connection with showing of 'The Unholy Three' at Princess Theatre, starting Sunday. Anyone owning a parrot please communicate at once with J. J. Reilly, Manager Princess Theatre." The Parrots obtained were placed on stands in the lobby with stills showing the pet shop in the film.

Strand-Pathe News Stunt Stirs Memphis

A cooperative Pathe News and Strand Theatre drive in Memphis, Tenn., succeeded in creating a great amount of interest and valuable exploitation for both the topical reel and the theatre, since it served as a demonstration of the remarkable speed with which news events are rushed to the screen.

As an initial stunt, Manager Walter League, of the Strand, took advantage of scenes in an issue of the news, which pointed out Memphis as the "Cotton center of the world." A private screening was held for the chamber of commerce and the press.

On Thanksgiving Day, the annual local football classic, the University of Tennessee-Loyola game was "shot" by a Pathe News photographer. While the camera was grinding, two men carried a banner around the field which advised rooters of both teams to "See Today's Game in Pathe News at the Strand Theatre, Tonight, Friday and Saturday." And they lived up to their promise! The film arrived at — and was shown on the Strand screen that evening at seven.

In addition to this, League hired an airplane and flew over the park himself while the game was in progress. A lower wing of the plane was covered with huge letters which spelled out "Strand-Pathe." A football, decorated with the Tennessee colors was dropped on the field. The total cost of this extra exploitation amounted to twenty-one dollars and eighteen cents.

Teaser Angle For Window Display On "Graustark"

Use of the teaser idea in a window display was made by Manager C. H. Amos of the Carolina Theatre, Greenville, in connection with a jewelry store tie up for "Graustark." The window featured a display of diamonds and pearls with a notice reading "These are the crown jewels of Graustark." Later the card was changed to read "These are the Crown jewels of Graustark as worn by Norma Talmadge in 'Graustark' at the Carolina Theatre."

Atmosphere, live and lively both, for Pathe's "Kivalina of the Ice Lands" during its showing at the Cameo theatre, San Francisco, where an effective campaign was staged by Manager C. L. Theurerkauf.

A prehistoric monster built at a cost of $25,500. Used as ballyhoo for First National's "The Lost World," the float shown above proved a business-getter for the Rialto at Sterling, Colo. It was designed and executed under the direction of Chet Miller, manager, and Archie Post, exploitation man of the theatre.

Ideas Used for 'The Freshman'

Stunts Culled From Campaigns On Lloyd
Comedy Fill Grab-Bag of Showman's Tricks

WHILE the timely angle, the football rage, was the focal point of the major portion of the campaign which leading showmen used in exploiting "The Freshman," Harold Lloyd's popularity and personality, both of which lend themselves very readily to exploitation, naturally called for a very fair share of advertising which was individual to the star and picture and without these "seasonal" appeals.

As a result of this, a few of the more recent exploitation drives for "The Freshman" provide a number of ideas which, while not basically new or novel, have nevertheless interest for the exploitation man because of the clever applications which were made of them.

The leading item in "Freshman" exploitation continues to be centered about local football teams, appeals to the general public being made through stunts and advertising which tied up the picture with the high school or college team numbering many followers among the potential patrons of the particular theatre. Football teams of universities and high schools were guests of the theatres, in several instances. Some of the theatres recently using this stunt are the Jackson Theatre, York, Pa., where Manager F. E. Barry entertained the squad of fifty-two York High school football players. Next among the seasonal ideas comes the football schedules, printed by the theatre. These give the dates, place and opponents of the local team. Some of them included on the schedule the entry, "Harold Lloyd vs. Blues," following this with the date of run and name of the theatre.

The essay contest conducted by Manager McGee of the Criterion proved highly profitable. A week before picture opened, the Oklahoma City Times printed notices to the effect that starting with opening day of "The Freshman," the Times would publish daily the three best contributions of seventy-five words each on the subject, "The Most Amusing Incident in My Freshman Year." Three winners were picked each day, each one receiving a pass for one for a period of one month at the Criterion Theatre. Each one of the fifteen winners for the week, and one friend, were the guests of the Times-Criterion at a box party on the closing night of the attraction.

The Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago, obtained many columns of publicity for "The Freshman" in the Chicago American through the donation of 100 valuable prizes of sporting goods, radio outfits and books in a football thrill contest, for the most interesting letters regarding "the greatest thrill you received in football while watching a contest."

Dreamland Theatre, New Albany, Miss., distributed a big circus herald on "The Freshman," with material taken from the Pathe pressbook.

A tie-up by the Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles, with the Owl Drug Stores in that city, forty in number, resulted in the popularizing of a new drink called the "Freshman Freeze."

Paper Launches a "Thank You" Party in Marion

In conjunction with the Marion Star, the Grand Theatre at Marion, Ohio, staged a "Thank You" party during the engagement of the picture of that title.

The newspaper announcements told that the Marion Star would hold a "Thank You" party Saturday morning at the Grand, where "Thank You" was showing, for any Marion children under fifteen years of age, who would walk up to the Grand doorman and say "Thank You."

So great was the outpouring of small kiddies that it became necessary to hold two performances. The second showing was decided upon promptly when the children of the Marion County Children's Home headed by the superintendent of the institution, arrived too late for the first performance. Eighteen hundred children in all were entertained at the two shows.

Charity Potato Matinee Held in Jersey City

One of the most successful exploitation stunts attempted in Jersey City took place Saturday morning, December 19, when the First Annual Potato Matinee for local charity was held at the Fulton Theatre. The matinee, at which admissions were paid for in potatoes resulted in a store of eighteen barrels of potatoes, which are to be distributed to the poor through the services of the Salvation Army Home for Girls, the Hebrew Orphans' Home and the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, of St. Paul's R. C. Church.

The matinee, which enlisted the assistance of newspapers and local charity organizations, was developed and executed by Fred H. Mertens, managing director of the Fulton Theatre Company, and Arnold S. Rittenberg, publicity director of the theatre.

In attending the matinee, children of the city paid their admissions with potatoes with the understanding that their gifts were for the poor. While only two potatoes were required as admission, it is interesting to note that the average for the matinee was five potatoes per child attending. The largest single contributor was Dominick Barbera, who brought a full sack of potatoes as his contribution.

As a result of the widespread favorable comment directed toward this first annual Potato Matinee, a report is current that all Jersey City theatres will subscribe to the idea next year.

Envelopes With Kerchiefs Herald "My Son"

When he booked Nazimova in "My Son," Manager Ray Wolf, of the Locust Theatre, Philadelphia, at once recalled that Nazimova is an emotional actress. With this idea in mind he set out among the handkerchief shops and secured 1,000 handkerchiefs at a very small cost. These he put in small envelopes, which were handed to the women patrons of the Locust. The envelope bore the following inscription: Ladies. You will need the enclosed handkerchief when you see Nazimova in 'My Son' at the Locust Theatre."

The "pointing finger" carries the billing in the novel ballyhoo used by the Regent theatre in Pittsburgh, for Paramount's "He's a Prince."

A Make-Up Demonstration In "Romola" Campaign

A "Stage and Screen Make-up Demonstration" arranged in a tie-up between the Capitol Theatre, Cincinnati, and a large department store of that city, and advertised in the Sunday papers in connection with the showing of "Romola," drew such crowds to the reception room of the store that the doors had to be closed and hundreds turned away.

H. S. Ansley, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer who conducted the stunt, followed it up with a shoe-fitting contest, awarding a small pair of slippers to the first lady who could put them on. The competition attracted vast interest and proved successful in exploiting the showing.

Stills from the picture and announcements of the run were exhibited in the Public Library with copies of the George Eliot novel on which the picture is based. Other windows featuring copies of the book were contributed by six drug and book stores.

Hyman Gives Free Xmas Parties For Kiddies

The Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre arranged three special holiday morning performances free of any charge to the children of New York and Brooklyn. Managing Director Edward L. Hyman presented these shows in conjunction with three newspapers, two of them in Brooklyn being the Daily Eagle and The Daily Times, and the remaining one in New York being the Evening World (Sophie Irene Loeb).

The first of the free performances was given on the morning of Thursday, December 24, in cooperation with the Daily Times of Brooklyn. The newspaper handled the distribution of the tickets and supplied presents and candy for the children.

The second of the free shows took place on the morning of December 25, in conjunction with the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. As with the Times, the newspaper handled the bulk of the details.

The free show in conjunction with Sophie Irene Loeb of the New York Evening World will be given on the morning of New Year's day. A different program from the other two will be given.

Theatres Cooperate on Ads For "The Freshman"

While cooperative advertising among exhibitors has probably not as yet been as general as cooperation among dealers in other lines, nevertheless there is now and then a striking instance of where showmen band together in their newspaper advertising.

Recently the Indianapolis Star carried a quarter-page advertisement on the Pathe-Lloyd comedy "The Freshman," in which 18 theatres appeared jointly.

The copy was headed "Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman.' See It at Your Neighborhood Picture House."

Then followed a list of the various theatres under North, East, South and West, referring to various sections of the city, after which appears an illustrated advertisement dealing specifically with the story.

At the left, the patients of the naval hospital in San Diego assembled in front of the Superba theatre where they were the guests of Manager Dwight Hill at a special matinee performance. Right, the float used in Los Angeles by Loew's State theatre. The float, by the way, joins the fleet of trans-continental ballyhoos, for it is to be drawn to New York.

Exhibitor's Idea Exchange

According to
G. M. Pedley

Manager of the Empress theatre,
Owensboro, Ky., the following campaign

which he used in connection with "The Lost World," proved a good business getter and a profitable investment of time and money.

A masked front, consisting of side panels of three sheets and a center piece of an easel with framed sheet 22 x 28 inches. The top of the mask was a painting of a prehistoric monster done in green and brown, with dark blue background. The mask was put in place Saturday night preceding the opening of the picture the following Wednesday. The overhead marquee billboard carried a banner.

A reproduction of the monster was painted on beaver board and put on an easel, with date of showing, standing eighteen feet high and six feet wide, in front of the theatre on the curbstone the day before and during the showing. The monster was done in colors from pink to brown.

A truck rigged as a float with 24-sheets for the sides, and a banner with the date for the back, was put on the streets two days before and during the showing. This also visited the schools and residence districts as well as the business districts.

All paintings were the art of a local artist. A newspaper campaign was launched two weeks in advance, with teasers and readers. Two sets of teaser postcards were sent out to the house mailing list, and heralds were distributed in the theatre several days before the showing.

According to
Hugh J. Smart

Manager of the Noble, Anniston, Ga., it paid him to increase his exploitation efforts for the showing of "The Freshman," on which he used twice the usual newspaper space and increased his billing considerably above the average, starting with various size posters ten days in advance of play date.

At this period of the campaign, Harold Lloyd novelties were distributed to school children and newsboys about town.

As guests of the theatre management, members of the local high school football team attended a showing of the photoplay, the stunt resulting in strong word-of-mouth advertising for the attraction. This was followed up by tie-up score-cards distributed to fans attending the local football game on opening day of picture.

During three day's run a man dressed to impersonate Lloyd in football attire, paraded the streets carrying a sign on his Exhibitor's Idea Exchange would like to know about it in order that the tried and tested stunts of showmanship may be passed on to other exhibitors. back advertising "The Freshman" at the Noble.

The above was augmented by several excellent window displays, the same being exhibited.

According to
C. R. McGowan

Of the Belmont theatre, Nashville, Tennessee, the following plans were effectively utilized in putting over his presentation of "Quo Vadis." A film trailer was used in advance of the opening as well as an advertising slide. The outside lobby of the theatre was neatly arranged with three-sheets, also occupying a conspicuous place in the wall frames. The smaller frames were attractively arranged with various sizes of photographs, also some stills from the production.

Some three thousand heralds were distributed. As an added attraction in connection with the picture screening, Manager McGowan presented Charles Hawkins, a boy "jazz" singer.

According to
Charles G. Branham

Manager of the Howard, Atlanta, unusually heavy advance newspaper advertising made the way easy for his big campaign on "The Pony Express." The newspaper displays in advance were immediately followed up by a strong billing campaign, which included the posting of 300 one-sheets, 103 three-sheets, 143 six-sheets, 32 twenty-fours, 200 window cards, 5,000 heralds, insert cards and photos. A huge painted banner also was used in the announcement campaign.

Cooperative tie-ups were arranged, at no cost to theatre. One, with the Black & White Cab Company, resulted in every one of their cabs carrying special advertising copy on the attraction in the spare tire on rear of cabs. Another with the Southeastern Express Company, included a special truck, its sides and back carrying huge cut-outs picturing thrilling scenes from the photoplay. Further cooperation was obtained from the Rogers chain of stores, who distributed heralds on the attraction.

A highlight of the campaign was a band of real Indians in full regalia, who in addition to riding about town on horseback, were featured in a typical western prologue at the Howard.

According to Ray Deusern

Manager of the Fox Terminal Theatre, Newark, N. J.,
the cooperation of the public libraries and schools greatly aided his campaign for "The Iron Horse" and proved to him that these institutions provide one of the finest mediums for reaching the public with regard to picture attractions having the qualities necessary for tie-ups of the kind.

The Newark schools cooperated with him to the extent of allowing the teachers to read on certain days a portion of "The Iron Horse" novelization in connection with history courses. The Library distributed thousands of "The Iron Horse" bookmarks.

Other features of his campaign included the posting of paper on ten stands in the business section—the Terminal does not ordinarily use stands. Twice the usual amount of newspaper space was used and there was a street ballyhoo of an old-time locomotive mounted on a motor truck. The music accompanying the picture was broadcast one evening through Radio station W.O.R.

San Francisco Hails The "Trackless Train"

The "Trackless Train," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's trans-continental ballyhoo de luxe, put into San Francisco recently and the sensational reception accorded it in Los Angeles was duplicated if not surpassed. The demonstration of greeting to the Train, which is credited with having accomplished astonishing exploitation stunts for theatres with which it was tied up in every city and town visited on the trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, was city-wide in scope and marked by an enthusiasm far out of the ordinary for events of this kind.

At the City Hall a large crowd headed by the High School Boys' Band greeted the train, and Mayor Rolph and a number of city officials welcomed it. Motion pictures and stills were taken of the Mayor receiving letters despatched to him in care of the train by Mayor Hylan of New York.

From the City Hall the special was escorted to the Market Street Ferry, whence it proceeded to tour the length of Market Street and other principal streets. It is estimated that 200,000 people viewed the Train in 'Frisco.

The trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco was a repeated series. Towns visited by the Train include Pasadena, Glendale, Burbank, San Fernando, Fillmore, Santa Paula, Oxnard, Ventura, Santa Barbara, Santa Maria, San Luis Obispo, Paso Robles, King City, Soledad, Salinas, San Jose, Pal Alto, Redwood City, San Mateo and Burlingame.

Bobbed Gray Heads Guests At "Bobbed Hair" Show

Instead of the usual "Flapper Party" that would ordinarily be staged in connection with the showing of such a film as "Bobbed Hair," Vic Gauntlett, advertising and publicity manager of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre recently staged a stunt in Seattle on this film that was hailed as decidedly original.

In conjunction with the Seattle Star, Mr. Gauntlett put across a "Gray Haired Bob" party, at which every woman in Seattle with gray bobbed hair was a guest of Manager Huge mail bag used as shadow-box display for Paramount's "The Pony Express" at the Strand, Birmingham. Through the aperture in the centre a western scene with a small horse and rider in motion was visible.

Hamrick at a special showing of the film one matinee. The only requirement was that the guest send in beforehand her name, address and age—all of which was kept strictly confidential.

The big feature of the performance was the donation of a season pass to the oldest bobbed head in the audience—in this instance a woman over 85 years of age. All told, the matinee numbered some 600 guests, including a majority over 50 years old. Needless to say, the stunt was good for much space in the Star, including two front page stories with two-column photographs of the eldest guests, the line of patrons, etc.

Mr. Gauntlett is a firm believer in putting over publicity stunts that will attract persons who ordinarily will not attend a certain picture, or type of film, and his staging of this "Gray Haired Bob" party was definite evidence of the correctness of his theory when properly applied.

Ties Up "Don Q" with New Junior Dept. of Paper

The enterprise of the Majestic theatre in Portland, Ore., in tying in with the starting of a new junior department of the Oregon Journal for special publicity on Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q" illustrates once more the possibilities which exist for the theatre management which is alive to special opportunities cropping up now and then in most every locality. The Majestic stunt comprised co-operation with the newspaper in the starting of the youngsters' page of the Journal by having Douglas Fairbanks made the honorary president of the society—a move which afforded the paper excellent material for "selling" the department.

The initial announcement stated that Douglas Fairbanks would be honorary president of the Journal Juniors, membership in which was open to all boys and girls between the ages of eight and fourteen. The newspaper devoted a column a week to matters of interest to boys and girls, including athletics, games, books and so forth. The newspaper issued invitations to the Journal Juniors to attend a free morning matinee of "Don Q" and also launched a movement for an athletic meet. This reached a climax when it was announced that Fairbanks had donated a white horse as the chief prize for the athletic competitions and that Mary Pickford had given a wrist watch as a special prize for the girls. The meet was worked up with ballyhoo centered about the horse and the selection of judges, etc. It netted the Majestic 31 days of steady "flash" publicity in the Journal, and it might be used as a model for other theatres in cities.

Messiter Prints Programs On Stock Heralds

H. M. Messiter, manager of the Parkway Theatre, Baltimore, has adopted the plan of using the small heralds issued by film companies for special productions, in the place of his usual programs, by having the various numbers printed on the back, when they can be obtained with special feature pictures. They were used when "The Pony Express" played there during the week beginning Monday, October 26.

Frontal display for "The White Monkey," First National's attraction, at the Capitol theatre, Seattle, Wash. Liberal use of cut-outs and some stills resulted in an elaborate arrangement which produced a pretentious effect.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Midnight Limited

(Rayart Pictures—5855 Feet)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HERE is one of the best railroad melodramas that this reviewer has witnessed in a long time and it looks like sure box office material for most theatres. There is an absence of exaggeration that some of the producers generally weave into stories of this type and it is therefore a safe picture to play up to railroad men. Some of the shots obtained of the fast moving express trains are extremely fine and the suspense in the latter part where a line of brakeless freight cars start their dizzy ride down a long incline, is very well handled. To Gaston Glass goes the credit for the biggest part, though he is ably supported by Wanda Hawley and Richard Holt. Sam Allen registers well as the crippled old station agent and the rest of the cast is excellent.

THEME. Railroad melodrama. Crook attempts to rob station, falls in love with girl and reforms. Foils bandit friends and wins out by preventing a wreck.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine shots of the fast trains. The runaway freight, the wreck of the bridge and ture railroad atmosphere. Good direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go after railroad patronage for this one will please them. Play up the names of Gaston Glass, Wanda Hawley and Richard Holt.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for all middle class, neighborhood and smaller theatres. May do well in some of the large houses.

SUMMARY. A fast moving railroad melodrama, finely photographed and directed. Plenty of thrills and the suspense is well carried out. The cast is excellent.

The Golden Strain

(Fox—5989 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD Westerner, harking back to days when Indians were giving the U. S. troops plenty of trouble; putting over a big barrage of thrills, offering a wealth of beautiful photography, and plot with original touches and sentimental lure. The outdoor views are exceedingly attractive, both long shots and close-ups being filmed with dazzlingly fine effect and director Victor Schertzinger's handling of the Indian skirmish scenes deserves unlimited praise. It's a hard matter to build up sympathy for a hero who shows the white feather when danger threatens, as does Lieutenant Mulford on his first active service mission. Fortunately there are other persons that do win sympathy, consequently the interest holds, even in the story's early stages. Of course, Mulford redeems himself in the long run, so a satisfactory climax is attained. Kenneth Harlan's performance in the leading male role is artistic, but he looks years too old for the part; Madge Bellamy and Hobart Bosworth are excellent; support adequate.

THEME. Western melodrama. Hero, U. S. lieutenant, shows fear in first skirmish with Indians, later redeems himself, helps repulse attack, wins girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good direction and acting. Colorful atmosphere. Indian fights. Attractive outdoor views. Romantic charm.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as forceful melo of Indian days. Feature Harlan, Bosworth, Miss Bellamy.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for any house where thrilling melodrama is in favor.

SUMMARY. A pleasing feature. Has lots of melodramatic pep, attractive color, sentimental appeal. Well directed and acted.

The Golden Strain (Fox)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE GOLDEN STRAIN," a rattling melodrama of hostile Indian days in the West, comes to the screen of the — Theatre on —. The picture is the last word in realism and vivid coloring, the Indian battles being depicted with extraordinary skill. There's a strong sentimental angle to the story which deals with the failure of a young lieutenant to make good in his first engagement, his remorse and temporary separation from the girl he loves. How he redeems himself furnishes the big punch of the film, in which Hobart Bosworth, Kenneth Harlan, Madge Bellamy and Ann Pennington play important roles.

Others in the cast are Lawford Davidson, Frank Beal, Frank McGlynn, Robert Frazer.

CATCH LINES

He was afraid of Fear, therefore Fear gripped him just when his nerve was worst needed. Followed disgrace, the loss of the girl he loved. But his manhood awoke in new perils; and he won out!

Three Faces East

(Producers Distributing Corp.—7419 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A VERY entertaining mystery melodrama of Secret Service, with war backgrounds, well acted and directed. Should prove a winning box office card for any theatre. There are abundant thrills, unceasing suspense and some extremely spectacular shots, such as the Zeppelin attack on London, dropping flaming bombs and being attacked in turn by the anti-aircraft guns, but best of all—the story is of absorbing interest, cleverly constructed, hard to anticipate, and in spite of its divers complications in the spying line, preserving smooth, unbroken continuity. Jetta Goudal plays a dual role, giving what is probably the best of her screen performances up-to-date, Robert Ames scores decisively in the hero part of gallant Lieutenant Bennett. When the latter comes home wounded he is greeted by his father, and here ensues a bit of emotional pantomime in which Henry Walthall, impersonating Bennett senior, without indulging in extravagant gestures, registers a wonderfully pathetic touch. Clive Brook is a knockout as the German spy, in fact the acting of the entire cast is way above average.

THEME. Melodrama, war and secret service backgrounds. Plot hinges on activities of British girl in Government employ, who loves German spy, but remains loyal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good direction, splendid atmosphere, thrills, suspense, romantic appeal. Zeppelin attack. Scenes behind lines. Fight in cellar. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can safely praise this as a great Secret Service melodrama, not a battle picture, but fine war backgrounds. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Has universal audience lure, good for any theatre.

SUMMARY. A thoroughly artistic and tremendously realistic picture, strong in romance, thrills and spectacular punches. Should hit box office target hard.

Mannequin

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE'S the story that won for Fannie Hurst $50,000 in the contest conducted by Liberty magazine, in co-operation with Paramount. The picture comes to exhibitors following an avalanche of publicity which should aid greatly in bringing business to the box office. The magazine also is publishing the serial. James Cruze was given the screen version job and he has made good. He has turned out a decidedly worth while picture, which tells an interesting romance of a beautiful mannequin whom destiny leads through a maelstrom of adventures before she finds peace and happiness with the man she loves and the parents whom she lost when a baby. Dolores Costello steals the acting honors. There is also a new face in the person of Walter Pidgeon, who is excellent in the role of Martin Innesbrook, Alice Joyce, Warner Baxter and Zasu Pitts contribute much to the entertaining qualities of the offering. Exhibitors should grab this one which already has been sold to the public. Its action is swift, its acting good.

THEME. Society drama. Spans years developing cloak model's life history.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The 1907 sequence and the abduction of Baby Joan. The scenes in the style shop. Killing of Allen. Trial and climax.

Free to Love

(B. P. Schulberg—4825 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

BASED on the good old reformed-crook-heroine theme, this picture lists as a fair enough program attraction. It shoots over a pungent thrill here and there, collects quite a little suspense and moves quickly. The plot isn't likely to carry conviction or make much appeal to critical audiences, but there's a large class of movie-goers that will respond favorably to its emotional stress and hectic situations without pausing to question its probability. Clara Bow is extremely pleasing to look at in the role of Marie, reformatory graduate who executes a Cinderella-like twist from poverty to riches, gets a wealthy guardian and niece young minister for fiance, determines to go straight in future—as she might well resolve under the conditions—but has a tough time breaking the strangle-hold her snaky past acquires. Earth's best actress couldn't make Marie a convincing character, but Miss Bow makes her an entertaining one, is well seconded by Donald Keith, and smoothly supported.

THEME. Crook melo. Heroine a reformatory product, is given chance to make good, gets engaged to minister, is hounded by former associates, but triumphs in end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Lively action. Development of love affair between heroine and Crawford. Scene where Marie is accused of murder. Tony's confession.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Clara Bow, Donald Keith. Bill as crook melo, stress regeneration idea and heroine's self-sacrifice.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for some neighborhood and all smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Average program attraction. Should please audiences not too particular regarding plot logic. Clara Bow acts well. Offers considerable thrills.

ONE of the most appealing romances ever filmed, aflame with melodramatic action and breathless suspense is offered by "Free to Love," which is listed as the big screen attraction at the _____ Theatre, on _____. His Secretary

(Metro-Goldwyn—6433 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CRISP, bright comedy shot through with winged arrows of satire directed at the "tired business man" target that hit the mark squarely, offering a farcical plot brimful of comic absurdities; this picture classes as decidedly good light entertainment and seems destined to run up healthy box office scores. It possesses laughing appeal for all species of movie-goers, but its cosmetics and "gladrags" theme, emphasizing the beauty parlor's efficiency, whereby it appears most any young person of the feminine persuasion can be turned into a modern Venus, carries especial interest for the women folks. So you can list "His Secretary" as a likely audience feature in the full sense of that much ill-used phrase. The sub titles are gems of wit, the action is zippy and Hobart Henley's direction all to the good. Miss Shearer shines brilliantly as the stenographic heroine, creating quite a sensation among the on-lookers when she switches her drap personality to that of a devastating beauty, Lew Cody and Louis Willard get a lot of fun out of their respective roles, and the support is O. K.

THEME. Comedy. Stenographer who dresses plainly and doesn't use makeup, achieves triumph by transforming herself at beauty parlor and winning employer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Snappy, brisk action. Principals' good work. Office scenes. Heroine's transformation after she visits beauty specialist. Love climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tieup with beauty shops is in order. Play up the "thousand dollars for one kiss" idea from story. Feature principals. Boost comedy values.

DRAWING POWER. Can't miss fire as laugh-getter. Good for any house anywhere.

SUMMARY. Very entertaining comedy, well directed and acted. Has beauty shop angle that will please feminine patrons and laughing appeal for all.

The Red Kimona

(Davis Distributing—Vital—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

MRS. WALLACE REID comes to the front once more with a picture dealing with one of civilization's most vital problems. It asks the question: "What chance of redemption has the woman who discards the red kimona?" and then proceeds to show that the chance is a very small one. Treating a daring subject in a delicate manner, Mrs. Reid has produced a filmpay that is rich in exploitation possibilities. It is a production of the type of "Human Wreckage," and "Broken Laws," and looks like a sure fire box office success. Priscilla Bonner is seen in the principal role and deserves much credit for the appealing characterization she has painted. The supporting cast has been carefully selected. There is nothing objectionable in any of the sequences, so deftly directed that not even the most prudish could object. The offering is rich in dramatic situations, has a goodly quota of thrills and a climax that will send everyone away feeling better for having seen this unusual production.

THEME. A modern society drama dealing with a girl who redeemed herself after having been cast away by her lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Priscilla Bonner's character portrait. The trial sequence. The reception. The girl's search for aid after being turned out. Her return to old life in New Orleans. Her injury as she seeks to evade a bestial drunkard.

(F. B. O.—4911 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THEY'VE given Dick Talmadge a fantastic yarn here, which, in defiance of all the laws of probability, still manages to be entertaining and registers as a good attraction of its kind. It furnishes just the sort of stuff needed to exploit the athletic prowess of the agile star, gets a good measure of laughs, explodes the melodramatic dynamite with staggering force, and whirls into a smashing and, of course, happy finish. The story has more substance to it than usually figures in Richard Talmadge pictures, and while its main appeal lies in the comedy jolts and physical thrills, succeeds in generating quite a bit of sympathetic interest. The slum atmosphere is capital and Talmadge, as usual, performs all kinds of elastic acrobatic stunts with devil-may-care ease. He also does some effective acting, especially in the scene where he first meets Marion on the waterfront, after his escape from drowning. Nola Luxford is a pleasing heroine. Brinsley Shaw scores as the villainous Powell.

THEME. Melodrama. Young physician loses memory through head injury, turns crook, robs rich to help poor, is shocked back into own identity and wins pretty wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Talmadge's stunts. Comedy situations. Near-drowning scene. Slum atmosphere. Heroine's abduction. Free-for-all fight at close.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Talmadge's astounding stunts. Tell patrons he's funnier and more of a dare-devil than ever. Bill as fast action, romantic melo.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever Talmadge is favorite or thrill stuff holds 'em.

SUMMARY. Another red-hot action Talmadge melodrama, with good comedy relief and romance that awakens sympathy. Star's stunt work scores big hit. They'll eat this up wherever thrill melo is in demand.

THE CAST

The Prince of Broadway

(Chadwick Pictures Corp.—5800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ARIPPING prize fight melodrama that should please the average fan and make an especial appeal to the members of the sporting contingent. There's a better and less stereotyped plot to this one than is usually offered by pictures dealing with doings in the modern arena; they've managed to inject quite a bit of human interest into the story, which also points the obvious moral that the bright lights of Broadway do not provide a wholesome atmosphere for a champion pug to bask in. Director John Gorman has kept the action moving at top speed throughout and handled the scrapping and training episodes admirably. Besides the celebrated ex-world's champion, Jim Jeffries, a whole host of former titleholders in fistiana are introduced in the final reel, whose more or less battered countenances the old-timers will be glad to peek at. George Walsh boxes well, plays the hero with commendable energy, and is well supported. Alyce Mills is a very charming heroine.

THEME. Middleweight champion boxer, down and out through careless living, is aided by actress, his former sweetheart, redeems himself, wins title and girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Snappy action, well staged fight scenes, thrills when hero dodges would-be kidnappers, romantic appeal. Principals' good acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Walsh and Alyce Mills. Bill as exciting prize fight melo, with heart interest and thrills. Make a play for the sporting fans.

DRAWING POWER. Good in any community where the boxing lure, plus romantic angle, holds patrons.

SUMMARY. Hits up a fast pace, delivers the thrills and suspense. A good melodrama of prizing, with love story that has sentimental appeal.

A BIG thrill melodrama of the prizing, with a strong romantic angle, "The Prince of Broadway," is scheduled as the main screen attraction at the — Theatre on —. George Walsh and Alyce Mills are featured, the former portraying a champion who loses his title through careless living, is helped by his former sweetheart to redeem himself, and does so by knocking out his conqueror and also winning back the girl he loves.

A red-hot action film in which the star and leading lady give wonderful performances. Additional interest centers in the appearance during the final reel of a number of celebrated ex-champions. A brilliant supporting cast is in evidence.

CATCH LINES

The Prince is dead, long live the Prince! "The Prince of Broadway" makes a sensational return to his palace, the arena. See George Walsh as the champion who loses his throne but regains it.

George Walsh, star of "The Count of Luxembourg," a Chadwick production.

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THEDA BARA comes back to the screen with physical charm undiminished, despite the swift passage of the years, and displaying much of the emotional power and dramatic ability that distinguished her in the past. Her former admirers will O. K. this statement, and it would be pleasing if one could truthfully brand "The Unchastened Woman" as a notable production. But justice compels the verdict that it is unworthy the talents of the star. Whatever may have been the merits of Louis K. Anspacher's drama as a stage attraction, it doesn't register audience appeal on the screen. Nothing damns a picture so effectually from the box office standpoint as failure to excite sympathetic response from the spectators. And none of the characters either deserve or receive a shred of sympathy. The husband is a cad, his mistress a gold-digging little rat, and not even Miss Bara's really splendid acting wins pity or approval for the deceived wife. Also, the direction is poor and continuity a flabby mess.

THEME. Domestic drama, society atmosphere. Wife finding husband unfaithful, goes abroad, keeps birth of baby boy secret, returns, humiliates her rival, arouses husband's jealousy, wins him back, forgives him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Miss Bara's excellent acting. Side-plays of sarcastic humor. Scene where she is searched at customs. Venetian views. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Star best advertising asset. Feature as former queen of screen vamps, play up return to films. Go light on story praise.

DRAWING POWER. May pass as program attraction; won't suit critical audiences.

SUMMARY. Except for personal magnetism and all-around good work of star, this lists as an ordinary feature. A society, domestic drama lacking sympathetic lure.

THE CAST

Caroline Knollys.....	Theda Bara
Hubert Knollys.....	Wyndham Standing
Emily Madden.....	Eileen Percy
Susan Ambie.....	Mayme Kelso
Hildegard Sanbury.....	Dale Fuller

Olympia Theatre in Boston, who managed the three Brock houses during Mr. Cahill's vacation, is now back devoting his whole time to the Olympia.

Extensive alterations are to be made to the Sterling Theatre in Derby, Conn. Plans for the changes are being drawn by Smith, Kinne & Palmer and the work will cost about $25,000. The entire proscenium wall will be fire-proofed, a new asbestos curtain will be installed and a sprinkler system put in.

A Successful Showman Gives His Rules For Lobby Displays

Uses Lobby To Sell Show To The Shopping Public

A correspondence interview
With A. G. Stolte

(Editor's Note—In the effort to learn the opinion of a leading showman as to proportionately what importance the lobby displays play in the advertising scheme of a theatre, THEATRE MANAGEMENT interviewed by mail A. G. Stolte, manager of the Capitol at Des Moines and widely recognized as one of the foremost showmen of the country. Mr. Stolte's answers to our questions developed many highly informative points with regard to lobby displays and they should prove valuable to his fellow exhibitors.)

IN answer to the question "have you ever had any tangible examples of the effectiveness of lobby displays in aiding the box office?" Mr. Stolte emphatically replied in the affirmative, declaring that the selling power of good displays has been very evident at the box office many times. And describing what he considers an effective lobby, Mr. Stolte cited a display for "Sally of the Sawdust" which was used at the Capitol.

"For this lobby," he says, "we used across the front of the theatre a canvas covering like a circus tent, also carrying this down across the entrance to the theatre. At the same time, we tied the circus idea, or rather the tent idea, up in our newspaper ads. To be perfectly frank, our lobby means considerable in the present days of showmanship, and every wide awake exhibitor is trying to sell his product through lobby displays more than ever before. We find that the majority of the public are shopping. Sell your goods today—tomorrow never comes."

We asked Mr. Stolte if he found that the press books of the distributors furnished useable suggestions for lobby displays. "As a rule," he says, "the press book does provide a good source for lobby suggestions, but many times the press book exaggerates and sets forth theories and ideas which it is impossible for certain theatres to adopt. Of course, it depends considerably on the class of house for which the display is designed. As a rule, however, I would say the press book material on lobby displays—those press books which do offer suggestions that is—has definite value for the theatre manager."

"Newspaper and lobby displays," Mr. Stolte holds, "should coincide in every incident. It is good advertising theory and has a strong selling point, this means of hitting the public twice instead of once."

"We have no fixed rule with regard to the desired points of appeal to feature in lobby displays other than trying to keep them in a high class atmosphere—using many times electric cut-out effects, but in every case using more of the newspaper stills than the one-sheets sent out by the exchange."

"I would say that the average one-sheet that the film companies put out has no more resemblance to the star or scenes in the picture than day resembles night. Stills seem to attract the public much more than the regular one-sheet."

In common with a great many exhibitors, Mr. Stolte feels that the lack of true likenesses of stars and players in the poster material imposes a severe handicap on the theatre man when it comes to making lobby displays. The vivid colors sought as an essential element of good posters, appears to be one of the main obstacles confronting the lithographer in reproducing portraits. The fact that in the picture business, posters must serve a double purpose—that of attracting attention at distances when used as outdoor billing, and decorative selling displays in lobbies—presents a difficulty which distributors are trying to solve. But it appears that the real solution of the problem lies in the manufacture of "bigger and better" stills, both in black and white, sepia tones and special color processes.

One of the vital elements of lobby displays, Stolte insists, is the direct tie up between the atmosphere or character of the display and the newspaper and other advertising. In this respect, the lobby is, like the poster, merely "reminder copy," which causes a direct association in the minds of the public between the object before them and the sales argument which has been driven home to them in the newspaper copy.

THEATRES FOR 1926

FROM a reliable source (The Architectural Forum) comes the forecast that 1926 will be another record year for building construction,—and that theatres are to receive their share. Approximately $175,000,000 will be spent for 1645 new houses, and this figure does not include the cost of sites and equipment.

As this industry is accustomed to representing the cost of theatres in terms of total investment, this figure for the 1926 program should be increased by many millions.

How much longer this tremendous scale of building in this industry will continue is a subject receiving much discussion. When the rapid changes in character of shows and taste of modern audiences are considered, it would appear that this building and renovating campaign would continue until the theatre field is practically rebuilt. To do this is placing the termination of heavy construction in the remote future.

Far reaching is the effect of modern motion picture theatres on this industry, both as to its high standing and volume of business. The remarkable strides that have been accomplished in the building, appointing and equipping of the better theatres has placed this phase of the industry far in the lead. What further will be accomplished along these same lines in the future, time alone will disclose. It seems, judging from the developments of the past, that no limits can be placed for the theatre of tomorrow.

Therefore giving due weight to the various considerations, it appears safe to predict even greater building activities in this field during the coming years. And unless 1927 brings with it business depression, a new building record exceeding that of 1925 and the forecast for 1926 should be made.

A NEW TYPE OF PRESENTATION

Finale of the "Parisian Gaieties" number staged with Universal's "The Phantom of the Opera" at the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre, New York. The number is a complete miniature musical comedy using a cast of 75 artists and with libretto and score especially written for it.

B. S. Moss Announces Elaborate Acts Will Be Continued; Lavish "Parisian Gaieties" Second Of Series

WITH the presentation of "The Phantom of the Opera" at the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre in New York, the second of a series of elaborate combination programmes was offered Broadway theatregoers. The stage number which accompanies "The Phantom of the Opera" is called "Parisian Gaieties," a musical review, tying in with the picture only in the regard that it too has Paris as a locale for the dancing and songs, and providing a complete entertainment of the revue type.

"Parisian Gaieties" has a cast of 75, a specially designed full stage setting and presents libretto and score especially written for it. Thus it is in every regard, a complete stage production.

Speaking of the new policy, B. S. Moss said:

"Prologues consisting of Ballet dances, vocal or instrumental solos, and the like are soon to be things of the past. The public wants something vastly different. To that end we have presented productions that were not merely vaudeville acts tossed hap-hazardly together for review, but miniature musical comedy productions with lyrics and music specialty written; cos-

Is the prologue, as an embellishment to presentations of photoplays in first class picture theatres, passing out of existence B. S. Moss, owner of several theatres devoted to pictures and pictures and vaudeville in New York, says the prologue consisting of ballet dances, vocal or instrumental solos, etc., are to be things of the past within a very short time.

Commenting on the new type of combination program—miniature musical comedy and photoplay offerings—now instituted as a set policy of the Colony Theatre, New York, Mr. Moss says the public wants something vastly different from the prologue once accepted as entirely sufficient in combination with a feature photoplay.

As an earnest of his belief that more elaborate stage productions are required at theatres of the type of the Colony, Mr. Moss is presenting there "Parisian Gaieties," a musical number using a cast of 75 artists and having a libretto and score especially written for it, in conjunction with "The Phantom of the Opera." The current bill is now in its sixth week and a substantial run is still before it. The production was staged at a cost of about $5,000. The number is more pretentious than the "Campus Frolics" which was presented with "The Freshman" and which ran for ten weeks. Moreover, Mr. Moss states the number which will succeed "Parisian Gaieties" will be done on an even more elaborate scale. He is convinced he says that this form of entertainment is the sort that the public now demands.

times specially designed and executed; scenery specially devised; in short, the same care and direction were given these productions as are usually devoted to a three hour musical comedy."

The success of this double offering as evidenced by the business being done and the public approval met with, has confirmed his judgment that the kind of motion picture theatre entertainment he started with Harold Lloyd in the "Freshman" and the stage presentation "Campus Capers" with 35 artists, is the type of entertainment motion picture theatregoers are willing to support. This program ran for ten weeks at the Colony, and now with the present double program of "The Phantom of the Opera" starring Lon Chaney and "Parisian Gaieties" with 75 in the cast, both in their fifth week with the prospect of several weeks more to run, there is still more evidence of such a program's popularity.

The Colony Theatre has the distinction of being the first theatre to present offerings of this type in New York City. That this is the coming policy for motion picture theatres, is shown by the plans that other Broadway Movie Houses are making for elaborate stage presentations in conjunction with their photoplays.

Produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Moss and offered in conjunction with "The Phantom," the current bill at the Colony is one of the most pretentious entertainments attempted by a first class motion picture house in the east.

The show was staged by Harry Shaw and Jerry De Rosa with musical direction

Says Stage Settings Will be More Elaborate

IN every large city by next spring, motion picture theatres with settings superior to any now in the country, will be a reality, asserts Frank L. Newman, managing director of Paramount West Coast theatres, who was in Kansas City, his former home, for a visit last week.

"Individual theatres now use stage settings which cost about $250 to construct each week," Mr. Newman said. "Along with a move already under way by Paramount, it will not be uncommon to see theatres spending $10,000 and $15,000 on a single set."

Mr. Newman was in Kansas City on his way to Los Angeles from New York, where he was in conference with Paramount officials.

Presents "Hamlet" Scene in Modern Dress

One of the greatest of recent stunts in a moving picture house of Canada was the tie-up which was arranged by John Arthur, director of presentations for Famous Players Canadian Corp., in staging an act from "Hamlet" in modern dress and settings during the week of December 14, in conjunction with the presentation on the screen of "We Moderns," starring Colleen Moore. The idea of the modernized version of the Shakespeare drama was directly associated with the title of the photoplay "We Moderns" in advertising details. The "Hamlet" act was given twice daily by the De la Salle Dramatic Society of Toronto. This was the first time in the Dominion that a Shakespeare play had been presented with modern atmosphere, following out the idea introduced in New York City of staging Shakespeare with 1925 arrangements. The stunt caused a sensation all around Toronto.

Musical Revues With Films Introduced by Colony

by Andre Dore, the specially written libretto and score, by George Bennett and Jack Glogau, costumes by Charles Le Maire, and the scenery was designed by Irving Eastman.

The story in brief of "Parisian Gaities" is as follows:

Once a year the Parisian boulevards are closed in order that the students of the Sorbonne and other universities along with artists of the Latin Quarter, may make merry in their annual carnival. Wandering minstrels, clowns, jugglers, acrobats, musicians, singers, and gypsies, come from all parts of France to participate and profit thereby. A replica of this carnival has been put upon the Colony Theatre stage with all the color and vividness seen at the Parisian Mardi-Gras.

Incidentally the Colony Theatre has mechanical provision sufficient to handle any intricate stage production which might be interpolated into future programs. Every modern facility was provided so that a stage presentation of any size and proportion could be advantageously staged without the necessity of closing and reconstructing the theatre.

Four Permanent De Luxe Poster Stands At A Cost of $80

Feat of C. L. McVey, Kansas Showman

By Frank C. True

C.L. McVey, manager of the Dreamland and Eagle's theatres, Herrington, Kas., is an exhibitor who has only one way of doing things—the right way. And he gets the most out of everything at the least expense.

C. L. McVey

There is not an exhibitor in the Kansas City territory who would deny that Mr. McVey is one of the most energetic showman in his state. Not long ago he went to the city council of his town and offered to provide the city with large waste paper receptacles on the streets, providing he would be permitted to use three sides of the cans for advertising purposes. The council passed an ordinance authorizing Mr. McVey to place the cans on the street. The cans, which cost $20 each, were made to be an exact fit for a one-sheet. Four of them were purchased by Mr. McVey—a total advertising expense of $80—and placed in front of the post office, the principal bank and choice vantage points. On the lids of the cans were painted: "Keep the City Clean." So tightly did Mr. McVey "sew up" the town by winning the good will of the public and city officials in the community of 4,000 people that four managers of the Eagle's theatre "came and went" within ten months, then the theatre, as a last stand, was leased to Mr. McVey.

But obtaining a "corner" on advertising by waste paper cans is not the only effective means this live wire showman has of packing patrons into his theatre. Each month a monthly calendar of the two theatres is printed, showing all features, comedies and other details of the program for the month and mailed to a circulation, which takes in nine surrounding towns and all of the rural territory.

On top of the Dreamland theatre is a roof garden, used during the summer only. If it should rain, convenient arrangements are made whereby the patrons descend into the theatre for the remainder of the show. Both theatres are equipped with powerful Hope-Jones pipe organs and no comfort is denied patrons. A large stage for novelties, a ladies' rest room that would rival a theatre in a town ten times the size of Herrington and a windmill fan cooling system on the roof garden are among the features of the Dreamland.

Admission prices range from 10, 25, 30 at the Eagle's to 10, 25, 35 at the Dreamland. In Mrs. McVey Mr. McVey contends he has an assistant manager who is more adept at handling the business than he is. Although more than 4,000 copies of the calendar are distributed over an eighteen-mile radius each month, Mr. McVey also uses newspaper space in two local weeklies.

In short, this showman is a man who has become such an important cog in his town that, figuratively, all he has to do is to wave his wand and the sun glistens forth its acknowledgment.

Orpheum at K. C. Reverts to One-Week Programs

The Orpheum theatre, Kansas City vaudeville and motion picture house, which tried out a two-week policy this season, will revert back to its former policy of one week, Lawrence Lehman, manager, announced this week. Two weeks of one program has not proved popular with patrons, it was said.

St. James, Boston's Newest Theatre, Opens Other Zone Activities

THE newest of Boston's motion picture theatres opened Monday, Dec. 21, when the St. James Theatre on Huntington Avenue, in the Back Bay section, opened under the Keith-Albee management. Unlike many of the new playhouses, and particularly those of the Keith-Albee circuit, this latest playhouse is not one noticeable for its great size, but instead for its hominess, the matter of size being deliberately sacrificed to that of coziness.

Originally a stock playhouse, the St. James Theatre was purchased by the Keith-Albee interests early last summer and the extensive alteration work was started at that time and has just been completed. The playhouse becomes one of the group of first run houses in the Back Bay district, where the Fenway and Loew's State theatres are already located. It is the first Keith-Albee house to be located outside the shopping district.

The New England Theatre Operating Co. has opened the new Regent Theatre at Norfolk Downs, with a seating capacity of nearly 2,000. The theatre is one of the most modern and best equipped of any in the suburbs. The company operating it already operates the Modern and Beacon theatres in Boston, both first run houses; the Dudley and Criterion in Roxbury, the Rialto in Roslindale, the Jamaica in Jamaica Plain, the Shawmut on Blue Hill Avenue, and the Morton on Morton Street, all in suburban Boston.

P. Vartigian is to build a new theatre in Somerville from plans prepared by James Tuck, 439 Park Square Building, Boston. The new theatre will be located at 303 Broadway, with auditorium and one balcony and a mezzanine floor. It will be of brick and limestone construction and will have a seating capacity of about 1,600.

John C. Kiley and Edward F. Cassell, Boston realtors, are planning the erection of a motion picture theatre at Char'lon, Green and Pitts streets in that section of Boston which has recently undergone extensive changes through the widening of the streets, resulting in a practically new business section. If plans go through, it is understood that the new theatre will be one of the largest in Boston.

One Company Schedules $30,000,000 for Theatres

R. LEVINE & CO., INC., E. P. Ruppert, Architect, and Samuel Klein, Consulting Engineer, Chicago, announce $30,000,000 worth of theatre work for 1926, consisting of twenty-seven theatres. Six of these theatres to be erected in St. Louis, Mo., of which two are now under construction and the other four will be started within 90 days. The total cost of these theatres being $4,500,000. The seating capacities of these theatres to range from 2,000 to 3,500.

There will be nine theatres erected in Chicago at a total cost of $12,000,000 with seating capacities ranging from 2,200 to 4,000. In Toledo, Ohio, a 16-story office building and a 3,300 seat theatre in conjunction with same, at a total cost of $4,500,000, work to start March 15th, 1926.

It is planned to build at 89th Street and 1st Avenue, New York City, for Mr. Charles O'Reilly a 2,500 seat theatre and 10-story apartment building at a cost of $2,000,000, the work to start January 20th, 1926.

R. Levine & Co., have reorganized, increasing their force and now have in their organization W. P. Whitney, Architect, E. P. Ruppert, Architect, in full charge of plans and specifications; Louis Harris, Travelling Superintendent, J. T. Gohman in charge of letting all contracts, General Superintendent and Rubin Levine, general promoting and financing.

Two More New Theatres For San Francisco

One of the oldest sections of the Mission district is the site of San Francisco's newest theatre, to be erected immediately by Alex E. Levin and associates on 24th street, between Hampshire and York. The theatre will seat 1500 and will cost with equipment about $250,000. Architecturally the theatre will conform to a style suggested by the Spanish history of the State. A ratio will supplant the usual entrance lobby forming a right angle or "L" with the auditorium. The marquee and arch at the street line will mark the entrance.

Another theatre building will be built at the corner of Taraval and 29th Ave., San Francisco, at a cost of approximately $250,000, for the Blumenfeld Theatre Circuit.

A machine made by the Duplex Motion Picture Industries, Inc., for the measurement of film.

Hoffman Plans New Theatre For Derby, Conn.

Construction of a thoroughly modern motion picture house with a seating capacity of 1,200 will be started on Elizabeth street, Derby, Conn., as soon as climatic conditions permit, with a view of having it ready for opening by early fall, according to announcement of Israel J. Hoffman, proprietor of the Capitol theatre in the neighboring city of Ansonia and prominently identified with other like interests throughout southern New England. Plans for the new house will be completed and contracts let during the winter so work may be inaugurated during the early spring. Whether the building will be devoted exclusively to housing of the theatre or be a combination playhouse-business block has not been announced. While the theatre will be intended as an exclusively motion picture house, it will be so arranged that it may be converted into one of the combination vaudeville or legitimate type, temporarily or for permanent use, at any time, should indications be that the city would support it. The Capitol theatre is operated as a combination motion picture-vaudeville house.

With completion of the proposed Hoffman playhouse, it is indicated John R. Shields, Derby representative and for approximately a decade manager of the Sterling theatre in Derby city hall, will take over the managership. The Sterling, for several years, has been rented from month to month by Hoffman for a motion picture house. Agitation, headed by Mayor Frank J. Conway, is now under way to have the Sterling theatre space extensively renovated, converted into a high class motion picture house and municipal auditorium and leased to some theatrical interests annually or for a term of years. William J. Smith, Derby architect, is now engaged in making plans for the changes needed, specifications of which will be submitted to the aldermen of that city and board of apportionment. It is considered likely a bond issue will be requested to finance the necessary changes. It is indicated the Hoffman announcement to build will have no effect upon present municipal plans.

Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga. Entirely Overhauled

Loew's Grand Theatre formally made its bow to the public last week in rejuvenated splendor, the result of months of work by decorators, painters, art directors and buyers. The theatre was in daily operation during the course of refinishing, all work being done at nights and before the daily performances; but until it was completely finished this week the great change and improvement in the interior of the house was not made fully apparent.

Entering the lobby, the first change is noted in the bright and fresh-looking lobby displays; inside the foyer the new note of beauty everywhere is manifested. The carpeting of specially woven Bundar is soft under foot; heavy velour hangings of blue accentuate the gleaming-white woodwork, and the pale, gold gauze draperies on the doors are softened by amber colored baby spots. Several handsome pieces of antique and art furniture give dignity to the whole, and in the Spanish costumes of the ushers and attendants the color scheme of blue and gold is attractively combined. The ladies' lounge is thoroughly pleasing with walls covered entirely in cream silk draperies. A King Tut sofa lends an air of elegance and richness to the room.

A particularly attractive antique, which now graces the foyer, is the grandfather's clock, an importation from France made in 1720. It is considered by experts one of the finest examples of its type. The piece was found in a quaint antique shop in New Orleans.

The interior decoration of Loew's Grand was designed by Miss Anna H. Dornin of New York, and executed under her direction. Miss Dornin, who is one of the foremost authorities in this country on theatre decoration, is associated with Thomas W. Lamb of New York.

High Speed De Brie Camera Has Special Features

Several new features are to be found on the latest model De Brie high-speed motion picture camera just received from France.

One is a direct focusing tube with which the operator may look through the lens and see his image right side up, magnified nine times, enabling him to get correct focus and to see that it is taking in his view.

Another feature of the new De Brie is a dial which shows the operator how many pictures per second he is making, and the number of times normal at which the pictures are registering. The speed ranges from 3 to 15 times normal, and the number of pictures from 48 to 240 per second.

The light weight of this camera ((22 lbs.) makes it especially attractive for field work.

A supply of these new De Bries has been received by the American distributors, the Motion Picture Apparatus Co., New York City.

Cardina Draws Plans For New Buffalo Theatres

James Cardina, owner of the Varsity and Kensington theatres in Buffalo and the Glen in Williamsville, is having plans drawn for his new 2500-seat house on Bailey avenue near Delavan. Oakley & Chamot of Buffalo are the architects. Jim says the stage will be 30 feet deep, 100 feet wide and 70 feet to the top of the fly loft. The proscenium opening will be 50 by 30. The house will be one of the largest community theatres in western New York. Mr. Cardina expects to have his remodeled Glen theatre ready for Williamsville folk on Christmas Day. Jim's brother, Thomas, will manage the Glen.

Standardized Screen Brightness Part VI

FEW persons are aware of the tremendous loss of light which is incurred by the average motion picture screen as far as the directing of picture light to the viewing area is concerned.

It is true that in terms of "over-all efficiency"—percentage of incident light reflected over all angles—practically all of the available screens run fairly high, 70-80 per cent being common figures. Of the total light reflected by a screen, only a comparatively small amount is useful, the remainder being wasted under any given conditions.

Only that solid angle subtended by the viewing area (not counting the gaps presented by the space between balconies and main floor level) from the center of the screen represents useful light. This solid angle is quite small compared with the total solid angle over which the screen reflects its incident light. Especially so since the planes of the viewing areas (main floor and balconies) make extremely acute angles with the horizontal center-line of the screen.

The inefficiency of screens acts as a powerful deterrent to prevent the standardization of screen brightness in the various theatres of the country.

Ideal Screen

From a purely theoretical standpoint, which holds forth but little promise of its ever being realized, motion picture screens should be so designed and constructed that for any given viewing conditions (size of viewing area, location, angle of its plane to center-line of screen, etc.) all of the light reflected from the screen should be confined within the solid angle subtended by the viewing area and, furthermore, this light should be reflected in approximate accordance with Lambert's Cosine Law. This law was described in detail in an earlier article on Optics.

Were these conditions to be met, every person in that particular theatre (seated within the prescribed viewing area) would then see a picture of exactly the same brightness regardless of distance or angle. Also, the picture would be of maximum brightness for the particular conditions involved.

Present day motion picture screens fall so wide of hitting this mark that it seems almost silly to make the comparison. The only extent to which control over the light distribution is obtained from their surfaces is to make the character of the reflection fall in one of these three broad groups: Diffusing, spread, and reflecting.

Gradations from one type to another are also to be had but aside from such elementary control, little effort seems to have been made to secure that control which would make a large part of the reflected light fall within the seating area angle.

The Right Direction

One attempt to secure ideal screen performance met with a certain amount of success and some rather surprising results in the way of screen brightness were obtained. The surface of the screen was comprised of many small reflecting beads, the contours of which were computed for each condition of viewing. Excellent results were obtained at long distances but at short range the screen fell short of expectations so that it became essentially, an outdoor advertising screen. Of recent, little has been heard of it.

Apparently, other efforts, along various lines, have met with little success since no screen of such type has appeared on the market for any length of time. It is unfortunate that this is so since a screen of this type would form a very useful adjunct to the motion picture system, and what is more pertinent, would bring this matter of standardized screen brightness one step nearer realization.

Energy Requirements of Screens

Motion picture screens are called upon to meet a variety of conditions ranging from very narrow houses to those of extreme width. The difference between screens is essentially one of light distribution in which the horizontal plane is favored. The various distributions of light necessary are obtained by using diffusing screens in wide houses, spread reflecting screens in medium width houses and highly reflecting screens in narrow houses.

Now it should be obvious that in a narrow theatre using a highly reflecting type of screen, a much brighter picture over the viewing area, can be obtained for a given amount of electrical energy than is possible with any other type of screen. Or, to put it the other way about, for a given average brightness of screen, less energy will be required in a narrow theatre using a reflecting screen than for any other screen. From this, it immediately follows that where theatres are extremely wide, thus necessitating the use of a highly diffusing type of screen, for any given brightness, a maximum of energy as compared with other screens, will be required to illuminate it.

It was shown last week that electrical energy used for projection purposes can be translated into terms of radiated energy passing through the aperture so that for any given screen brightness, or intensity, the diffusing type of screen, supplying a wide viewing area unit light will render necessary a much greater illumination of the film at the aperture, with consequent increase in heat energy, than will be required by a spread reflecting screen supplying a medium width house or a reflecting screen in a narrow house.

Changes Necessary

So once again we see that the thing which is desired is not, after all, a standard screen intensity as far as projection is concerned, but rather a constant film illumination.

It would be a simple enough matter to obtain a fairly constant screen intensity under all ordinary conditions of projection as now encountered since this is but a matter of choosing the proper light sources and optic elements and then adjusting them to secure desired results.

Such a procedure, it is true, would result in certain improvements if applied over the country since some theatres would then have their screen intensities lowered while many would have them increased.

Probably the principal advantage would be in the fact that the theatre patrons would at least see pictures within a narrow range of brightness instead of being forced to view the extremes at present encountered.

As far as the matter of constant illumination of the film at the aperture is concerned, however, narrower limits on film density, projection distance and width of theatres will have to be brought into play before any appreciable good can result from establishing a standard of some kind.

With the present wide variations in the two last named items and which by the way, are increasing more each year, there seems but little hope that a true standardization in any sense of the word can be effected.

For the present, it would seem that a constant film density and narrow limits of screen illumination intensity should be concentrated upon in order to limit, if possible, "over-shooting" in the larger theatres and "under-shooting" (if such terms can be used) in the smaller houses.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Sally, Irene and Mary," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol, New York.

Herald-Tribune: "We saw the play on Broadway as a musical comedy several years ago the picture seems to us much more interesting."

Evening Journal: "Sally, Irene and Mary" at the Capitol is good entertainment of the type that has pretty girls, scenes backstage in a Broadway musical comedy, and the type of situations that make the folks back home shake their heads in confirmation of all their doubts and then go to see the picture a second time. The production is lavishly staged, the cast is well chosen and Sally O'Neil is a cute little trick with a magnetic screen personality who ought to be great in pictures."

Telegram: "All the ingredients that make for happiness in the box office." Also, "This musical comedy has lent itself to some genuinely diverting film entertainment. The languorous and lovely Constance Bennett is seen to advantage in the role of Sally, Irene is carefully portrayed by Joan Crawford and Sally O'Neil, who is cast as Mary, is certainly a welcome newcomer to filmdom. She has personality and good looks and the brains to turn both to a good screen account."

Mirror: "Yea, verily, SOME movie!"

"Grand Duchess and Waiter"—Paramount, McVickers, Chicago American: "Credit Mal St. Clair with another success. This clever director, who made 'Are Parents People?', has turned out another winner. True, St. Clair was aided by some exceptionally good players, notably Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor. Besides, Menjou's role is a perfect fit, and when Menjou's characterization is of the kind in which he is seen to his best advantage, you are assured many great moments. The situations are good and they are perfectly handled. Miss Vidor never looked more charming."

Herald-Examiner: "I should have enjoyed applauding Adolphe Menjou for his performance in 'The Grand Duchess and the Waiter,' but nobody else seemed to think of it, and I feared to clap my hands alone lest one of the lordly ushers at McVickers should show me the gate."

"I should have enjoyed applauding Florence Vidor, too, for the serene insolence and beauty of her duchess. But nobody would lend a helping hand."

"At this writing Mr. Menjou is my and Michael Arlen's favorite rascal of the magic lantern."

Daily News: "In a hurry to go a-shopping for Christmas gifts, yet faithful to the stern duty of informing you of the merits and demerits of 'The Grand Duchess and the Waiter,' this reviewer decided he'd watch it until he was certain how it would finish and then depart with the time of two reels to his credit."

"That's what he thought when he dropped into a seat at McVickers just as Paul Ash and his Gang wound up their celebration in a tornado of applause. But it didn't turn out as he thought. 'The Grand Duchess and the Waiter' turned out to be the most difficult photoplay he ever tried to walk out on."

Evening Post: "To set forth the plot of so farcical a little tale would not be fair to the picture. Malcolm St. Clair, a clever young director, has told it better in his deft, well managed scenes than one could put it into words."

"It is a good vehicle for Menjou and will certainly please those who enjoy the work of this player. Florence Vidor's public will also be happy for it provides a glamorous role for her and she has never looked more beautiful than she does as this haughty grand duchess."

No. 465—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

DENNY, THE INCOMPARABLE! LA PLANTE, THE ADORABLE!
There's the combination you'll get in Reginald Denny's very newest comedy-drama, "Skinner's Dress Suit."

ARTISTS, BOTH OF THEM. CLEAN-CUT, ATTRACTIVE, A RARE combination of youth and beauty.

"SKINNER'S DRESS SUIT" IS THE KIND OF PICTURE THE WHOLE world is fairly "eating up" these days. It is a devil-may-care, rollicking, fool sort of a thing that will keep your audiences in gales of laughter and send them home happy and satisfied.

STARTING WITH HENRY IRVING DODGE'S CORKING GOOD story, the director, William Seiter, has added his own personal touches which are inimitable.

A WHALE OF A STORY—A PEACH OF A CAST—TWO BRIGHT and shining stars—all moulded together by a brilliant director.

"SKINNER'S DRESS SUIT" IS A MARVELOUS AND FITTING successor to such current Denny hits as "California Straight Ahead", "Where Incomparable!

NNY

Was I", "What Happened to Jones", "I'll Show You the Town", "Oh Doctor", "The Reckless Age", "The Fast Worker", and "Sporting Youth". All hits—and made by the star who never made a poor one.

THIS IS BECOMING DARNED EMBARRASSING. AS THESE DENNY pictures come in from the Universal studios, I find myself telling you that it is the greatest, grandest, "glorousest", production on earth. I rant and rave about the excellence of its story, its direction, its cast, its settings, its everything. And I do my blamest to pump you as full of enthusiasm for Denny as I am myself.

THE CONSISTENT, HIGH CLASS BOX OFFICE QUALITY OF Denny's pictures during recent years has been one of the most gratifying achievements in the history of the industry. Exhibitors have exulted with us and have encouraged us to keep up our present pace.

WHEN YOU STOP TO CONSIDER HOW OFTEN YOU HAVE bought a lot of pictures which contained only a few real successes, it is really astonishing to compare the records of other companies and the records of Universal, for we have given you a higher percentage of real hits year after year than any company in the business.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG WITH UNIVERSAL—it's miles and miles ahead of all!

"THE FIGHTING DUDE"

Directed by William Goodrich

Presented by E. W. Hammons

There's a fight in this one that will set any audience in an uproar. There have been many comedy fights on the screen, but here's one that's new—and screamingly funny. This dude packs a mean wallop, and when he gets started, there's a laugh for every blow.

"If all two-reelers were as chock full of entertainment as this one which features Lupino Lane, they would make it pretty tough for a lot of feature pictures."—M. P. News.

"The funniest battle in screen history."—Motion Pictures Today.

"A rip-roaring comedy with Lupino Lane at his best. . . . His line of comedy is entirely different and individual."—Exh. Trade Review.

Prevention is better— and it costs less

With your films always in fireproof storage there is little danger of any serious fire occurring in your theatre or studio.

That is why Insurance Rating Organizations make substantial reductions wherever an American Film-Safe is installed.

And this Film-Safe—the only film container listed as standard and labeled by the Underwriters' Laboratories—not only protects films and surrounding property against loss or damage by fire, but it also provides a convenient system for filing.

It is made in the form of a cabinet consisting of one or more units. Each unit has several individual compartments. Subjects contained in the Film-Safe may be indexed or cross-referenced in any desired way. Films are suspended in the compartments in a film-carriage which automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened. Films are always readily accessible for handling. Compartment doors close and lock automatically.

American Film-Safes are beautifully finished in baked enamel and in construction rank with the finest of metal furniture. They are made of sheet steel. All joints are tenoned and pinioned together. Moveable parts are mechanically perfect.

TWO SIZES

American Film-Safes are made in two sizes. Style 1100 has five compartments for five one thousand-foot reels of film. This style is designed principally for Exchanges, Studios, Laboratories or in other places where motion picture film is used or stored.

Style 1200 has five compartments for five two thousand-foot reels of film. This style is installed principally in theatre projection booths.

You may purchase an American Film-Safe on the deferred payment plan. Usually the reductions in insurance charges allowed by Insurance Rating Organizations amount to the total cost of the Safe and often cover payments as they fall due.

You need a Film-Safe. Send for full information now. Write or mail the coupon.

1926 HAS HITCHED ITS WAGON TO A STAR!

The New Year starts right.
Profiting by the experience of 1925.
Which was a great year.
Studded with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer successes.
1926 hitches its wagon to a star.

The Quality Fifty-Two.
There's a reason...

And soon you'll read the big news.
Of what those non-stop, fast-stepping, box-office-wise showmen-producers of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have up their sleeve.

For coming months.
Yes, a lot of surprises.

But you get to expect surprises in the Quality 52—and we never disappoint.
Hitch your wagon to a star and let the rest of the boys watch your star dust.
1925 was a big M-G-M year.

writes:

"There are no other theatres in either of these towns, but as many as 8 to 10 pieces of mail matter addressed to various out-of-existence houses as well as present ones are received in these three towns when one piece of mail addressed to 'The Rose Theatre, Colfax, Wash.' would service the purpose just as well. Most of these repeaters go into the waste basket without opening. The senders are wasting a huge sum every year over the country on dead theatres."

Mr. Weskil's waste mail is duplicated in at least a thousand cities and towns in the United States alone.

Exhibitors, will you cooperate with us in convincing the producer and distributor that the above statement is a fact?

If so, write us about YOUR waste mail, so we can lay the facts before the right people here in New York.

Producers and Distributors, are you interested in getting the actual facts as they exist?

If so, let us show you why and how you are wasting your mail efforts and how you can remedy matters.

Motion Picture News desires to aid both sides in this really serious problem.

Late News Bulletin

Confirming developments in the German situation hinted at last week in Motion Picture News exclusively, the following cablegram was received from the News correspondent in Berlin just as this issue was going to press:

“Paramount Metro place 20 films a year Ufa and take 10 Ufa films stop. Grant 4 million dollar loan stop. Laemmle Ufa five year deal percentage small guarantee 10 films.”

While little other information was available at the time of going to press, this indicates that the sudden departure of Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn executives for Berlin upon the announcement of the proposed Universal-Ufa deal was of greater significance than was admitted at the time, as suggested last week.

Full details will be presented in the coming issue.

Volume XXXIII

ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, January 9, 1926

No. 2

Man Power and Money

THE appearance of so many motion picture issues on the Stock Exchange marks undoubtedly this industry's outstanding achievement in 1925.

And still more interesting is the fact that this is but the beginning of our financial structure. I have never, until the past few weeks, had a full realization of the large underwritings in store for the business of picture entertainment. No announcement in 1926 will tax my credulity; nor in 1927. In the next two years we are going to have financing that will equal railroad bond issues; and these will be widely absorbed by the public.

This situation ought to have a sobering effect upon each and all of us.

For it goes straight home to the individual in the business.

The banker is well enough aware today of the greatness and stability of the motion picture as an institution.

That he accepts and he will weigh carefully the various forms of picture enterprise put before him.

But whatever they are, he will inevitably and immediately put his financial finger on one central equation of each problem; and that is the manpower of the enterprise.

Who and what are the men who will shape the destinies of the enterprise?

What is their record? What is their proven ability and character and initiative and working power and personality?

When a man's life is insured for a million and more, there's a mighty good reason for it. He's worth that much to the enterprise.

And there will be some increasingly big policies written in this business.

Men of power are needed. We have got to have them and they will be forthcoming. And by the same token the men who don't fit the jobs will have to go. That handwriting is plainly on the wall. This business is getting too big for slickers and slackers; the day of the opportunist is fast waning. When the millions come into an industry it's a sure sign that the misfits go out.

Steel, oil, rubber, railroads, automobiles—all these great industries are written about the men in them. The story of the business is the story of the man; the greatness of the industry is not merely the greatness of its public utility, but also and equally the greatness of its manpower.

Now, we cannot all be Olympians; we don't have to be. But a leader surrounds himself with strong men; men greater in their respective abilities than the leader himself. And so it goes throughout the organization.

For instance, you can size up a firm today by the character of its salesmen; and it can further be said that one of the most hopeful signs of our industrial progress is the fact that already the film salesman ranks right up with the best in the land.

There has never been, in this industry's history, the opportunity that exists right now for men of calibre—a calibre to match the big deals that assuredly are in the cards.

Speaking Editorially

ALL the years and the millions spent upon "Ben-Hur" are more than justified. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has reached the high-water mark of screen achievement in this magnificent picture.

It has splendor and amazing movement. It is both spectacle and simple story. Sweeping through it is a mood never before revealed on the silver-sheet. The players, evidently inspired by the tremendous undertaking of the picture itself as well as by Lew Wallace's immortal theme and Director Fred Niblo's astonishing command of all the material at hand, give performances that are truly remarkable.

There is not time for detailed comment in this issue. That will come next week.

Our congratulations to Marcus Loew and his associates for sticking everlastingly to the job until it was done. Their faith and vision, and the expenditure of a fortune, have resulted in this (and we remember the estimate of the film given us long ago by Marshall Neilan—he was right!):—

The greatest picture ever made. W. A. J.

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the M. P. T. O. A. and one of the industry's progressive showmen, has a very clear idea of the place of the picture theatre as a community institution. More than that, he puts his ideas into effect. For instance, his Courtesy Cards to school teachers have proved their worth as builders of good-will. This idea should appeal to every exhibitor. It is set forth in detail elsewhere in this issue.

THE rush of big pictures continues. With "The Big Parade" and "Stella Dallas" already established on Broadway, "Ben Hur" arrived this week and created a sensation. On January 15, "The Sea Beast," a radical departure for John Barrymore and from all advance accounts a remarkable production, will come into view.

THIS week one of the industry's great good friends entered upon his duties as the Chief Magistrate of the world's largest city—Jimmy Walker, Mayor of New York. In his appointment of important members of his cabinet he has already shown that he is to give the city a vigorous administration, dedicated to public service in the highest degree.

THERE is an interesting interview in our columns this week with James R. Grainger, the dynamic sales chief of the Fox forces. His comments on the outlook for 1926 are based on wide knowledge of the field and appeal to us as wise and constructive. Fox has great plans under way; and Mr. Grainger has done a splendid job in bringing his field staff to the peak of efficiency.

THE Official Bulletin of the M. P. T. O. A., which was one of the first innovations of Joe Seider's regime as Business Manager, is devoted to organization matters, is well edited, and has a definite mission as a vital point of contact between National Headquarters and individual members.

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS are moving forward rapidly with their plans; production and distribution activities alike are being speeded up; and the groundwork for next season's product already laid. Several studios are being utilized at present, and there are pretty definite reports that P. A. Powers has in mind a big project in Los Angeles, where producing activities will be centralized.

Meanwhile, the trade is looking forward to the premiere of "The Skyrocket" on the Steamship Leviathan—a most unusual and effective setting for what gives every promise of being a very fine picture. Messrs. Powers and Price may well be pleased with the progress they have already made in pointing their company for bigger things. And Bob Welsh's advance campaign on "The Skyrocket" sets a new mark in the advertising and exploitation of an important special production.

"A lot of things are coming my way during Laugh Month," says Arthur Lake, Universal juvenile comedian. "It should be a smashing success."

Billy Dooley, comedian in Christie comedies for Educational, wears no smile here, but he'll furnish plenty of them during Laugh Month.

A broad smile is contributed by Lucia Backus Seger, as an old fortune teller in Robert Kane's "The Reckless Lady" for First National, who will also be in "The Dancer from Paris

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

HA! HA!

IN view of the fact that this issue will be in the hands of readers during the first few days of January, this might properly be called the Laugh Month Edition of Pictures & People. Every photo, as far as possible, portrays (or should evoke) a smile, a chuckle, a grin, a chortle, a snicker, or what the Laugh Month committee phonetically describes as a "guffau."

At last the lowly Laugh is coming into its own. Like oranges, apples, fire prevention, greater movies and dental hygiene, the Laugh is to have its own national celebration, with committees, slogans ("Have you had your Laugh this morning?"), parades, speeches and special sections.

And this is only fair and fitting, for after all, what greater contribution has the motion picture made to human happiness than Laughter? Thrills, spectacles, tense and moving drama—all of these play an important part—but after all, it is the Laughs in the comedy, and the comedy relief in the feature, that relax the body, freshen the mind and stimulate the spirit to battle anew with life's problems.

The late George Randolph Chester, author of the "Wallingford" stories, used to say that Laughter and the sense of humor alone made it possible for men to exist side by side peacefully and happily; that Laughter was the great lubricant in human relations; and to illustrate this he related the incident of two men locked in a room, quarreling heatedly and bitterly over a woman. In the corner was a parrot. Matters finally grew so strained that the one man whipped out a revolver and said, "If you don't take that back when I count three, I'll—fire!" "Go ahead," said the other, "Fire!". "Fire!" shrieked the parrot. "Fire! Oh, fireman, save my child!" The two men looked at one another—

Comedy stars whom the Christie studios are looking to for some of the heartiest laughs during Laugh Month, in their comedies released through Educational.

"Big Boy," of Educational Juvenile comedies, poses as the Spirit of 1926, ushering in Laugh Month, to which he will contribute in no small measure.

A smiling portrait of Gladys McConnell, who has a prominent role in "A Trip to Chinatown," the famous Hoyt success which Fox is picturizing.

No wonder Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacLean are smiling! They've just travelled half way around the world, after "Seven Keys to Baldpate" (Paramount) on a vacation.

and laughed. The tension was broken, the quarrel abated and the matter was smoothed out peacefully, all because of the priceless gift of Laughter.

Most of our great stars have risen on waves of Laughter—Pickford, Fairbanks, Swanson, Meighan, Chaplin, Lloyd—these and many more have striven, even in elaborate feature productions for the elusive and precious Laugh. Clean, honest humor appeals to all classes, all ages, all races. No man appeals to so wide an audience as the comedian. One young man, a few years ago unknown, now receives ten thousand United States dollars for each and every continuity that comes from his typewriter, all because he has the rare gift of subtle and ingenious humor. A director, who came to these shores a few short years ago, receives $75,000 on each production against half of the profits, and is being copied and studied by hordes of others, all because of his humorous and satiric "touches." A little man in baggy trousers, trick mustache, derby, cane and large, battered shoes, is the most widely known resident of these United States, all because he has in supreme measure the knack of pantomiming situations which arouse laughter in audiences from Broadway to Borneo.

So it is only fair that the Laugh should be lifted, for a month at least, to the pinnacle which it deserves. If it is only half so successful as it deserves to be, Laugh Month is here to stay—and wise exhibitors will make every month Laugh Month. With leading free lance feature stars being drafted for comedy, plans of the short subject producers have never been more elaborate and promising. "Bigger and better Laughs!" might well be our battle-cry, with the slogan for the fan: "Laugh and the world laughs with you, Weep and you go to the movies alone."

J GLORIFYING THE GAG MAN

JESSE L. LASKY has coined a new title for the gag man, to lift him from the lowly status once implied by that term. Henceforth, he (the gag man) will be known on the Lasky lot as the "comedy constructor." There's something in the idea, at that. A gag man by any name can be as funny, and labels are more important than is often realized. The best cameramen today are "cinematographers"—a distinction with a genuine difference—and a man's self respect and efficiency may be easily impaired by applying to him a term of disparagement. Nobody would think of calling a modern picture palace a "shooting gallery," merely because it shows motion pictures, and if we can elevate our "gag men" into "comedy constructors," then why not?

"The world wants to laugh and the comedy constructor is the man who will furnish the fun food," Lasky says. "The logical solution of the problem is to apply the abilities of those men who specialize in furnishing humorous entertainment either in writing or in acting.

"Our Gang," the jolly Hal Roach troupe in Pathe comedies, ring in the New Year and Laugh Month with appropriate merry faces. Their first appearance during the Month of Chuckles will be in "Good Cheer."

"The most tremendous dramatic successes have been such because they contained natural humor to occasionally break the strain of straight drama and also to emphasize and accentuate the big dramatic moments. The story or picture that keeps you on the verge of both laughter and tears is the one that makes the deepest impression.

"The comedy constructor is not a new figure in motion pictures but during the last year he has assumed a far more prominent place. We used to call him a 'gag man.' His rank was low and his salary not particularly high. One of his tribe conceived the idea of having someone throw a custard pie at someone else. That was one of the first screen comedy situations, or gags.

"This man now has a much higher purpose. Except in rare instances, broad comedy is not acceptable. Nowadays it must be more natural and more subtle. The comedy in 'The Covered Wagon' was one of the most important factors in making it one of the most popular pictures of all time. That is the sort of humor that is wanted. You can't measure out so much drama, so much comedy, so much characterization and forth, and put them bodily into a production. It isn't done that way.

"The world is favoring melodrama more strongly than for many years but there must be comedy with it and many straightaway comedies, too. That is why Harold Lloyd, Raymond Griffith and Douglas MacLean are making pictures expressly for Paramount. That is why W. C. Fields, the Follies' famous comedy star, Ford Sterling and others, have been signed to appear exclusively in Paramount pictures. That is why Bebe Daniels is being made a comedy star and it is also the reason Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton have been given picture material providing them with an opportunity to exploit their unusual ability as comedians.

"All this makes the comedy constructor a more and more important figure in the studio. He may now accept his salary without apologizing, walk about with his head up and his chest out, and have his name in gold letters on his office door. He's a big man, now."

G LAUGH MONTH LYRICS

GERALD K. RUDOLPH, publicity manager of Fox Films, has been inspired by that company's Laugh Month slogan, "Start the New Year with a Laugh," to pen an ode to Laughter, in four merry stanzas. Since it is not only well worth printing for its own sake, but may prove useful to managers in their newspaper publicity for Laugh Month, here it is:

Johnny Hines (centre), one of the screen's best little laughter specialists, surrounded by some of the men who are keeping him prominently to the front; left to right: William Mulligan and Franklin Jacobs of First National Publicity Department, Hines, C. C. Burr, and Dave Weshner, publicity chief of B. & H. Enterprises, Inc. "Rainbow Riley" is next.

Start the New Year with a laugh,—Pack a smile; If you hope to stand the gaff, It's worth while. Every time you feel a grin, Coming on, don't keep it in, That's the only way to win, By a mile.

Start the New Year with a laugh,—'Atta boy; Make a mental photograph, Of your joy; Then, with such a healthy start, If you practice at the art, It will be an easy part, To employ.

Start the New Year with a laugh,—Every day; Do not stop when it is half, On its way. Every time you are amused, Make 'em think you are infused, Act as though you were enthused, And be gay.

It's easy to laugh when you're on top of the heap, but not so easy when the order of things is reversed. A tableau by "Fat" Karr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander, appearing in Standard Fat Men comedies for F. B. O.

Start the New Year with a laugh,—Right out loud; Let it be your epigraph, And be proud. Any time in 'twenty-six, That you think you're in a fix, Laugh and see how well it clicks, With the Crowd.

E XMAS WEDDING BELLS

ESTHER RALSTON, one of the three girls who rose to film popularity through "Peter Pan," just a year ago Christmas, in which she played Mrs. Darling, was cast as one of the two principals in a Yuletide wedding last week, the other being George W. Frey, who is also associated with motion pictures. Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton acted as maid of honor and best man. The setting was the Riverside Mission Inn, Los Angeles, where the wedding breakfast was also served, the guests including Hamilton, Miss Brian and Mrs. Louise Brian, her mother, Mrs. L. M. Frey, mother of the groom, Mrs. H. W. Ralston, mother of the bride, William Wisbeck, Mrs. Neil Hamilton, and Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Swope.

In extending congratulations we are happy to add that the bride will continue in pictures, returning to Hollywood after a short honeymoon to start in a featured role in "The Blind Goddess."

N A COMEDIAN ON THE GREEN

NOT since William Fox achieved membership in the "Hole-in-One" Club have film golf circles enjoyed a sensation like that created last week by Neal Burns, the Christie comedian.

Burns, playing the sixth hole at the Lakeside club, on the Coast, which is a par three hole, made it in two—not once, or twice, or thrice—but four consecutive times playing the course.

Burns is willing to meet in fair combat anyone who thinks that he, or she, can duplicate or surpass the feat. He is one of the stellar lights of the Christie-Metropolitan team, which includes also Charles Christie, A. C. Cadwalader, Jack Noble, Jack Cunningham and George Melford.

Alice Day, one of the shining lights in Mack Sennett comedies for Pathe release, busts right into Laugh Month, January, 1926, to which she will add her quota of smiles.

Arthur Trimble and Doreen Turner, as Buster Brown and Mary Jane in Stern Brothers "Buster Brown" comedies for Universal release, add a pair of youthful smiles to the joviality of Laugh Month.

One of the merry sprites of Laugh Month—Walter Hiers, Educational-Christie star, as he appears in "Weak But Willing," his contribution to the Month of Cheer.

There's no mistaking the fact that Alice Ardell, star of Blue Ribbon comedies for F. B. O., is heartily in sympathy with the spirit of Laugh Month.

LOEW AND HEARST FETED

LAST Tuesday evening was a brilliant occasion in West Coast film annals, the event being a get-together dinner-dance given at the Ambassador Hotel by Louis B. Mayer and studio associates in honor of Marcus Loew and William Randolph Hearst. Scores of prominent Los Angelinians, in and out of the film industry, graced the affair, including leading executives and artists.

Among the speakers were Marcus Loew, William R. Hearst, Louis B. Mayer, Joseph M. Schenck, Supreme Court Justice Thomas J. Lennon, Sid Grauman, Sol Lesser, Irving Thalberg, Hunt Stromberg, Conrad Nagel, Motley Flint, Marco Hellman, Fred Beetsen, Donald Ogden Stewart, Joseph W. Farnham, and Fred Niblo, who acted as Master of Ceremonies.

An elaborate program through the courtesy of West Coast Theatres, Fanchon & Marco, Harry Singer, Ben Piazza, Sid Grauman and "Wrasty" Wright, and staged under the direction of the last named, together with dancing to four orchestras, helped make the evening a great success. Special tableaux acts presenting "The Spirit of M-G-M" and "The Book of M-G-M Achievements" were enthusiastically applauded.

The outstanding features of the evening were the talks by Marcus Loew, William R. Hearst, and Louis B. Mayer Dorothy Dwan, Semon's leading lady in "Stop, Look and Listen" (Pathe) smilingly impersonates the Stroke of Twelve that ushers in Laugh Month.

Speaking of Baby Stars, here is Harry Langdon all dressed up for his first feature comedy for First National release, which promises plenty of Laughs.

An important film event for Tacoma; signing for the first run of "Hearts and Fists," a Tacoma-made picture distributed by Associated Exhibitors. Seated: H. T. Moore of the Moore Amusement Co.; Paul R. Ault of A. E.; standing: J. H. Green, Tacoma News Tribune; W. R. Rust, Weaver Productions; Peter L. Shamray, of Weaver; George Greenlund, manager of the Rialto.

Edna Marian's smile is prophetic of the roars and chuckles which she will inspire in Century comedies for Universal during Laugh Month.

Coast Producing for World Market

Features of International Appeal Are Gaining Place in the Foreground

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

(Editor's Note.—This is the ninth of a series of articles written especially for MOTION PICTURE NEWS by the Editor of The Los Angeles Times Pre-View.)

SANGUINE hopes regarding the satisfactory solution of the foreign situation are now expressed by the majority of producers in Hollywood. Sentiment has been steadily crystallizing, and the need for a consistent course of action in building up the trade abroad is more keenly felt than heretofore.

Chiefly, this action seems to concentrate itself in a plan to send abroad stars and directors with a view to bettering the understanding of what the American public desires in pictures. By having them take an active part in the films made abroad it is expected to create a product in Europe that will be more readily acceptable to the exhibitors in this country. Details of this project have already been told in MOTION PICTURE NEWS in so far as they pertain to Universal, and more recently Famous Players-Lasky have been mapping out a similar procedure.

It is more than likely that whereas Universal's activities will center chiefly in Germany, Famous will make a thorough survey of the possibilities for production in England, France and more Southern European countries. It might be assumed that Famous already has entree in France due to the fact that Gloria Swanson's "Madame Sans Gene" was filmed there, and that they are also sufficiently well fortified in England through previous enterprises there to gain a considerable advantage in that territory, where the feeling against American pictures has been more intense than elsewhere, with the possible exception of Germany. Charles Eyton, formerly West Coast studio manager, is to undertake the survey of conditions in advance of more general European activities.

It is significant, perhaps, that Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford have talked of filming some scenes for forthcoming productions abroad. Mary, at least, appears particularly desirous of obtaining shots in foreign locales for a story that she is planning to do with a European setting.

There is no doubt that owing to contacts established during their trips abroad Doug and Mary have already accomplished much in building up the prestige of United Artists. It has always been conceded that this organization is very soundly entrenched in the foreign market, and lately color has been lent to this by the reception accorded the Fairbanks feature, "The Thief of Bagdad." Doug expects to reap a huge gross from runs in Germany. The picture is also unusually popular in Russia.

Since the collapse of the projected merger of the distributing systems of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and United Artists some question has arisen as to how far M. G. M. will go ahead independently to strengthen their European position, if they actually feel the need of this. It was generally recognized that the Loew organization would have furthered their cause somewhat by the as-

Bachmann Files Petition in Bankruptcy

JACOB G. BACHMANN has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy listing liabilities of $349,250 and showing assets having a face value of $112,300. The action is said to be based on the fact that Bachmann, with B. P. Schulberg signed Preferred Pictures notes. Bachmann now heads a new company that will deliver the thirteen pictures on a program of twenty originally planned by Schulberg.

The liabilities are as follows: Secured claims, $5,053.45; unsecured, $333,125.68; accommodation paper $349,250. The assets include household goods, $150; debts on open accounts, $12,000; face value of insurance policies, $100,000; property claimed to be exempt, $150,000.

There is a list of creditors, most of whose claims are unsecured. Some of the larger claims follow: Katherine MacDonald, $60,000; Edwin J. Loeb, Los Angeles, $21,300; Loeb, Water & Loeb, Los Angeles, $15,000; Standard Film Laboratories, Los Angeles, $90,000; P. Fineman, Los Angeles, $30,000; Hirla-graph Film Laboratories, $21,051.10.

sociation with U. A., had this not fallen through. They have never manifested any great concern, however, over the future of their foreign business.

There is apparently no intention at the present time on their part, of going into the European field with their talent. More than any other organization they seem to be wedded to Hollywood. Whatever move they make in Europe will probably be along the more general lines of an exchange of pictures. Even the plan for sending Lillian Gish to Germany to star in a picture appears to be far in abeyance now. Rex Ingram is the one director of their group who will, from all indications, captain expeditionary forces for the present, and this is largely owing to his personal preferences for working in Europe.

What changes if any will be made in the character of subjects chosen for picturization by all companies because of the trade abroad is likely to assume more importance as a question. Production schedules have shown a decided growth in romantic themes in the past year. The bigger type of westerns and outdoor subjects have also acquire great preeminence, although it is now generally conceded that this is waning, owing to declining interest in this country.

The reception of a feature like "The Big Parade," which is commandingly American, both in theme and treatment, will probably be watched very closely by all those who are interested in foreign market conditions.

It is generally conceded that this picture has little of a striking nature to attract the European, with the possible exception of the French. German sympathizers in some instances are reported to have disparaged its popular merits, and to have found fault with the fact that it re-arouses war hatred.

Certainly, in the filming of the picture, there was no such intention. The story was told as a story, and if it is so powerful as to take its audiences back to the war period in spirit, so much the more commendation for its dramatic potency. There seems no reason to look for sop to the pacifists in a feature whose humanness and interest grow largely out of its realism. The underlying humanity of the scene in the trenches between the American and the German soldier would appear to be sufficient to dispose of the question of animus in the making of this picture. Nevertheless, it will be rather surprising if "The Big Parade" turns out to be popular in Germany.

Of the reigning successes, "The Gold Rush" will probably be assured of the widest foreign appreciation, since anything that Chaplin might do of such magnitude would be a novelty anywhere. Gus Schlesinger, manager of foreign distribution for Warner Brothers, was also highly enthusiastic about "The Sea Beast" during his visit to the Coast. Barrymore's acting and a tale of sea adventure are bound to be a great combination anywhere. "Don Juan," which is the most richly bedecked picture that Barrymore has ever made, is also heralded for big sales abroad. The American historical pictures, which Paramount is planning, "Old Ironsides" and "Rough Riders," laid at a safe period in the past, and this company's melodramas, which, it is understood, are to be prominent on next season's program, may also gain large returns in Europe.

While First National is not perhaps making any hereculean effort to gain foreign advantages they have "The Viennese Medley" high on their list of forthcoming attractions, which is bound to have a universal appeal.

"Ben Hur," "The Black Pirate," "Barde-lys, the Magnificent," "Lady Windermere's Fan," "Mare Nostrum," and a few others might be named as outstanding productions of international appeal, and though these may suffice for the present it is apparent that with a more definite "hands across the sea" movement in progress, a greater assortment of films of this pretentious character will have to be made with a view to their popularity in the foreign market. The fact that various companies are constantly adding to their staff of European directors and players would indicate that they are preparing, in this way at least, to meet this exigency.

One thing, it is safe to state positively, there are more pictures being made today in America with assurance of doing big business abroad than ever before in the history of pictures, and with the smoothing over of friction in Europe there will be an even greater expansion. Internationalism, indeed, may eventually become a watchword in the studios.

Kansas City Territory Is Showing Marked Building Activity

AN unusually large theatre building program in Kansas City territory, in the face of wintry blasts and holiday season, is showing no signs of a let-up. From St. Joseph, Mo., this week comes the announcement of the proposed construction of a new $500,000 theatre—a down town first run house—to be built by the St. Joseph Electric Amusement Company, the announcement being made by Rice McDonald, an official of the amusement company.

Work on the theatre will begin early in the spring and will be a part of the city's centennial celebration for 1926. The site for the new theatre has not been decided upon yet, but will be soon. The seating capacity and other details have not yet been worked out. The company, which also owns and operates the Electric theatre of St. Joseph, will spend $100,000 in remodeling that house, increasing the seating capacity to about 2,000. F. O. Williams will be retained as manager of both houses. Grubel Brothers of Kansas City, Kas., who operate a string of houses, are connected with the St. Joseph Company.

On Christmas Day the new Oak Park theatre opened at Thirty-ninth street and Prospect avenue, Kansas City. The house, a modern suburban theatre, will seat about 1,100 and contains virtually every convenience found in the larger theatres.

At Baxter Springs, Kas., work has started on a new theatre, being built by John I. Cooper, well known Kansas exhibitor, which will be managed by E. A. Rehn. The house, although small in seating capacity—seating only about 1,000—will be as modern as any theatre in the state.

Better Films Bodies to Meet

New York Conference to Have for Slogan
"Selection, Not Censorship, the Solution"

PLANS for bringing the strongest possible local support to exhibitors throughout the country showing the best in films will be discussed and a program of local cooperation will be formulated at a three day Conference of the National Committee for Better Films, 70 Fifth Avenue, and the organization with which it is affiliated, the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. The Conference, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, on January 28th, 29th and 30th, will culminate on the 30th in the eleventh Annual Luncheon of the National Board of Review with Mayor James J. Walker as the chief speaker and guest of honor.

The promotion of local public interest in better pictures, selected and classified by Committees that view the films before release, has been the outgrowth of the first Better Films Conference held last winter. The work of better films groups in all parts of the country will be presented and discussed by hundreds of delegates. The Conference, according to the announcements of the National Board, is a public opinion clinic. Ways and means of cultivating the motion picture medium by stimulating a healthy growth of the useful and artistic pictures will be presented by the men and women in localities from Maine to Florida and extending to points in the far west, who have adopted as their local standard the slogan of the National Board—"Selection—not censorship—the solution."

In announcing this Conference and Luncheon, the Board states it has found that its cooperating committees, knowing beforehand what to expect from each picture, are able to help the exhibitors realize that the finer entertainment type of picture is the kind that pays. The Better Films Committees and other cooperating agencies are thus bringing to the producers through the exhibitors the realization that the artistic, clean picture is the profitable picture. Extension of interest in this type of constructive work is the purpose of the Conference and Luncheon.

Brockliss Will Succeed Pugh

Named Managing Director of First National Pictures English Branch

J. FRANK BROCKLISS has been named to succeed Ralph J. Pugh as managing director of the English branch of First National Pictures. The appointment was made by E. Bruce Johnson, foreign manager of First National. Pugh recently resigned to take up experimental work in another branch of the industry.

Brockliss is a veteran of the British film world. In 1909 he opened his first office at a rental of one pound a week and started a new make of French films called "Le Lion." The success of this business encouraged expansion and the British concession for the Motiograph projection machine was shortly taken over by the J. Frank Brockliss, Ltd.

In 1913, Brockliss was proprietor of no fewer than five different business enterprises, including the Brockliss Cinemachinery, Ltd., and Brockliss, Inc., of New York.

During the war he was one of the original organizers of the Cinematograph Trades Ambulance Fund, was an officer in the Motor Ambulance Corps and later organized and directed a motion picture department to provide film entertainment in all British military camps.

In 1922, Mr. Brockliss was invited by Marcus Loew to organize the distribution of Metro pictures in Continental Europe. His excellent work in this capacity was drawn to the attention of Mr. Johnson, and was, to a large degree, responsible for his appointment with First National.

New Companies Active in New York State

Considerable activity was shown in the number of companies incorporating in the motion picture business in New York state during the past week, the following companies receiving charters from the secretary of state:

Two Treys Amusement Corporation, $50,000, J. J. Hahn, Agnes McNamara, O. S. Moran, New York City; The Kid Himself, Incorporated, $20,000, G. D. Murphy, K. A. McGuire, S. Frank, New York city; Straham Theatre Corporation, $350,000, Lewis M. Scheuer, New York city; William T. Powers, Brooklyn; A. D. Ghersan, Queens; H. & K. Pictures, Corporation, capitalization not specified, Harry Lewis, Grant Hoerner, Walter Herzbrun, New York city.

Telaflm News Service, Inc., capitalization not specified, Hazel M. Lindsey, New York; Edith M. Kent, Floral Park; Anna Zeitler, Brooklyn; Limited Productions, Inc., $525,000, Arthur Smith, Bronxville; Viola I. Mathews, Jos. F. Perdue, New York city; F. G. & K. Amusement Corporation, $6,000, Sam Kirschenbaum, Max Greenberg, Bert Frank, Brooklyn; Dragon Pictures, Inc., $1,000,000, J. Hart, C. J. Loman, H. B. Walmsley, New York city; Motion Picture Consultants, Inc., $5,000, A. P. Blumenthal, B. K. Blake, Rachel Marmar, New York city; Camera Pictures Corporation, capitalization not specified, A. E. Bryan, Brooklyn; Serena Klein, T. A. Schiekling, New York city.

Resigns as Counsel for Trade Commission

W. H. Fuller, for several years chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission at Washington, has resigned from that position to resume the practise of law in his home state, Oklahoma. Mr. Fuller will be connected with his son, J. L. Fuller and with George M. Porter under the new firm name of Fuller, Porter & Fuller. Headquarters will be in McAlester.

Mr. Fuller had charge of the hearings in the Famous Players-Lasky case.

Suggests Subtitle For Deleted Matter

THE Toronto Telegram in a recent editorial made the suggestion that when a Moving Picture Censor Board sees fit to make a deletion in a picture, something should be inserted in the story, such as a special subtitle, to indicate that a portion of the subject has been removed by the censors. The newspaper facetiously declared, at the end of the editorial, that the inserted subtitle might read: "Curtain lowered to Indicate a Lapse of Morals—The Censor."

Discussing the matter, the Telegram declared:

"It seems to us that the censor, to be fair, should not work under cover any longer. Many have been gazing absorbedly at a film, to see a half-completed episode suddenly catapulted into the following episode and conscious that something has happened to disrupt the continuity and to entangle the threads of the story. Unless you are particularly observant, you forthwith blame this upon the unfortunate director for bungling his job. But, too often, it is merely the work of the censor."

Theatre Activity Still Expanding

Many Additions to Chains Are Reported With a Large Number of Buildings Announced for Construction

SALES and changes in management of theatre chains have a tendency to become more numerous with each week. This week come reports from many sections of additions to circuits, the acquiring of property for building purposes and the actual building of many new picture palaces.

Denver is to have a new de luxe theatre with an approximate capacity of 2,500, according to an announcement from the office of the Publix Theatres Corporation. The theatre will be erected by a building corporation which is to be formed by Claude K. Boettcher, investment banker of Denver, and which will be leased to the Mountain States Theatre Corporation and operated as one of the Publix theatres. The house will be located at 16th Street and Glenarm Place, and the contract calls for its completion on or before January 1, 1927.

The entire project will represent an investment of about $1,250,000. The William N. Bowman Company, of Denver, will be the architects and Messrs. Rapp & Rapp, of Chicago, will represent the Publix Theatres Corporation as advisory architects.

From Chicago comes word that Fitzpatrick & McElroy, last week, completed negotiations with Leonard Sowar, whereby the Strand Theatre of Muncie, becomes a Fitzpatrick & McElroy enterprise, in addition to the Columbia, Star and Lyric Theatres, already operated by that company. Mr. Sowar will be resident general manager of the F. & M. interests in Muncie, having assumed charge on December 21st. Fitzpatrick & McElroy Enterprises now are operating close to fifty theatres in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin, and during the present month opened the new theatre at Alpena. They also have recently acquired all theatres in Michigan City, Indiana, and have a new theatre under construction at Richmond. Several projects are also under way in major Indiana cities.

Harry Koplar, vice-president of the St. Louis Amusement Company, has announced the purchase by that company of the Ozark Theatre in Webster Groves, Mo. The company takes over the building and will operate the theatre in conjunction with its string of other high class second run neighborhood and suburban theatres. For some time past the Ozark Theatre has been booking film through the St. Louis Amusement.

Some time ago Koplar announced that

Dixon Appreciates Booking Guide Assistance

"I certainly appreciate the Booking Guide. It is a great help in locating the dope on a picture as I can simply refer back to the copy of the News mentioned in the Guide and find almost everything needed in the advertising of a picture. Enables me to book better pictures."

Warn Amateurs Against Casting Agencies

CASTING agencies making offers to place amateurs in motion pictures have been the subject of complaint to the Better Business Bureau, 280 Broadway, which has issued a warning for the benefit of persons with screen ambitions. The agencies in question guarantee in contract form to secure the applicant his or her "first motion pictures engagement" in consideration of the payment of a stipulated registration fee, one-half of which the agency assures to itself, whether or not an engagement is procured for the applicant.

Except in unusual instances, the best that an inexperienced person can expect in the way of a screen engagement is as an "extra" in mob, crowd and mass scenes. The usual pay for this type of screen work is $7.50 per day. One casting agency has been charging a fee of $35.00 plus $15.00 for a special photograph, for their services.

the St. Louis Amusement Company contemplated a program of expansion that would result in the company having upwards of fifty theatres early in 1926. The company is known to be negotiating for other houses and also has tentative plans for the erection of others.

During the past week Jim Drake sold his Easton-Taylor and White Way to John Pappas who has been associated with Tommy James in the operation of Comet and Retina theatres on Market street. The Easton-Taylor seats 596 and the White Way 392. The latter has an airdome seating 684 persons.

Another deal that is about ready for official announcement is the sale of the Majestic Theatre, 1022 Franklin avenue, a 1,100 seat house from Sam Komm to Charley Goldman and J. Laventhal, who also operate the Astor and Rainbow on Broadway and are erecting a new house alongside the Astor.

The Jonesboro Amusement Company, Jonesboro, Ark., has awarded the contract for the construction of the Strand Theatre, East Monroe avenue, Jonesboro, Ark., to Burton & Ballew of Jonesboro, Ark. The building will be three story, 70 by 120 feet and cost $100,000. It will be among the finest in that section of the country.

A. M. Frumberg, prominent St. Louis attorney who a few weeks ago purchased the corner of Grand and Washington boulevards, including the Midway Theatre property, as the site for a motion picture theatre, office and apartment building of major proportions, has organized the Theatre Realty Company to handle the property.

Although he has made no definite statement Frumberg is presumed to represent the Fox interests. In St. Louis film and realty circles it is reported that the new structure will cost upwards of $5,000,000.

The stockholders of the Theatre Realty Company are A. M. Frumberg, 18 shares; M. D. Frumberg, one share, and C. J.

Schlueter, one share. The company has a nominal capitalization of $2000, which is fully paid up.

Plans for a new theatre in East St. Louis, Ill., have been drawn by B. A. Mueller, architect. Halesuk Stephens is the owner of the prospective house. Its location has not yet been announced. It will cost about $20,000.

Charlotte is to have a new theatre house with a seating capacity of 1,700. The stage will be 30 x 40 feet and of sufficient size for road shows. It will be erected at the corner of N. Tryon and 6th street. J. H. Cutter, president of the Piedmont Realty Company, announced this week that he was asking for bids immediately on the building, which alone would cost $250,000. Mr. Cutter has signed a contract for a twenty-year lease to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation which will operate the house as a Keith vaudeville and picture house with arrangements for road shows. Mr. Cutter is erecting the building from plans by that company. This is the same theatre about which announcement was made several months ago but plans were held up by the New York office. These have been approved and the building will be started as soon as bids can be taken. The contract calls for completion of the building before January 21, 1927.

Following upon the recent announcement of plans for the construction of a $1,500,000 theatre in Seattle next year by the Orpheum Vaudeville Circuit, the Ackerman and Harris Theatre Circuit last week announced their plans to build a 2,500-seat house in 1926. The exact location of the theatre has not yet been announced, but is expected to be near the new Orpheum site, and within a radius of three or four blocks of the Coliseum and Blue Mouse, motion picture houses. In construction and type, the Ackerman and Harris house will be similar to the theatre they now have in the course of construction in Portland, Oregon. It will be used for a combined motion picture and vaudeville theatre, according to announcements made by Sam Harris on a recent visit in Seattle, during which time negotiations were started.

The Dellinger theatre, the oldest house in Batavia, N. Y., has been sold by William F. Haitz to Joseph R. Rosenbloom who takes over the property for others. The "others" is understood to be the Schine Theatrical corporation. The amount involved is reported to be $75,000. It is understood also that the Dellinger will be razed and a new house built on the site.

One a month is nearly the average number of links that is being added to the Golden State Theatre chain in California. Their new Fruitvale theatre at 14th St. and 37th Ave., Oakland, was opened Nov. 28th, with Mayor John L. Davie the chief speaker. Five of the theatres which this organization now have under course of construction are in the East Bay district. They are the Royal, San Pablo Ave.; New Haywards, Haywards; Fairfax, Foothill Boulevard and Fairfax Ave., and the West Berkeley, University and West Berkeley Ave., West Berkeley. This latter house will likely be the next to open near the New Year.

R. F. Woodhull Suggests Method to Attract School Teachers to Theatres

IN the current issue of the official bulletin of the M. P. T. O. A. is a good idea suggested by R. F. (Pete) Woodhull, national president of the M. P. T. O. A., for getting school teachers to attend motion picture theatres in greater numbers. The idea should prove of value to every exhibitor because of the general acknowledgment of the interest in picture shows by these educators. Woodhull says:

"Personal observation has led me to the conclusion that America's school teachers by and large are ardent devotees of the motion picture.

"In hundreds of instances it is common knowledge that they are underpaid considering the tremendous responsibility that is theirs by virtue of the fact that they are the citizen-builders of tomorrow.

"Bearing in mind the importance of their vocation to your community and also the asset to you of their friendship, it would seem to me that any form of cooperation not only smacks of civic pride but will prove of material good to our industry.

"With these facts in mind, I extended to the superintendent, principals and teachers of the schools located within the drawing confines of the Baker Theatre, Dover, N. J., a 'Courtesy Card,' which entitles them to attend the performance at one-half the regular admission price.

"The result has been that at least fifty per cent more attend than formerly and many expressions of approbation have been voiced.

"In approaching the heads of the faculty be sure and impress upon them the fact that you do not expect the teachers to become part of your exploitation staff for every picture that you present but that the only object you have in mind is to establish the most friendly and cordial relations between two of the great moulders of public thought in your community—the public school and the motion picture theatre."

Heavy Tax for American Films

New South Wales to Impose 25 Per Cent on Gross of All U. S. Pictures Shown

AMERICAN pictures are to be taxed 25 per cent on their gross income while playing in New South Wales, according to an Associated Press dispatch, which says the Government of New South Wales intends starting such legislation immediately.

Responsibility for the measure is placed in many quarters on Hugh D. McIntosh who is said to be one of the strongest opponents of American pictures in Australia. Millard Johnson, of Australasian Films, Ltd., when shown the dispatch said it was all news to him, but that there had been a pronounced agitation in several quarters against business methods of American companies.

The A. P. reports one of the principal objections to American tactics has been the practice of reducing the taxable income of their Australian operating companies to nominal amounts. These subsidiaries handle all Australian business, and, according to the dispatch, secure the pictures on an ex-orbitant rental basis. This has the effect of reducing the net income of the purely Australian organizations.

Premier Lang has, therefore, introduced an amendment to the income tax law providing for an assessment upon all films not manufactured in Australia of 25 per cent of the gross, the point being that subsidiary companies will be unable to charge against intake from theatres the prices which they are charged by the American parent companies for pictures.

In October, The Victorian Legislative Council passed a law making it compulsory for all programs in that province to include at least 1,000 ft. of British films after June 30, 1926.

Fox Sales Gain Under Grainger Plans

Success of New System Credited to Revamped Organization and Greater Cooperation Between Home Office and Field Force

THE sales policies which have been instituted under the administration of James R. Grainger, general sales manager, are included among the factors which trade observers point out as conspicuous elements underlying the marked progress made by the Fox Film Corporation during the past year. Many regard the Fox sales organization as one of the most efficient that has ever been built up by a film distributing concern, and this, coupled with the fact that the sales of the company have shown an almost sensational gain during 1925, is being pointed out as a triumph for the design and execution of the plan put into effect by Mr. Grainger.

One of the distinguishing features of the company's sales organization are the reports emanating from members of the organization itself of the marked increase in the spirit of cooperation which at present exists between the home office and the field units testimony to the fact that Grainger is overcoming one of the greatest difficulties which face any sales executive, in the film industry or out of it; which is the conflict between the viewpoints of the man out in the territory and the man in the home office environment.

With his organization functioning smoothly and efficiently, and prospects of a prosperous year ahead, Grainger is looking forward to even greater strides in 1926. In a statement issued this week, he expresses the utmost confidence that the coming twelve-month will record many improvements in the picture business generally, as a result of the "gradual stabilization" which has been felt by all members of the industry during 1925.

Preliminary to setting in force his policy to bring Fox exchanges to the highest point of usefulness, Mr. Grainger made a personal tour of the distribution centers in the United States and Canada, coming into direct contact with every man on the sales force. Those whose records showed definite achievement were advanced into work of added responsibility. In a few cases, where individual records did not reach the standard set by the sales manager to put over the Fox progress, eliminations in the personnel were made.

For the convenience of the company's exhibitor customers, new exchanges were opened in Memphis, Tennessee, and in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Mr. Grainger placed in charge of the Memphis branch C. W. McKean, an old Fox man of wide experience in that territory. John H. Lorentz, formerly associated with the Seattle and Chicago Exchanges, was made manager of the Milwaukee office.

Five exchanges—namely, those in Atlanta, Charlotte, Detroit, Philadelphia, and New York—were moved into new and more commodious quarters. In New York the exchange facilities will be even further improved with the completion of the new Fox Exchange Building which is now in process of construction at 343-45 West Forty-fourth Street.

In the major sales territories of the country the number of district managers was increased by Mr. Grainger to facilitate the handling of Fox business in a more efficient manner. In charge of the Southern District, with headquarters at Dallas, Texas, Lou D. Remy was appointed to supervise the Atlanta, New Orleans, Oklahoma City and Memphis exchanges. G. W. Fuller was stationed at Washington, D. C., to supervise the offices in that city, Charlotte and Pittsburgh. From San Francisco Howard J. Sheehan now directs the sales work of Los Angeles, Seattle, Salt Lake City and Denver. The New England territory is under the jurisdiction of H. F. Campbell in Boston, while Ira H. Cohen, from Cincinnati, supervises Detroit and Indianapolis.

To carry on special assignments in any territory necessary, Mr. Grainger appointed three home office representatives: Max Roth, W. H. Rudolph and George Roberts.

A number of promotions made by Mr. Grainger includes the advancement of J. P. O'Loughlin from the post of Toronto exchange manager to that of Canadian district manager.

Regarding the prospects of the new year, Mr. Grainger says:

"The general business prospects for the approaching year are extremely good and the film industry in particular may look ahead into the next twelve months with optimistic assurance. The year just closing has offered very definite progress. Product was better in 1925 than in 1924. In 1926 it will be better still. A general tendency to constant improvement is sufficient in itself to make the outlook bright.

"The public has played no small part in disclosing a hopeful horizon ahead. Increased attendance has been the concrete encouragement which film patrons have returned to producers who have made better pictures and exhibitors who have showed them.

"The activity planned by Fox during the coming season reflects the spirit of progress manifesting itself throughout the whole industry. Fox is looking forward to the biggest program ever undertaken by its production forces.

"Better story value will be another improvement in film productions released during 1926. All makers of pictures have been more or less guilty in the past of concentrating on titles and casts, and neglecting plot strength.

"In catering to the popular taste, the successful producer will during 1926 vary his program so that all types of screen plays will reach the public. Many exhibitors have complained from time to time that a fad for a certain sort of story will invade the studios and audiences will soon become surfeited to a point of steering clear of the box-office.

"The future Fox program is diversified with every variety of picture the exhibitor's patrons can desire. Comedy dramas, westerns, adventure and war stories, domestic dramas, society plays and spectacles—each class has its place on our schedule to furnish theatres with complete service. These stories are not recruited from any single source. They are based on big plays, best selling novels and, in several instances, screen originals.

"Another point of advancement that will undoubtedly come during 1926 will be a strengthened position for the short subject. Exhibitors are already according extensive advertising and publicity to one and two reelers and in some instances have built whole programs from them."

M. P. T. O. A. Quarters Completed

HHEADQUARTERS of the National Organization of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are about completed and dedicated to the protection of all the Independent forces of the Motion Picture Industry. The quarters are spacious and well equipped, and the Organization is functioning at full speed.

Veteran Exhibitor Dead in Rochester

GEORGE EDWARD SIMPSON, for many years, prominently identified with motion picture interests in Rochester, died last week at his home there, following a long illness. Mr. Simpson was one of the pioneers in the exhibition of high grade motion pictures, not only in Rochester, but in the country.

In 1907, he built and opened the Hippodrome theatre at Main street and East avenue, then the most pretentious house of its kind in the city. He conducted it successfully for several years before he sold his interests, only to re-invest in the Regent theatre, which he opened in 1914 and which became at once the leading theatre in Rochester.

International Newsreel May Produce Special Release for Publix Houses, Believed

FOLLOWING recent rumors to the effect that Courtland Smith of the Hays office would head a news reel department for Publix Theatres, the Famous Players chain, it was reported this week that the material for this special release would be made by the International Newsreel Corporation for the Publix houses exclusively.

Edgar B. Hatrick, the International Newsreel head, was en route to the West Coast and could not be reached. S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous, was also out of the city, not yet having returned from Berlin. R. V. Anderson, sales manager of the newsreel corporation, declined to comment on the report in any way in the absence of the others.

It was learned from reliable sources, however, that Publix and International have been discussing the production by the latter for the Publix houses of a special release, not strictly a newsreel in the present sense, as reported, but a special reel of unusual and interesting character. This same matter, it may be said, was up for discussion two years ago, but no definite action came of it at that time.

London Studios for Williams

Acquires 40 Acre Estate for Building of Plant; Plans Great Production Activity

J. D. WILLIAMS and George T. Eaton are heads of a British organization known as British National Pictures, which has purchased an estate of forty acres near London for the purpose of building studios and producing pictures. The plan is to build eight large studios on the site and a contract has already been let for the building of the first two of these.

These two studios, each 300 feet long, 100 feet wide and 45 feet high, will not only be the first modern studios built as the result of the determination of the British people to see British films on British screens; but will be the largest studios in the World embodying all the latest technical developments in studio construction and equipment, it is claimed.

Messrs. Braby & Co., Ltd., are under obligation to complete these studios in sixteen weeks from January 1st, 1926. It is therefore anticipated that it will be possible to begin film production by June 1st.

In the meantime British National Pictures, Ltd., have acquired a controlling interest in the Herbert Wilcox picture "Nell Gwyn."

George T. Eaton and J. D. Williams will visit America within the next few weeks to make arrangements for the distribution in the United States of "Nell Gwyn" and of H. G. Ponting's picture of Scott's last Antarctic Expedition "The Great White Silence."

Eaton and Williams will also take to America a number of stories they have selected as suitable for production and will discuss these with a number of British Film Directors and British Film players who are now in America, and who have already expressed their eagerness to return to work in England.

Eaton and Williams will also make arrangements for the general distribution in America of the films to be made by British National Pictures and of such other British films as they may acquire.

Warner Talks of New Season

Tells of Coming Prosperity and Denies That Sam Morris Will Leave Company

WITH their internal organization definitely settled and the new distribution policy arranged, Warner Brothers are looking ahead to a prosperous year during 1926, according to Albert Warner, who in addition to discussing the coming product, also took occasion to deny the rumor that Sam E. Morris was to sever his relations with the company.

First discussing the Morris rumor, Warner said:

"Mr. Morris has been with us a long time, is with us now and will continue to be with us as manager of distribution. Reports affecting him are rumors only, and I know that at no time has he had any idea of leaving the company, where he is highly regarded."

With regard to production, Warner said: "In the next few months, with 'Lady Windermere's Fan,' John Barrymore in 'The Sea Beast,' 'Syd' Chaplin's new picture, Barrymore's 'Don Juan,' a new Lubitsch production, and others of equal magnitude, exhibitors playing our pictures are going to have something to talk about.

"H. M. Warner is now at the western studio preparing the production schedule for next year, and will probably remain there until it is completed. We have already started work on next season's schedule, and with our entire organization now functioning at top speed, our forty for the coming season will have more attention from every angle than has been possible in the past.

"It looks to me like a big picture year just ahead for everyone in the industry."

West Coast Co. Proud of Achievements

Public Relations Department of Well Known Theatre Chain
Has Accomplished Big Results With Million Patrons

THE Public Relations Department of West Coast Theatres is justly proud of its accomplishments in knowing and catering to the likes and dislikes of a million theatre patrons. They have been carefully studying the form of entertainment desired by their customers and meeting the requirements demanded.

This organization operates 168 theatres which claim a patronage of more than a million a year. Jack Retlaw is the head of the Public Relations Department and therefore qualified to speak regarding it, which he does as follows:

"The days when the rental of an average picture, the engagement of a mediocre piano player, and an indifferent ticket seller were all that were essential to the theater business, are passed. The public has become more discriminating and critical in its entertainment demands, and certainly has a right to be, but what forms of entertainment carry the greatest appeal to the greatest number of people is a problem which can only be solved through close contact and cooperation on the part of the theater management and the patron.

"Our department of Public Relations endeavors to establish and maintain this contact through personal touch, questionnaires, and various systems which do not cause our patrons the slightest inconvenience. Letters of praise or adverse criticism of a picture come direct to our attention and we tabulate the statements and use them as a guide for the future.

"Pleasing the grown-up is far more simple in the matter of selection than pleasing the children. Programs for youngsters must not only be entertaining but must be of a nature which protect these future fathers and mothers from anything coarse, crude, suggestive or demoralizing in the slightest degree.

Minneapolis Turns To Express Shipment

FOR the first time since the establishment of the parcel post Minneapolis motion picture distributors have turned back in a body to express shipment of film.

The action was determined upon at a meeting of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade, Inc., and letters making the announcement to the trade carrying signatures of First National Pictures, Educational Film Exchange, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Film Booking Offices, Fox Film Corporation, Friedman Film Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, Pathe Exchange, Inc., Universal Film Exchange, Vitagraph, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Film Booking Offices, (Sioux Falls) Famous Players Lasky Corporation (Sioux Falls) and Universal Film Exchange (Sioux Falls.)

This is the first time since the organization of the Film Board of Trade here that the option on shipping agency has been taken away from the exhibitor.

What may amuse and greatly entertain a child might at the same time prove most harmful to his mind, and the protection of the childish mind is of paramount importance to the officials of West Coast Theaters.

"With the view to logically and constructively handling this phase of work, the Public Relations Dept. maintains a special organization for the presentation of Junior Matinees for youngsters. This organization is under the supervision of Ryllis Homington.

"Prior to its general release, arrangements are made whereby a special preview of a picture to be shown in one of our theaters is given for mothers, teachers, women's clubs or any recognized organization which cares to send a representative. The film is carefully studied and later discussed for the purpose of deciding whether any scene or bit of action would be likely to have any other than a most helpful influence on the minds of children. If any question does arise on this angle notes are made and the questionable parts of the film are cut for the showing at the Junior Matinees. All the objections are carefully tabulated on cards, and these cuts are made every time the film is shown at a Junior Matinee in any West Coast theater.

"Another outstanding feature of this work is the fact that the general public, through representatives of various organizations, are made to feel that their views, suggestions and constructive criticism is welcome at all times; that it is the paramount aim of West Coast Theaters, Inc., to please the general public and not sit in final judgment on entertainment with the arbitrary attitude: 'Take it or leave it.'

"Giving the public just what it likes and desires is the great problem of the theatrical owner after all, and West Coast operates on the theory that there is no better judge of its likes and dislikes than the public itself."

Majority of Companies Show Tendency Upward, With Banks Helping Industry, According to Wall Street Journal

THE Wall Street Journal of Commerce is responsible for the statement that since the Summer of 1924, stocks of the majority of motion picture companies have shown a decided and steady tendency upward. With the rise, according to the Journal, the big banks have also shown more confidence in the industry and are more willingly advancing funds for production and distribution purposes.

Regarding the situation the Journal writes as follows:

"At the present time the stocks of most motion picture companies are selling at a price very near the high point for 1925, and in most cases above the level which prevailed in 1924. During the summer of 1924 several of these stocks were selling at prices well below the present level. Since that time, however, there has been a marked increase in their value, which is attributed to generally improved conditions in the country as a whole, and to increase in purchasing power in the agricultural sections of the country, some of which, in proportion to population have a greater number of theatres than more densely settled regions.

"Prosperity in the motion picture business within recent years and the centralization of a large proportion of the business in a few strong hands has been reflected in a general change of attitude toward the industry on the part of those in positions of financial responsibility. Although motion picture financing cannot be said to have penetrated into the inner circles of conservatism, the stronger companies are now able to finance themselves by issues of stock, some of which are listed upon the New York Stock Exchange. The large proportion of intangible assets always included in the statements of even the largest motion picture companies has acted as a deterrent to the extension of unsecured credit by more conservative banking organizations. There are, however, a certain number of banks which are ready to finance producing companies. It has been estimated that in 1924 about $200,000,000 was invested in new films, and that more than a third of this amount came from the banks.

Arrange Song Tieup on "Skyrocket"

A TIEUP has been effected between Associated Exhibitors and Leo Feist, Inc., musical publishers, whereby "Wonderful One," the theme song of the Peggy Hopkins Joyce special, "The Skyrocket" will be broadcast by every large radio station in the United States and Canada on the evening of January 7th, when "The Skyrocket" is to have its world premiere in the grand ball room of the steamship Leviathan.

The Feist organization has arranged to send a new orchestration of "Wonderful One" to every radio orchestra. The branch offices in the principal cities have been notified of the tieup and will arrange with announcers to provide the playing of this number with the announcement that it is being featured in honor of Peggy Hopkins Joyce night aboard the Leviathan.

Poli Denies Rumor Of Resignation

BECAUSE rumors had become current, S. Z. Poli, head of a chain of theatres extending through many sections of New England, emphatically declares that he has no intention of resigning from the active management of the chain, nor has he any intention of relinquishing the management to his general manager, Louis M. Sagal.

He also denied the rumor that O. C. Edwards, manager of the Palace Theatre at New Haven, Conn., was to be promoted to general manager, declaring there would be no change whatever in the management of any of his theatres or in the present executive staff. Mr. Poli says it is his intention to remain in New Haven, the headquarters of his enterprises.

"The industry as a whole has done much to reduce costs and to eliminate the extravagance for which in the past it has been so severely criticized. Financial stabilization has been greatly aided by the marked trend toward centralization, which has characterized the history of the industry within the last few years. Mergers, consolidations and the elimination of many weaker companies have served to reduce the number of organizations and to strengthen those remaining.

"The larger companies in the industry make annual earning statements and most of them show very satisfactory earnings at the present time. However, even the stronger companies carry on their balance sheets are items of good will and other intangible assets. It is extremely difficult for even those with an intimate knowledge of the industry to judge the values of such assets as scenario rights, contracts with stars, operating contracts, leases and other items of a similar nature. Unquestionably many of these rights may represent very substantial earning power, but just what this will be it is impossible to ascertain in advance. The value of these intangible assets often works by the law of averages, and is sometimes greatly above prospective estimates, and sometimes well under.

"Another weak point in the financial structure of the motion picture company is inventory. This item usually consists of chiefly of negatives and positives films. Ordinarily when a picture is produced the negative is carried upon the books of the company at the actual cost of production, and this value is gradually written off at the rate of 50 per cent at the end of ninety days and about 88 per cent at the end of the year. By the second year the film is carried at a nominal value of $1. Whether or not the negative is worth this actual book value depends upon the success of the picture. If the picture is not successful the real value of the negative will be far below the book value during the first year. On the other hand, if the picture is very popular and has a long run the box office receipts will continue to come in long after the book value has been written off.

"In view of the uncertain elements in the business it seems probable that the greater part of direct loans for motion picture production will continue to be made through organizations other than banks. Some companies formed solely for this purpose are better able than a bank to assume the risks involved. Usually this form of borrowing is more expensive for the producer than bank loans would be, as rates are made high in proportion to the risk taken. In many instances exhibitors have financed the making of films in order to assure to their theatres a supply of suitable films, but this method of financing was commoner in the earlier years of the industry than at the present time.

"Occasionally an exhibiting company will finance a film producer and when the picture has earned enough to pay off the loan the exhibitor will divide the remainder of the proceeds with the producer on a half and half basis. This is a very expensive arrangement for the producer."

Fanchon & Marco's Kiddie Revue at Warfield

"The Toy Box" is the title of the O'Neill Sisters' Kiddie Revue at Loew's Warfield, San Francisco, staged by Fanchon and Marco, week of Dec. 12-25. The aggregation of tiny entertainers, collectively and individually, again distinguished themselves. There is one diminutive blonde, seemingly no larger than your thumb, who sings and dances with the grace of a veteran. Another little dancer carried the crowds with her cleverness, while classic, acrobatic and eccentric dancers came and went so rapidly as to make your head swim.

The girls did not have entirely their own way. The "gentlemen" of the ensemble were there and there were a pair of clever little fellows who did character song that brought down the house.

Walt Rosener and his orchestra not only furnished music for the revue and the feature picture, but also gave a concert. There was a novelty number in which members of the orchestra had a singing part. Victor Herbert's "Babies in Toyland" furnished a harmonious suggestion for the atmosphere of the stage act. Then Rosener gave for the first time here the Ray Henderson New York hit, "I'm Sitting on Top of the World."

Finds Booking Guide Very Useful, Says Caress

"We find it very useful in selecting pictures, also in preparing newspaper ads, especially when we fail to get press sheets from the exchanges. We also use it to find the footage of the different pictures so that we can arrange our programs to run about two hours."

James S. Caress, Palace Theatre, Elmore, Ind.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

"Bardleys the Magnificent," starring John Gilbert, is another picture to go into early production. This screen version of Rafael Sabatini's story will be done entirely in Technicolor. Claire Windsor will lend her beauty and talent to the leading feminine role.

"The Barrier," the Rex Beach story, will be another 1926 release. In it Norman Kerry, Henry B. Walthall and Lionel Barrymore will play the principal roles. It is to be directed by George Hill from a scenario by Harvey Gates. Marceline Day, chosen one of the Baby Stars of 1926, has been cast for the feminine lead.

Hobart Henley will direct and offer "The Auction Block," another Rex Beach favorite, as one of his first contributions to the M-G-M 1926 schedule. Charles Ray and

New German Contingent is Outlined

Report from Commercial Attache Describes Proposed Measure for Coming Year to Regulate Film Imports

THE following report from Douglas Miller, Assistant Commercial Attache of the Department of Commerce in Berlin, embodies the proposals made by the Central Association of the German film industry for the new contingent system to be put into effect after March 31, 1926. These have not yet been put into force by the government.

1) All films, censored during 1924 and 1925, which are to be used as compensation films, have to be reported to the Export and Import Commissioner before December 31, 1925. All foreign films which are to be imported against these films, must have passed censorship before March 31, 1926.

Films censored in the period between August 1 and December 31, 1925, and which may be used as compensation films, do not forfeit this right if the producer of the film has proved to the German Central Association of Film Renters before December 31, 1925, that he has not been able to rent his film in Germany. Should such a film be rented after December 31, 1925, the renter may receive a compensation film according to the foregoing paragraph, prior to March 31, 1926.

2) Permits for censorship of foreign films will only be issued during 1926 if the firm in question can prove—by means of contracts or other documents—that for every foreign film for which they desire a permit, they have a compensation film of approxi-

"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp"

Langdon's First

HARRY LANGDON'S first picture now being completed for First National, has been given the title of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp." This title was selected after hundreds of others had been submitted. Rapid progress is being made on the picture, which has been in progress for a number of weeks under the direction of Harry Edwards.

It is anticipated that much incidental comedy business will mark the picture, as Langdon has been surrounded by a number of experienced gag men. In the supporting cast are Joan Crawford as leading lady, Edwards Davis, Carlton Griffin and Tom Murray.

mately the same length which has passed censorship during 1926 and which has not previously been rented. (This includes sport and cultural films insofar as the latter are suitable for exhibition in picture theatres in general.)

In regard to all other educational and cultural films which have passed censorship in 1926, for every two German films one foreign film of approximately the same kind and length may be imported.

Such films which, owing to method of production or for other reasons, have apparently only been produced as compensation for a foreign film, may not be used for this purpose.

3) Only such renting firms which are registered in Germany are entitled to ask for permits.

The firm asking for such permits may only use the film for their own company and may not, either directly or indirectly, turn it over to other firms.

District renting concerns which rent German films only for single districts may only receive one-quarter of a film per film and per district. Parts of films belonging to district renters may be added to part-films of other renters; however, these films may only be distributed by district renters.

4) Foreign comedies and grotesques of less than 500 meters may be imported without compensation.

German films of this class may not be used as compensation films.

5) All investigations will be carried on by a committee composed of six representatives of different groups of the film industry, four of which are sufficient to pass on films.

Every firm applying for a compensation film must first be given a hearing before refusal.

Protests against the above regulations may only be made to the Reichswirtschaftsministerium.

Associated Busy on New Product

With "Triumphant Thirty" Accounted For Plans For 1926-27 Season Are Now Progressing Rapidly

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS has already struck a high pitch of activity in connection with the production program for the 1926-27 season, now that the "Triumphant Thirty" are all accounted for and being distributed. "The Skyrocket," the Peggy Hopkins Joyce special is said to be already assured of success.

Pictures for the 1926-27 Associated program already are being made in studios in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Tacoma, Portland and New York, and rumor has it that P. A. Powers has under advisement the acquisition of a central studio building in Hollywood to house the various units making pictures to be released under the Associated banner. It is expected that on his return to New York from the Coast within the next few weeks Mr. Powers will have a definite announcement to make regarding this central studio plan. It is believed that in this manner Associated will bring the production of pictures made for release under its banner to a point of efficiency that is certain to reflect in the added worth of the finished product.

Among the many important matters occupying the attention of Mr. Powers on the Coast is preliminary work on the second starring vehicle for Peggy Hopkins Joyce. According to Mr. Powers this picture is destined to be even a bigger special than "The Skyrocket."

While Mr. Powers has been busy on the Coast with plans for the 1926-27 product, Oscar A. Price, president of Associated, has been equally busy in New York. Out of a mountainous mass of details and propositions submitted and precipitated, Mr. Price has made selections which should aid materially in bringing moneymaking pictures to the screens of exhibitors who present Associated Exhibitors product. Not the least of this work has been the reviewing and passing upon of scores of completed pictures which were offered for release.

While not yet ready to announce definite names and titles for all of next year's releases, Associated Exhibitors is in a position to talk about the program as a whole with the belief that it will live up to the highest week-in-and-week-out standards, and that the specials will stand out as among the coming year's best pictures.

In line with the announcement of the forthcoming product, it is particularly worthy of note that Associated has progressed in such a short time to the point where such an announcement might be made. A Herculean task of reorganization has already been accomplished in the reborn Associated Exhibitors, but much still remains to be done to make of the concern the outstanding factor of the industry which its sponsors are certain it will become.

Another fact in connection with the next year's product that is worthy of mention is the attitude that will be taken on advertising and publicity. Associated Exhibitors announce that every release under their trade mark will receive individual attention in advertising and other methods of selling.

McNamara Will Construct Dix Comedy

Gregory La Cava is directing. The picture was adapted for the screen by J. Clarkson Miller from the story by H. A. du Souchet.

Governments To Aid In "Old Ironsides"

COOPERATION of two European governments has been obtained by James Cruze in the filming of "Old Ironsides," for Paramount. Cruze, who is now in Paris with his wife, Betty Compson, cabled Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount production chief, that historical records and data necessary to make accurate the filming of this great American epic have been placed at his disposal. "Old Ironsides" is the story of the frigate, Constitution, founder of the American navy's glorious tradition, which in 1804 led the war against the Tripoli pirates who were at that time exacting tribute from a score of powerful nations.

In the archives of the French and Italian governments is a wealth of historic data about these people, their habits, and the costumes of that period, which Cruze believes will be of invaluable aid in filming "Old Ironsides," which will be a 12-reel super-feature, for road show purposes. The American navy is already cooperating with Cruze and the Paramount organization.

Sees Benefit in Theatre Boom

Ned Marin Says Modern Houses Are Merely Supplanting Antiquated Ones

NED MARIN, western sales manager of First National Pictures, who recently returned from a tour of several weeks which took him clear across the country, sees nothing but a benefit to the picture industry from the large number of new houses that are being built.

Marin sees nothing unusual in the present plans for theatre construction in the west. Commenting on it he says:

"It merely means that the old type house which has become antiquated in its architecture and physical conveniences is giving place to the modern theatre with all its comforts.

"In many cities and towns in California and other Western states, I found new theatres of the most attractive design under way. I also found that they are intended to supplant the converted opera houses and other old time structures which have been the best that the towns afforded up to the present time. I think that an actual check of the incoming and outgoing theatres would reveal that the total seating capacity is being increased to only a normal degree. As the new theatres are opened the old houses will be closed. The death knell has been sounded for the old fashioned theatres. Therefore, there is no reason to be concerned about the situation. If the antiquated, and in many respects inadequate, houses could be filled, it certainly should be far easier to attract patrons to the more desirable theatres."

Elaborate Preparations for "Beau Geste"

Elaborate preparations are being made at the Paramount Long Island studio for the expedition into Algeria and the Sahara Desert where scenes will be filmed for the production of "Beau Geste," Percival Christopher Wren's dramatic story of the French Foreign Legion. Herbert Brenon, who will direct the production, is busy on the preliminary work of casting and studio officials are organizing a production unit for the most ambitious location trip ever made from the Eastern studio of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Louis A. Sarecky, business manager of the unit, sailed on the steamship Paris for France to prepare the way for Mr. Brenon and a company of players who will leave late in January.

Is Enthusiastic Over Production Plans
Perfected During His Trip There

Lasky, as may be expected, is most enthusiastic over the coming product of the company. He says that under the general supervision of B. P. Schulberg and Hector Turnbull, associate producers at the Lasky studio, the studio forces have plunged into the new program that has never been surpassed.

Lasky declares that Bebe Daniels' next picture, "Miss Brewster's Millions" will be one of the outstanding ones of the season. The production is being directed by Clarence Badger and Miss Daniels will be supported by Ford Sterling and Warner Baxter.

Joseph M. Schenck will take over the Pickford-Fairbanks studio during the absence of Doug and Mary in Europe and it will probably be used by the Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge companies. Plans are now being considered for the enlargement of the plant in order that the Schenck units may have more room to work.

Taking possession of this studio is merely a temporary arrangement, made necessary because of lack of space at the United lot, where the Schenck interests are now quartered. Mary and Doug hope to leave Hollywood for New York and Europe on January 15th.

"Miss Nobody" will be the title of Colleen Moore's next starring vehicle for First National, following "Irene." It was originally called "Shebo" and was taken from a serial story by Tiffany Wells. Gotham Will Release Two in January Lumas Film Corporation has made a slight change in the releasing schedule of their Gotham productions. Instead of releasing "The Phantom of the Forest" in December, as originally scheduled, this picture, starring Thunder, the marvel dog, will go forward to January. There was no December release, but there will be two in January, "The Phantom of the Forest" and "The Speed Limit," with Raymond McKee.

Production work is now well under way on the final three pictures of the Gotham twelve. "Racing Blood," "Hearts and Spangles" and "The Sign of the Claw" will go forward one a month to Gotham franchise holders.

"Sons of Sheik" Next For Valentino

RUDOLPH VALENTINO will return from Europe within the next month to start production about February 15th on his next starring vehicle, "The Sons of the Sheik," a sequel to "The Sheik," one of his most successful pictures. Joseph M. Schenck has purchased screen rights to the new E. M. Hull novel for the star.

Decision to make "The Sons of the Sheik" Valentino's next picture followed a world wide canvass of theatre-goers, through the medium of United Artists executives. Fans were asked whether they would like to see the star in a role similar to "The Sheik," "Blood and Sand," "The Four Horsemen" or "The Eagle." More than ninety percent of the replies are said to have favored "The Sheik."

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Directing Appeals to Kiddies

Model Campaigns To Interest Youngsters Are Developed By Exhibitors For "Black Cyclone"

AS IT is a picture that is specially well adapted to exploitation, directly appealing to youngsters, and through them to all potential theatre goers, exhibitors have executed many excellent campaigns of this type for "Black Cyclone." For example:

Fay's Theatre, Providence, R. I., one of the most liberal of picture theatres in distributing tickets to youngsters, made sure that no kid in the town would miss this screen treat by advertising a stunt which is sure to capture the children and appeal to the sentiment of the entire community. A display ad of the Fay's in the Providence Journal said:

"If there are any children who, for the lack of the small admission price of 15 cents, are unable to see 'Black Cyclone,' have them come to Fay's Theatre and make themselves known to the manager. We will be glad to have them see the picture as our guests, without charge."

Boys and girls of Hannibal, Mo., were admitted free for the afternoon shows at the Orpheum in that city by merely making a drawing of Rex from any illustration in their advertising and presenting it at the box office of the theatre. No matter how good or how poor the drawing was it meant free admission to the theatre. In addition three prizes were given for the best drawings.

Still another liberal offer was made by the management of the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb., who admitted every child at a matinee who brought in a lucky horseshoe. Horseshoes were soon at a premium in Lincoln. They were stacked in the lobby several feet deep, the pile of luck-bringers serving for an additional ballyhoo which brought in many older folks.

In Winston-Salem, N. C., the management of the Ideal Theatre, gave a bar of Baby Ruth candy at the box office to each person purchasing a ticket to the feature.

Advertising "Black Cyclone" as "the talk of the motion picture industry," the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., in a tie-up with the Daily Province, offered $100 in cash prizes for the best reproduction in color of one of their advertising illustrations.

The New Theatre, Staunton, Va., addressed a special advertisement to parents as to what motion picture their children should see and called attention to the theme of "Black Cyclone." A free matinee for children was given. The copy stated "that it does not make this offer every day for all pictures for the obvious reason that the children's welfare is vastly more important to the New Theatre than their dimes."

Grist Uses Arrows To Bill "California Straight Ahead"

Direction arrows, bearing the title in white letters on a red ground, were used as the main exploitation item for the engagement of "California Straight Ahead," by Manager A. S. Grist at the Rivoli, Greenville. Two hundred of these novelty posters were displayed throughout the city and on roads leading into the town, ten days prior to the opening date.

The stunt evoked quite a bit of discussion, many persons believing it to be a move on the part of California realtors to keep everyone from going to Florida.

During the picture's run a huge arrow with similar copy was hung under the marquee, pointing into the theatre.

Volz Increases Billboard Space For Apollo

Five twenty-four sheet stands are being used now by the Apollo Theatre, Baltimore, managed by John G. Volz, who has just inaugurated this new method of advertising the plays at his theatre. He places three six sheets on each board, each advertising a different show and the dates they are to be shown throughout the week as he changes shows three times weekly.

In addition to this he is using window cards also.

"Lost World" Gets Bigger Drives at Average Cost

The trick of staging a bigger than average campaign without increasing the average advertising appropriation of a theatre was accomplished in Buffalo and duplicated at Niagara Falls, under the execution of Walter Lindlar, First National representative, who was detailed to the assignment of campaigning "The Lost World" at Shea's Hippodrome at Buffalo, and the Bellevue, Niagara Falls.

In both instances the houses used average newspaper space, but were successful in gaining the co-operation of newspapers in the Weight Guessing contest and in the use of feature stories and picture layouts. In Buffalo the Public Library officials agreed to insert book marks announcing the engagement of "The Lost World."

Manager Lawrence, of the Bellevue, Niagara Falls, did all the billing that he could get space for, which was six stands. He also put out 2,000 rotos and 200 cards, which was quite a flash for the town.

They also put on a telephone teaser stunt that brought good returns. Phone service is unlimited up there and girls were engaged, who had phones in their homes, to call up every residence listed in the phone book. When the party answered they just said: "I'm looking for The Lost World," and hung up as though disconnected.

Cosmetic Samplers Herald "Paint and Powder"

Face powder, distributed in sample packages through the cooperation of a manufacturer, served as an effective announcement of the showing of "Paint and Powder" at the Audubon and Crotona Theatres of the William Fox circuit in New York. The tie-up was effected by Milton Harris, director of publicity for the theatres. The samplers were enclosed in envelopes bearing an imprint reading "Compliments of Elaine Hammerstein, who will be seen in 'Paint and Powder' at this theatre," and were passed out to patrons of both theatres for several days prior to the opening.

"Wild West" (Pathe) circussed at the Queen theatre, Knoxville, by means of a giant sign illuminated by flood lights. Another evidence of the growing practice of exploiting serials and short features.

250 Contest Replies For 12 Passes For "Romola"

A cross-word puzzle contest, from which 250 replies were received, cost the Queen Theatre, Austin, Tex., just 12 complimentaries and stirred up a great amount of interest in the presentation of "Romola." This stunt was one of the items in a forceful campaign staged for the picture by L. R. Guyer, manager of the Queen Theatre.

Advertising was started well in advance with personal endorsement ads in the newspapers, over 2,000 book markers distributed through high schools and university libraries, and 50 street car cards. Announcement banners were also placed on a truck which was driven about town two days before showing.

Valuable publicity was gained through private showing held for high school teachers of the city. Special invitations, printed at the high school gratis, were delivered to teachers personally.

Among the many excellent window displays secured, was one with a book store, a drug store located in heart of business section, and a jewelry shop which displayed special art cards directly tying-up with photoplay at the Queen. A display in the Chamber of Commerce window three days prior to opening and during showing, attracted a world of attention.

Lobby of theatre was decorated with five foot hand-painted cut-out, with a 10-foot cut-out of Lillian Gish mounted on marquee.

5 and 10 Stores To Sell M-G-M Novelizations

An exploitation tie-up whereby the Jacobson-Hodgkinson Corporation, of New York, will publish novelizations of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen plays for distribution through five and ten cent stores, has been arranged by the exploitation department of M.G.M. The series of books will be known as "Popular Plays and Screen Library," and will be placed on sale in stores of the Woolworth, Kresge and McCrory company throughout the States and Canada.

The first story to reach the public in this form will be "The Midshipman." This will be followed by "Old Clothes," "The Mocking Bird," and others of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions.

The Royal theatre, Ashland, Wis., takes the lion's share of a window display in a department store to feature the showing of "The Iron Horse" (Fox).

Small Town "Phantom" Ads

Best Features Of Metropolitan Drives Used In Exploitation At Saratoga

IF there is a definite gulf between the type of campaigns which are staged in large cities and small towns, the distance between the two is narrowing at an increasing rate, for while the exhibitor in the town has a smaller stage on which to produce his advertising production, all of the effects which the large city boasts are also at his disposal. Among several recent campaigns in which small town theatres have duplicated, on a miniature scale, of course, but with all the detail included, the big city exploitation for features, is that which was staged in Saratoga, N. Y., for "The Phantom of the Opera" engagement at the Palace Theatre, owned by Harrington and Goldsmith and operated by Ben Strauss.

"The Phantom" went into Saratoga during "dead" season—that is there was no racing—but it came within $120 of the record made with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," which played during the height of the racing season when the normal population of Saratoga is doubled.

A parade which escorted the cans of "Phantom" film from the railroad station to the theatre brought out nearly everyone in town. This was advertised several days in advance by a 3-sheet size announcement in the theatre's lobby and in the local newspaper. The ad stated that every boy who was at the station to welcome the picture and marched in the procession to the theatre would receive a bag of candy.

A truck was decorated with red bunting and carried a ten-foot box painted bright red with "The Phantom of the Opera" lettered on both sides.

The truck ballyhoo drove on with a great flourish for the theatre. A bass drum beat marching time, and two policemen and six boys tried to keep the "Phantom reception committee" in orderly lines. The kids yelled and cheered until everyone in town knew that something was up. Following the demonstration the candy was distributed in front of the theatre by the policemen and two men from the candy store.

In addition to sharing the cost of the candy, the store gave a complete window to a "Phantom Red" display—this time of red candies instead of gowns—and "Phantom" cards.

Ten other stores also gave window displays of various kinds.

A cut-out which attracted much attention was made from the stock 6-sheet. This shows the figure of a devil peering over the top of the Paris Opera House and clutching it on both sides. The eyes of the devil and the windows of the Opera House were cut out and on this was placed an electric light and a victrola covered by red cloth. The victrola, equipped with a repeater and a small boy to wind it, played the quartet from "Faust" continuously. This novelty was placed in one corner of the lobby.

Dignified "Lost World" Aids

Mark Strand Theatre, Albany, Exploits Picture in Showmanlike, Clean Campaign

The Mark Strand, Albany, eschews any and all methods that savor of the blatant ballyhoo, rigorously confining itself to dignified showmanship, with the accent stressed on the showman. And its campaign on the engagement of "The Lost World" was planned accordingly.

Two weeks prior to the opening, the Board of Education of Albany was given a pre-view of the picture and endorsed it to all principals, teachers and scholars. At this same showing the ministry and public officials of the city were also present.

The Albany News having run the serialization of the story some time previous regarded the advent of the picture as a definite news event, having to all intents and purposes sponsored it while in fiction form. They ran several stories and photos on the news pages in addition to the routine material on the movie page.

The Albany Telegram ran a half page story with art illustrating the imaginary consequences of a visit to Albany by one of the "Lost World" dinosaurs. This story in the feature section was carried the day prior to the opening of the picture.

The Knickerbocker Press and The Times Union also viewed the advent of "The Lost World" as a news event and carried photos and stories in its news sections accordingly in addition to the quota of space allotted on the amusement pages.

Co-operative tie-ups were effected with the leading stores selling tobacco, wrist watches, sheet music, typewriters and sporting goods for the display of photographs appropriately captioned.

The marquee and the lobby of the theatre were decorated with cut-outs and streamers of the hideous monsters which form one of the features of this picture, and they proved one of the sights of the town. An extra billing force was added for the week and the city and its environs were thoroughly covered by its energetic billposting brigade.

The campaign was executed by the Mark Strand's Director of Publicity, Anthony Veiller, son of the famous playwright Bayard Veiller, in less than a week with the aid of A. P. Waxman from the home office exploitation department.

Free Nail Polish in Lobby for "Manicure Girl"

Coincident with his showing of "The Manicure Girl" at the Victory, Denver, Manager C. W. Hallock established a real manicure girl in the lobby with an attractive little arch over her table painted with the following: "Step up and get a Bebe Daniels Manicure Free." This stunt attracted a lot of attention.

In addition to the above the picture was exploited through the usual channels.

Offers "Wild West" as a Mid-Winter Circus

Circus advertising was used for "The Wild West," a Pathe serial, by the Queen Theatre in Knoxville, Tenn. The theatre featured a huge sign erected on the roof of the house after a design by W. E. Drumar, general manager of the Southern Enterprises Theatres.

The novelty of offering a circus in mid-winter seems an unusual angle of appeal to capture the interest of amusement seekers, and so it proved at the Queen with "Wild West," which has a story revolving around the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch circus.

Local Film Aids "Slave of Fashion" Engagement

By presenting a local film, a cooperative enterprise on the part of the Charlotte Observer and the merchants of the town, Manager Warren Irvin of the Imperial theatre, that city, obtained unusual advertising support for his presentation of "A Slave of Fashion." The local reel was furnished the theatre gratis and the newspaper and merchants who were represented in the picture gave it widespread publicity, mentioning the picture as a unit of the program on which "A Slave of Fashion" was the feature.

Irvin also sold the Bon Marche department store a tie-up idea, on the strength of which he obtained the leading place in the first cooperative window display that shop has ever made. The artistic mounting of the stills by the theatre's sign painter went a long way toward accomplishing this window tie-up, Irvin reports.

Tries Separate Bills to Get Matinee Patronage

Great variety is injected into the performances on a Saturday at the Westmount Theatre, Montreal, Manager Allen having adopted the policy of showing several different features at stated hours in order to build up the weak hours during the day. Early on the Saturday afternoon, a programme that is particularly attractive to children is screened. This is followed by the regular attractions. Then again at 5.30 P. M. another different programme is run off for a special supper hour show, after which the regular programme is again screened for the evening performances. This keeps various crowds of people coming all day Saturday. Special attention is paid to the announcing of the different hours at which the various shows are presented.

New Orchestra Installed at "Gold Rush" Presentation

The formal introduction of a new orchestra was offered as an added feature at the opening of "The Gold Rush" at the Palace, Memphis. G. E. Brown, manager of the house, designed a unique trailer in which the new organization was shown as a unit and then pictures of its individual members were thrown on the screen.

The inauguration of the new music policy at the Palace was heavily billed in conjunction with the opening of the Charlie Chaplin comedy, the innovation being tied up with the great popularity of the comedian to good effect in the advance publicity for the show.

Pickford Week Staged by Arkansas Exhibitor

The Palace theatre, Fort Smith, Arkansas, recently staged an all Mary Pickford week.

This exhibitor put on Miss Pickford's "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," for Monday and Tuesday; "Rosita" for Wednesday and Thursday and her new production of "Tess of the Storm Country" for Friday and Saturday.

"Don Q" Cup to Physically Fit Cleveland Ad

One expective way to get sport page publicity stories was demonstrated when "Don Q," was being shown recently at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

In a tie-up with the Cleveland Press Fairbanks and the Stillman management jointly offered a loving cup to the best example of physically fit boy between the ages of fourteen and sixteen in the city. All any lad of required age had to do was to go to the nearest Y. M. C. A. local branch and register. There were ten such branches in Cleveland and the boys enrolled at each were given physical tests to select the one most perfect example. Then these ten lads were put through athletic contests such as jumping, running, swimming and other feats calculated to show physical fitness, the winner of the ten receiving the Fairbanks-Stillman theatre cup suitably engraved.

"Iron Horse" Ads On Back Of Restaurant Checks

The stunt which uses the backs of restaurant checks for advertising a show proved effective exploitation for "The Iron Horse" at the Powers' Theatre in Grand Rapids. A scene cut and straight billing under the heading "After Dining See The Iron Horse" was printed on checks used at the restaurant of the Hotel Rowe. Since it is the custom of waiters to place checks on the table face down, there is no escaping notice of the theatre ad of this kind.

Distributed 1,000 "Unholy Three" Auto Tags

One thousand automobile tags reading "Who are the 3?" were recently used to good effect in connection with the showing of "The Unholy Three" at the Gayety Theatre in Ottawa, Ill. Two thousand "Screen Forecasts" were distributed, five hundred of them through the mail and the rest by hand.

Manager Frank Phelps of the Orpheum in Minneapolis, organized a motor parade to back up the exploitation for "Seven Days" done in that city by the trans-continental ballyhoo for the picture conducted by Producers Distributing Corporation. The parade was made possible by a tie-up with a local automobile agency. Phelps is shown standing near the hood of the "Seven Days" car.

Seattle Drive for "Phantom"

Columbia Uses Wide Range Of Stunts In Extensive Campaign For "U" Special

ONE of the most extensive exploitation campaigns attempted in Seattle for a motion picture was put over when "The Phantom of the Opera" played the Columbia theatre. A. J. Kennedy, Universal exploiteer, assisted Robert Bender, manager of the Columbia, and then went on to Spokane and duplicated his campaign there for the Clemmer theatre.

One of the most effective stunts was the lighted shirtfront on a singer dressed in evening clothes.

The man went out on the streets at night, would stop on a busy corner and start to sing. As he finished his song, he would push the button and "The Phantom of the Opera, Columbia, Now" would flash out of the white shirt front.

Another big attention-getter was a special balloon which had a lifting capacity of about seven pounds. It was painted a bright red with "The Phantom of the Opera" lettered in silver. It flew above the theatre for a week. After the opening a 30-foot figure of the "Phantom" made of light wire and a skeleton head, dressed in a red China silk cape and a big red hat with a sweeping plume, was hung between two fine wires and attached to the balloon.

On the night before the opening a special radio tie-up was made. By remote control a rehearsal was broadcast on the picture, with the orchestra, singers and a crowd of men and women from the theatre and the Universal Exchange for the audience.

Ten cut-out figures from the 24-sheet were mounted on beaver-board and skirt lettered.

Through a tie-up with a local candy company a new box of chocolates called "The Phantom" packed in a beautiful red box was put on the market.

Another tie-up that took nearly all of the remaining windows was effected with a beauty preparation. The manufacturing company put on a special drive on their product with living models in all of the big downtown stores. Each woman visiting the theatre was presented with a 50-cent package of the product. Twenty drug stores, three big department stores and several beauty parlors, making a total of over 30 windows were lined up in this tie-up.

Cards on the spare tires of taxicabs, 5000 napkins for lunch counters and soda fountains, four styles of special cut-out figures, special paper, little red figure cut-outs, "Phantom Red" windows in millinery stores, 200 telephone hangers and 500 small cards for street cars, hung by a string and printed on both sides, were some of the accessories used.

Make Civic Event Of Drive For "Keeper Of The Bees"

An event of civic importance was worked up in connection with the campaign which preceded the opening of "The Keeper of the Bees" in Los Angeles, where the adaptation of the Gene Stratton-Porter novel played at the Pantages Theatre.

By means of a tie-up with the American Reforestation Association, public schools of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles County Park Commission, more than 500,000 public school children planted 350 young carob trees in the school yards throughout the metropolis of the Southwest on Monday, Nov. 15th.

The city-wide tree planting was sponsored jointly by F. B. O. and Mr. Alexander Pantages. Public speeches were made by city officials as well as noted society women and many of the school orchestras and bands turned out to render appropriate musical selections while the ceremonies were under way.

Later in the week a single sycamore tree of gigantic proportions was planted in Pershing Square, Los Angeles, by little Gene Stratton, grand-daughter of Mrs. Porter, who appears in "The Keeper of the Bees."

Slide Campaign Announces "The Merry Widow"

H. C. Farley, manager of the Empire, Montgomery, Ala., found the means of giving the orchestra a definite place in an advertising campaign. This was for "The Merry Widow," which Farley announced long in advance with the use of slides and an orchestral rendition of the lilting "Merry Widow" waltz.

The campaign was started two weeks ahead of play date. Directly following news reel, orchestra played "The Merry Widow" waltz, after which slide was flashed on screen asking the audience if they remembered the waltz from the famous operetta of 20 years ago. This was followed by another slide announcing that operetta had been made into the best picture of the year. Being entirely different from any other form of advertising ever before employed by the theatre, it proved most effective.

George E. Carpenter's "street workers" for his showing of "The Road to Yesterday" at the Paramount-Empress, Salt Lake. The ballyhoo artists were recruited from the student body of the University of Utah.

Granada's "Kiddie Revue" Scores Big Success

The kiddies' revue at the Granada Theatre, San Francisco, was really a musical show in miniature, week of Dec. 12. There were 35 youngsters in the act. There were individual dances and songs and picturesque grouping with telling effect. It was not only the individual work of the juvenile but also the ensembles that are enjoyable.

Verne Buck and his synco-symphonists furnished music for the miniature revue as well as giving musical interpretation for the feature picture.

Nebraska U Aids Drive For "Lost World" at Lincoln

For his showing of "The Lost World" at the Lincoln, Lincoln, Neb., Manager Chas. F. Shire was fortunate in securing the co-operation of the University of Nebraska. This institution loaned the theatre miniature animals, exact reproductions of the ones used in the photoplay, which were placed in a leading shop window along with two three-sheet and three one-sheet cut-outs.

Additional publicity was gained through two articles written by one of the University's professors. The first article was published in the Sunday issue of the Lincoln State Journal and dealt with the life and habits of the prehistoric animals, accompanied by a number of drawing illustrations. The second write-up made its appearance mid-week, and stressed the authenticity of the production, and the merits of the photoplay in general.

Ace Of Spades Sandwich Is Ballyhoo For Serial

Four sandwich men with big cardboard aces of spades fore and aft proved well worth their pay in exploiting the "Ace of Spades," a new Universal serial, at the Doan Theatre, in Cleveland, Ohio. The cards carried the name of the theatre and the play date. In addition to acting as perambulating sign boards, the men distributed heralds and special tickets.

Another stunt worked out for this campaign by Kenneth A. Reid, manager of the house, was an arrangement with six of the grade schools in his territory whereby he gave a free ticket to the chapterplay each week to the boy and girl having the best weekly standing in each grade.

Louisville Ministers Aid Alamo "The Fool" Drive

As a result of a private screening of "The Fool," given by the Alamo Theatre, Louisville, for the ministers of the city, the clergymen gave valuable assistance to the theatre in its publicity campaign for the picture.

A campaign of personal visits was made to the 156 local ministers enlisting their individual support in putting the engagement over successfully. As a result of the canvass, twenty-one ministers used "The Fool," as the text for their sermons on the following Sunday. The newspapers carried special stories on the help the picture was receiving from local ministers.

"Perfume Idea" Presented Loew's State in Los Angele

Fanchon and Marco's "Perfume Idea" was the presentation attraction at Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles, for the week of December 19 to 25th. This is a very elaborate number, with setting by Jai Marchon and masks by Miles Marchon, and features an ensemble effect in which girls are dressed in costumes representing the different French perfumes.

The presentation opens with the tenor aria from La Tosca sung by Albert Rappaport. The setting is a large perfume bottle against a black drop. Miles Marchon as a slave is lying at the bottom of the bottle. He performs a dance and bows in Lucinda Beatty who interprets the fragrance of perfume, seated in front of a perfume bottle which glides across the stage.

Two hits of the presentation are Eddie Willis as Golli Wogg and Alma Ortega in a Russian costume with an exaggerated mask. She does a Charleston in hoop skirts that brings a big laugh. Natalie Harrison does a fancy dance in a very effective pink creation.

Display Of Sailor's Knots Feature "Midshipman"

Manager Charles F. Shire augmented his regular newspaper and posting campaign for "The Midshipman" with a lobby display which proved a successful business-builder.

The chief feature of exhibit was a three sheet display board carrying the different kinds of knots used in the navy.

In addition, a local university loaned the theatre signal flags, which were strung from top of roof to each side of theatre's marquee, making a very effective flag display. Mounted on top of marquee were 18 three-sheet cut-outs and one twenty-four sheet.

Another noteworthy unit of this campaign was the putting out of 25 one sheets, supplied by recruiting station, the copy of which was a direct tie-up with the photoplay at the Rialto.

Cutout display in lobby of the Rex theatre for First National's "The Live Wire." 24-sheet cutout of star was mounted on rosin paper. Whites of eyes and teeth were cutout and backed with translucent paper and illuminated by flasher from behind.

Fashion show staged by the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., as an exploitation attraction for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Midshipman" by Manager Guy O. Kenimer. The stunt was put on in co-operation with a large department store, which furnished the costumes and models, local beauties.

'Merry Widow' Well Exploited

Strong Stunt and Newspaper Campaigns Mark
Engagements Of Feature In Many Theatres

THE success which has attended many extensive campaigns staged to exploitation engagements of "The Merry Widow" at first run theatres, places this production among the outstanding offerings from the exploitation standpoint. Since the picture combines the two essentials of big exploitation possibilities—a quality of entertainment that is widely appealing and possession of exceptionally effective publicity angles—it has continued to roll up a list of campaigns which compares with the best records of recent "exploitation" productions.

In general the campaigns have been more or less similar—a condition due to the fact that the majority of the drives have been of the big order and therefore employed the angles offering the greatest possibilities for newspaper and merchant co-operation. The "mysterious Merry Widow" stunt has been staged with eminent success in several large cities, not only the newspaper tie-up angle of the stunt, but merchant co-operation being introduced on a large scale.

Two recent campaigns which embraced the outstanding stunts developed for "The Merry Widow" were drives put on by the State Theatre in New Bedford, Mass., and the Royal, Wilmington, N. C.

In New Bedford the "find the Widow" contest was launched as the exploitation ace by Manager Veitz of the State Theatre.

He gave a new twist to the contest by advertising a new "widow" each day for four days and awarding a valuable cash award for each "widow" captured. The New Bedford Times was induced to sponsor the competition, and contributed over twenty columns of publicity. Added strength was given the idea when both the newspapers and the local stores ran double-truck ads daily in which the attention of the public was called to the fact that "The Merry Widow" would be in their store at a certain time of day.

During the run Mr. Veitz secured permission from the street railway company to place a large cloth banner on the sides of one of their newest and best looking cars.

Manager George Bailey, of the Royal Theatre, Wilmington, N. C., also used a "Merry Widow" contest in co-operation with the Morning Star.

On Wednesday, the "Merry Widow" arrived in town and people started to congregate on the street corners, discussing the contest. Several women started to look for the widow. The first day she was worth $25, the second $35, her price increasing $10 each day. Thursday a large crowd collected and the services of the Star's advertising department were called into service and the idea was sold to the merchants.

Character Sketches Used As "Iron Horse" Teasers

The Oliver Theatre, South Bend, Ind., introduced the characters under their character names in advance teaser ads for "The Iron Horse." The ads were in two-column measure and carried a cut of the player in character make-up. Beside the cut appeared copy describing the character but omitting the title of the picture and the name of the theatre.

A sample of the copy used follows:

"Here Is Davy Brandon, Our Hero. He's Not a Sheik. Not a Caveman. Not a Lounge Lizard. He's Just a Welcome Type of Rugged Young American Manhood in the ———. He Will be a Sensation After Nov. 29. (To be continued.)"

In this manner the principal interpreters of "The Iron Horse" were introduced to South Bend, one by one, for a week before the regular house advertising on the engagement was started.

Short Subjects and Serials

Advocates Serials For Laugh Month

SERIALS are advocated for Laugh Month by E. Oswald Brooks, serial sales manager of the Pathe Exchange, who declares that while every good serial must be of melodramatic action and thrills, it must also have comedy relief.

"Our producers do not hesitate to introduce logical comedy sequences in most every weekly chapter," says Brooks. "Just a touch of the whimsical comedy element here and there; occasionally a streak of comedy or burlesque helps wonderfully to relieve the tension of the audience."

"It is certainly not out of place to suggest that a Pathe serial like 'Play Ball,' 'Into the Net' or 'The Green Archer' would be welcomed on the screens of the country during the month dedicated to laughter."

Charles Lamont is Directing Mermaid Comedy

Charles Lamont, who for some time past has been directing the Educational Juvenile comedies, is now directing Lige Conley and Estelle Bradley in a new Educational-Mermaid comedy. Upon the completion of his present work he will again assemble the youngsters and complete the series of six juvenile comedies Educational will release.

Theda Bara Starts Her First Short Comedy

Theda Bara has started on her first short feature comedy for Pathe release at the Hal Roach studios. She is being directed by Richard Wallace. In the supporting cast are Tyler Brooke, Jimmie Finlayson, Fred Malatesta and Joe Madison. Other players have still to be added to the cast.

Billy Dooley is Recovering From Operation

Billy Dooley, Christie comedian, is rapidly recovering at his home from a recent operation, and will be back before the camera in a few days. He had just finished his latest comedy, "A Salty Sap," when he was taken sick while doing his vaudeville act at a Los Angeles theatre.

Bray has Completed "Dinky Doodle" Cartoon

Filming has been completed by Bray Productions on the next of the "Dinky Doodle" series for F. B. O. release. It is titled "Dinky Doodle in the Restaurant." Walter Lantz appears in this subject together with the cartoon characters.

William Goodrich Directs Johnny Arthur

William Goodrich is directing Johnny Arthur in the fourth of the latter's Educational-Tuxedo comedies. Virginia Vance has the leading feminine role.

Fox Changes Laugh Month List

"Fighting Tailor" placed on Schedule;
Three Full Length Comedies Added

A SLIGHT change in the release schedule of Fox comedies for Laugh Month has been made with the substitution of "The Fighting Tailor" for "Officer of the Day." The former is the second of the "East Side, West Side" series featuring George Harris and Barbara Luddy.

Other Fox comedies scheduled for release the first half of the month include "Cupid a la Carte," of the O. Henry series; and "His Own Lawyer" of the Helen and Warren Married Life series, adapted from Mabel Herbert Uner's newspaper stories. The whole list of Fox comedies available for Laugh Month includes fourteen two-reelers, released during November, December and January.

In addition to the short subjects, Fox has an imposing trio of full length comedies for late in the month. They are "The First

"Flashes of Past" New Two-Reeler

"FLASHES OF THE PAST" is to be released by Pathe as a two-reel subject. It was issued originally in connection with the Pathe New Fifteenth Anniversary film and met with such approval that its issuance as a two-reeler was decided upon. It is a comprehensive review of the historic events of the last fifteen years, and brings back to the screen the important happenings throughout the world as presented by Pathe News.

Newspapers in all parts of the country devoted much space to reproductions of scenes from the film in both rotogravure and black and white sections. Subsequently at the request of members of the National Press Club it was given a private showing at Keith's Theatre in Washington.

Century Feminine Stars a New Screen Departure

Having taken over the vote, boyish haircuts, the gubernatorial chair in at least one state, and various other strongholds of the male, the fair sex is likely to usurp man's position in still another field—that of stardom in screen comedies, is the declaration of Julius Stern, president of the Century Film Corporation, makers of Century Comedies.

Two years ago, with one exception, no feminine player had ever been starred in two-reel comedies since the days of Mable Normand. Then the Century Comedy company decided to try two-reelers with feminine stars.

Wanda Wiley was the first comedienne to be elevated to stardom, and soon after, Edna Marian was made a Century star.

The first series of comedies starring these two capable young performers were so popular, that both were given long-term contracts.

In little more than a year, Miss Wiley and Miss Marian have become two of the leading attractions of the short-subject field, and threaten to eclipse the many masculine stars. Both of these stars have made several extra good comedies for Laugh Month release.

Blanche Mehaffey Signed to Universal Contract

Blanche Mehaffey, former Follies girl, and more recently the Mamie Shannon of Universal's "His People," has been signed to a long time Universal contract. She is the second of the "His People" cast to be so signally honored. George Lewis, who played her prize-fighting sweetheart in the picture, is the other.

Miss Mehaffey was born in Cincinnati and graduated from Lasell Seminary in Philadelphia. From the Seminary she graduated directly into Mr. Zeigfelds' justly famous Follies Seminary. She appeared with Will Rogers on the New Amsterdam Roof. From the Follies, it was an easy jump to bathing girl comedies, and she had been in moving pictures almost two years before she was offered this first opportunity to play a dramatic role. Her success in it was the determining factor in the minds of Universal officials in giving her a long time contract.

Newsreel Boosts Laugh Month

International and King Feature Syndicate
Add to Interest in Coming Event

A SPECIAL Laugh Month section in International Newsreel No. 1, the current issue, and a full page layout now being sent out to newspapers all over the country by the King Feature Syndicate, mark two important steps during the past week in the drive for National Laugh Month.

The newsreel section included a peek behind the scenes, showing several popular newspaper cartoonists at work. Included in the subject are Billy De Beck, creator of Barney Google, and George McManus, the pen-daddy of Mr. Jiggs. The International Newsreel cameraman caught McManus drawing some special cartoon adventures of Mr. Jiggs tied up with Laugh Month. Mal St. Clair and Adolphe Menjou were present during the taking of these pictures. These two stars are ardent supporters of the Laugh Month idea and are shown watching and applauding the work of the cartoonists in furthering the Laugh Month propaganda.

The Laugh Month page being sent out by the King Feature Syndicate is a lay-out showing the leading comic cartoonists of that syndicate, at work drawing cartoons of their famous proteges. Included in the page are Harry Herschfield, with his great character, Abie the Agent; Cliff Sterrett, with Pa Perkins; Jack Lait with Gus the bus boy; Russ Westover, with Tillie the Toiler; Billy De Beck, with Barney Google and Sparkplug, and George McManus, with Mr. Jiggs.

The Lawful Cheater

(B. P. Schulberg—4946 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AUTHORSHIP and direction of this feature are credited to Frank O'Connor, who may rest content in the belief that nobody will try to steal those doubtful double honors. The plot is a blatant absurdity, even for underworld stuff where allowance is always made for melodramatic exaggeration, and its continuity lost in a bewildering maze of ragged complications. Clara Bow as the heroine, clad in boyish garments, not that such attire is necessary to the story's development, but merely because she looks good in the male get-up, throws a lot of ginger into an impossible role. Jack Wise does very well as a sinister thug and Edward Hearn and George Cooper score as the fraternal crooks. It's a fine cast and the excellent work of the players shines out the one bright spot in an otherwise incredibly foolish picture. There are a number of rather stereotyped thrills, but the action moves swiftly.

THEME. Melodrama, underworld atmosphere. Treats of girl's adventures in reclaiming brothers from crooked ways and her final marriage to wealthy young chap.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Uniformly good acting by principals and supporting cast. Scene where Molly finds the buried bonds. Quick action and surprise finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Clara Bow. Bill as underworld story with melo thrills and stress heroine's ruse and self-sacrifice for brothers.

DRAWING POWER. Plot lacks stability of purpose or logic. Only fit for theatres where bill is frequently changed.

SUMMARY. Underworld melo. Has confused, impossible plot, puts over a few thrills, but outside of good acting offers nothing important from box office standpoint.

Defend Yourself

(Dependable Films—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

PATRONS who revel in underworld melodrama with sensational and sentimental angles sharply developed ought to find this one much to their liking. Director Dell Henderson has injected a lot of snappy action into it, and though far from being suitable entertainment for the first-run houses, the picture should prove a satisfactory attraction in certain localities where full-blown romance garnished by crook trimmings and tearful episodes usually has a successful appeal. Dorothy Drew is pretty and alluring as the excessively good young lady who remains uncontaminated by the unhealthy atmosphere of a notorious cabaret where she earns her living as a masked dancer, and saves her pennies for the support of a crippled brother. Miss Dupont does very well in the role of Smiley Bill Curtain's jealous gal, and Robert Ellis gives a capable performance as young Dr. Poole. Sheldon Lewis' impersonation of cynical, unscrupulous Smiley Bill is a clever bit of work.

THEME. Crook melodrama. Girl dancer in underworld cafe supports sick brother, wins doctor's admiration, escapes villainous wooer and weds physician.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Beginning of Lou's love affair with Poole. Underworld atmosphere. Trapping of Poole by thugs. His escape. Shooting of Smiley Bill.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up heroine's unselfishness and devotion to brother. Stress romance with doctor, melodramatic and sentimental phases.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in the smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Sensational incidents, sentimental angles and crook atmosphere combine to make this a good buy for state rights market. O.K. for small house trade.

THE CAST

Louisa Nolan.....	Dorothy Drew
The Mouse.....	Miss Dupont
Doctor Poole.....	Robert Ellis
Smiley Bill Curtain.....	Sheldon Lewis

The Great Jewel Robbery

(Kerman Films—4800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE members of that large-sized contingent of movie-goers who delight in crook melodramas geared up to the high speed mark should find "The Great Jewel Robbery" much to their liking. While there is nothing particularly new about the plot, its slam-bang action, physical combat thrills and comedy angles are pretty certain to satisfy the amusement demands of average house patrons, director John Ince having apparently carried out a resolution to make the picture a gingery affair from start to finish. Also, there is plenty of variety in the proceedings, as the arch-crook and his pals engage in a hunt for the first stolen, then lost jewels, which the head villain transferred to the hero's person in a moment of panic. It's all far-fetched hokum, but spicily entertaining just the same. Herbert Rawlinson is cast in a role that suits him exactly, that of a man-about-town with a taste for adventure, Grace Darmond registers effectively as a sprightly female cop and the support is capital.

THEME. Crook melodrama. Girl detective searches for stolen jewels, is finally captured by bandits with man she loves, but both are rescued at crucial moment.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy mixup between hero, heroine, villain and valet in the apartment house. The kidnapping, pursuit, fight, and scene where police arrive.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Make the most of the title in your ads. Feature Herbert Rawlinson. Tell 'em it's a comedy scream and melodramatic knockout.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable attraction for average house.

SUMMARY. Hands out melodramatic punches in plenty, has good comedy relief, moves fast, provides regulation under world atmosphere, both Herbert Rawlinson and Grace Darmond do good work in leads, will entertain masses.

THE CAST

Steve Martindale.....	Herbert Rawlinson
Doris Dunbar.....	Grace Darmond
McGroody.....	Frank Darmond
Hooper.....	Carlton Griffith
Mrs. Hooper.....	Marcella Daly
Cootie Joe.....	Chester Conklin

Author Not Credited. Director, John Ince.

Doris and Steve are made prisoners in the thieves' hangout. He finds that she is his childhood sweetheart. Foiled in attempting to escape, they are rescued by the police and decide to become partners for life.

The Midnight Flyer

(F. B. O.—6200 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is as spectacular a railroad melodrama as has ever been filmed, travels at lightning pace and goes the limit for sensational thrills. It will surely prove a good box office asset and entertain a large majority of the fans. The race between the runaway train and pursuing engine puts over a terribly realistic punch and there are various other lurid situations, such as the scene in the engine cab when a drunken fireman forces his engineer to jump off the gangway by threatening him with a red-hot poker. Railroad men may want to know why one of the occupants of the runaway train didn't apply the air brakes from within and thereby halt the madman's proceedings, but the general public is not apt to know or care about technicalities, and when all is said and done "The Midnight Flyer" amply fulfills its purpose of providing vividly exciting entertainment. Cullen Landis is an acceptable hero, Charlie Post a distinctly repulsive villain, Dorothy Devore a sweetly attractive heroine and the support is O. K.

THEME. Melodrama. Engineer dismissed on cowardice charge redeems himself by saving Midnight Flyer from collision, is reinstated and wins girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where David is driven out of engine cab by drunken fireman. Sustained fast action, thrills, romance and chase of special.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as ultra-sensational railroad melodrama, crammed with thrills, play up fight in engine cab and the wild chase of Midnight Flyer. Feature Cullen Landis and Dorothy Devore.

DRAWING POWER. Good card wherever high-powered, sensational melo is popular.

SUMMARY. Hits the high spots of speedy action and melodramatic thrills. A well photographed railroad romance with a sure realistic kick. Has audience appeal.

THE CAST

David Henderson.....	Cullen Landis
Mary Baxter.....	Dorothy Devore
Mel Slater.....	Charles Post
Silas Henderson.....	Charles Mails
Young Davey.....	Frankie Darro
Liza Slater.....	Claire McDowell
Mother Henderson.....	Barbara Tennant

Author, Arthur Guy Empey. Director, Tom Forman.

SYNOPSIS. David Henderson, engineer, is discharged because he deserts his engine when menaced by drunken fireman Mel Slater. Latter is discharged and later he boards a special train, throws off the engineer and starts it on a mad, runaway race. Dave jumps on a freight engine, runs it abreast the flying special, springs to the other engine, conquers Mel in a fierce fight and saves the train. He is reinstated and wins the girl he loves.

The Midnight Flyer (F. B. O.)

PRESS NOTICE

A SMASHING melodrama of railroad life, "The Midnight Flyer," which lovers of action pictures with vivid backgrounds cannot afford to miss; is scheduled for its initial local showing at the _____ Theatre on _____. Cullen Landis plays the hero, a young engineer, dismissed on charges of cowardice, who redeems himself by saving The Midnight Flyer from collision with a runaway special at the risk of his life. Landis' jump from one racing engine to another lists as one of the most spectacular feats ever filmed.

Dorothy Devore is the charming heroine, with Charles Post, Frankie Darro and other favorite players in important roles.

CATCH LINES

That Old Gang of Mine

(Kerman Film Corp., Inc.—4900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD program picture that, if properly exploited, ought to give satisfaction at the box office. Its appeal is altogether sentimental and probably the fans who must have thrills and red-hot action won't care much about it, for the story is purely a human interest affair, dealing with the taming effect a simple ballad, that brings back boyhood memories, has on the inflamed passions of a couple of rivals for political leadership. But its great sob stuff, make no mistake about that! The childhood scenes are beautifully handled and get over in great style, the scraps, reconciliations, laughter and tears of the kiddies will win sympathetic response from the most hardened cynic and make an especial hit with the women folks. The acting is excellent, with Maclyn Arbuckle scoring hard in the role of Senator "Big" Jim Walton, ably seconded by Tom Brown as his political rival, and Brooke Johns as the sweet-voiced musician. The support is O. K., and Mae Tully's direction adequate. A genuine "heart" film.

THEME. Sentimental drama. Echoes of an old song bring peace between political rivals Walton and Pierce. They revisit scenes of their boyhood, have a reunion of the childish gang members, now adult men and women, and combine forces.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The skilled direction, good local color and atmosphere. Boyhood scenes. Episode where song calms down threatened fight. Sentimental lure.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as picture that will carry adult patrons back to boyhood days, play up the kid-mischief and sentimental appeal. Go after feminine trade strong. You can also interest juveniles in the child gang stuff.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A well directed, cleverly acted heart drama. No plot worth speaking of, film's strength lies in straight sentimental appeal of childhood memories angle.

THE CAST

Senator Jim Walton.....Maclyn Arbuckle
Tom Pierce.....Tom Brown
Musician.....Brooke Johns
Author Not Credited. Director, Mae Tully.

SYNOPSIS. Political rivalry between Senator Jim Walton and Tom Pierce assumes such bitterness that it threatens to disrupt their party on the eve of a primary election. Matters reach a climax at a meeting when a speech by Walton arouses Pierce and a fight seems likely. The singing of "That Old Gang of Mine" by Brooke Johns restores peace, brings back past memories, Jim and Tom revisit boyhood scenes and bring together old acquaintances from all walks of life. Harmony is restored and the erstwhile rivals combine forces for an unbroken front to the opposition party.

Maclyn Arbuckle, appearing in "That Old Gang of Mine," a Kerman Film production

That Old Gang of Mine (Kerman Films) PRESS NOTICE

THERE'S a world of heart appeal and sentimental lure in "That Old Gang of Mine," based on the well-known song by Irving Berlin, which comes to the Theatre on _____. This film, starring Maclyn Arbuckle is pronounced by critics all over the country to be one of the most touching and tenderest stories ever reproduced on the screen. It deals with the political quarrels of two party leaders who were chums in boyhood, a bitter fight at a meeting and peace restored by the singing of the ballad which brings back childish memories.

Maclyn Arbuckle is at his best in the leading role of Senator "Big" Jim Walton.

CATCH LINES

A picture playing wonderful music on your heart-strings, bringing the kind of tears you like to shed, regaining lost days in memory; an unforgettable story of smiles and sighs, of youth and old age.

The Northern Code

(Lumas Film Corp.—5600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS romance of the Canadian woods fulfills all the requirements demanded by lovers of open air adventure and provides good entertainment. It is decidedly well photographed against dazzling snow-bound landscapes, the locations and atmosphere admirably suited to the swift swirl of melodramatic action and Leon De La Mothe's direction leaves nothing to be desired so far as smooth continuity and neat interlocking of the situations are concerned. He didn't have a startlingly original plot to begin with, but his skillful handling of the material, aided by the excellent work of the players, are important factors in developing its interest and imparting fresh flavor to otherwise familiar episode of life in the great Northwest, as usually depicted on the screen. The average fan will like the picture, sympathize with the pretty, persecuted heroine as portrayed by Eva Novak and applaud hero Robert Ellis in the vigorous scrap which terminates with the villain hurtling to a just doom over a beetling cliff.

THEME. Melodrama. Canadian North settings. Wife thinks she has slain brutal husband, weds another, husband reappears but meets death in fight with successor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive scenic shots. Marie's flight and rescue by Louis. Scene where villainous husband, supposed to be dead, returns. Fight between Louis and Raoul.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as strenuous melo of Canadian woods. Play up love interest and thrills. Feature Eva Novak and Robert Ellis.

DRAWING POWER. Should win wherever stirring melodrama holds patrons.

SUMMARY. Offers interesting romantic complications, has plenty of punch and fast action, attractive scenery and colorful atmosphere. Good melodrama.

The Knockout Kid

(Rayart Pictures—4901 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS is a snappily amusing comedy melodrama, in some respects following the usual Western plot formula but starting off at a distinctly different angle. For the hero, Jack Lanning, son of a millionaire, is first seen as visitor in a fierce boxing bout, whereupon he is cast off by his father, who has a decided aversion to prizefighting. Which sends Jack off on his travels accompanied by his faithful colored valet, Snowball, they head for Texas and run into a peek of trouble by the way, with more to come when they reach Cactus Flats. The adventures of the pair have a serio-comic tinge, the thrills are on the tap but humor predominates and Jack Perrin proves himself a fine specimen of an athlete, with Martin Turner, as "Snowball," getting the lion's share of the laughs, and Molly Malone registering effectively as heroine Jennie. The picture should stack up O. K., with all fans who like lively Westerners. Photography is attractive, lighting good, action fast and Harry Webb's direction commendable.

THEME. Western comedy-melodrama. Hero disowned by wealthy father because of pugilistic propensities, is nearly lynched as cattle-rustling suspect in Texas, has variety of adventures, evades widow's love advances, wins her niece.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Neat balancing of thrill and comedy values. Fight scene. Holdup en route to Texas. Hero's adventures on ranch. Romantic development.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Jack Perrin. Bill as Westerner with exciting punch and lots of funny side issues. Stress prize ring idea.

DRAWING POWER. Should please wherever brisk Westerners are in demand.

SUMMARY. Western comedy melo, good for program purposes. Action moves merrily, offers plenty of broad comedy, interpolated with fights, narrow escapes and other forceful situations. Jack Perrin O. K. in lead. Support adequate.

A Desperate Moment

(Ginsberg Distributing Corp.—5781 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS title is altogether too modest: Instead of one desperate moment there are scores of 'em, from the time the good ship sets sail with hero, heroine, unwelcome suitor, gal's daddy aboard, and an unsuspected gang of thugs concealed in the hold, up to the final scrap between survivors of the burned vessel and natives on a tropical isle. Never an instant when there isn't something strenuous doing: Members of the crew are murdered in detail by the gumshoe bandits, the schooner goes up in flames, and all the horrors of shipwreck follow in due course. Raw blood melodrama, all right, but good action stuff, touched up with comedy in the early reels. A program attraction possessing excellent box office possibilities, sure to please a majority of fans, even if it won't appeal to the high-brow bunch. Jack Dawn's direction snappy and forceful, acting above average, photography fine. Wanda Hawley a ten-strike in the heroine role, Theodore Von Eltz O. K. as gallant hero, Sheldon Lewis a hit as beastly gangster.

THEME. Melodrama, marine settings. Stowaway thugs gain possession of yacht, which burns, survivors reach tropical island, are rescued by passing steamer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Violently exciting melodramatic action. Comedy relief. Hero's fight with gangsters. Ship on fire. Adventures on island.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can safely promise six most exciting reels the greediest admirer of high tension melo could desire. Boost as lurid romance of the sea. Feature fire scene. Play up Wanda Hawley and Theodore Von Eltz.

DRAWING POWER. A likely card for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A crackerjack marine melodrama. Puts action through at hurricane pace, has strong romantic appeal, comedy seasoning. Will please all fans who want lots of excitement for their money.

The Wives of the Prophet

(Lee Bradford—6600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

OFFERING a plot out of the ordinary trend, beautifully photographed and well directed, this picture ought to do good business in the state right's market. The title should draw them in and the adventures of the young lawyer hero, pitchforked by fate into the odd position of expected Prophet of a fanatical religious sect, are sufficiently colorful and varied to please all admirers of melodramatic romance. The scenes depicting the marriage ritual which takes place in the dark, winding recesses of a huge cave, are remarkably well filmed and impressive examples of excellent camera technique, lending realistic atmosphere and curiously bizzare effect to the narrative. Orville Caldwell is a capable and pleasing hero, Alice Lake charming in the heroine role, Violet Mersureau is good to look at as Alma, second choice among the Prophet's spouses, and Warner Richmond scores as her loyal lover. Pretty Ruth Stonehouse is a graceful appealing Rachael, and shares dramatic honors with the star.

THEME. Melodrama. Young lawyer is hailed as expected Prophet by religious sect, five wives selected for him, but he escapes with one girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Snappy direction. Colorful atmosphere. Scenes in cave during marriage ritual. Hero's fight with moonshiners. Escape with heroine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title. Bill as unique romance with melo thrills. Stress hero's scrap with mountaineer keepers of whiskey still, storm effects, marriage ceremony, his escape with girl. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Has general audience appeals, good for average house.

SUMMARY. Registers as pleasing program attraction. Has unusual plot, puts over melodramatic punches in capable style and offers interesting scenic shots of mountain, wood and water, as well as fascinating cave interiors.

The Enchanted Hill

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AS Westerners go, this picture ranks above the average on account of superior acting, skilled direction, extra-fine photographic effects and a plot culled from a story by Peter B. Kyne, an author who always manages to put dynamic punches into his work, in this case faithfully reproduced on the screen. It's a good vehicle for Jack Holt, providing that undaunted film-rescuer of fair dames with plenty of opportunities for exhibiting his athletic prowess, horsemanship and gunplay, and he fights and loves his way through the feature with reckless gallantry and care-free abandon. Besides the romance between hero and heroine, there's a secondary love affair which is brought to a happy conclusion, all of which heart stuff is neatly balanced by unrestrained melodrama raging regardless, with airplane and machine gun added to the weapons usually utilized in cracking Western thrills. When it is stated that a buried treasure mystery also develops, this film surely deserves an O. K. on the quantity angle.

THEME. Westerner. Hero falls in love with girl-owner of adjoining ranch, foils enemies of both and wins her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Holt holds up attackers with machine gun. Scrap between Holt and Beery. Water-cure episode. Colorful scenic shots. Rapid action and double romance development.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with bookstores on Kyne novel. Boost as actionful Westerner, original plot. Feature Holt's fight with Beery and machine gun stunt.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. wherever Holt is favorite or fast melo holds 'em.

SUMMARY. Well produced and beautifully photographed Westerner, machine gun and airplane stunts adding force to melodramatic phases. Colorful atmosphere. Jack Holt at his best in leading role. Acting satisfactory.

The Cowboy and the Countess

(Fox—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

IT looks like Fox is grooming Buck Jones for bigger and better things if this first vehicle of the new year is to be taken as a criterion of what is to come. Here is a fast moving story that is decidedly better than any tale given this star in the past. It is also better mounted and the supporting cast is of a classier calibre, containing such names as Helen D'Algy, the beauty discovered by Rudolph Valentino, and Diana Miller. The picture opens with a thrilling storm and auto wreck which is realistically staged. Later the action shifts to a mythical kingdom overseas where the audience is treated to some action-packed rodeo scenes, the kidnapping of the countess and the stirring climax in which Buck and his lady fair are cornered in an abandoned castle but here a couple dozen rough looking customers prove no equal for Buck, and in the end we find the cowboy and the countess on their way to say, "I do."

THEME. Modern romantic drama in which a cowboy goes to the rescue of his royal lady love and saves her from a scheming duke.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The storm and rescue of the royal party. Rodeo for the countess, kidnapping. Fights in the old castle.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Buck Jones and leading lady. Boost White Eagle, the wonder horse. Put out cowboy ballyhoo.

DRAWING POWER. A safe bet for houses catering to western fans.

SUMMARY. One of the best Buck Jones has offered his admirers, good story, satisfying cast and attractive mounting. White Eagle, Buck's clever horse, does some real acting and in addition to a goodly quota of thrills, this one has a lot of fun.

Bluebeard's Seven Wives

(First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

CREDIT Robert Kane with bringing something new into the light of the screen sun. It is "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," as merry a comedy of feature length as we've seen in lo, these many moons and with a laugh record that exceeds any recent release by a safe margin. Here is an hilarious burlesque of the "illum bizness," from the big director down to the "snappiest press agent along Broadway." Patrons will not soon forget the scenes dealing with "the making of a star," or the transformation of John Hart, bank teller, into Don Juan Hartz, sheik extraordinary and screen lover incomparable. Because it is burlesque we will have to overlook an not overly smooth continuity and the picture would be improved by cutting down the Romeo and Juliet sequence which slows up the action. However almost everyone will get a kick out of this one. The subtitles are especially good. Ben Lyon is really good this time. Lois Wilson is her usual appealing self and Sam Hardy, Dick Bernard and Andrew Mack supply much humor.

THEME. A comedy dealing with the efforts of a film producer to make a bank clerk into a great screen lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The film studio scenes "Arrival" of Don Juan and his introduction to the press. The elopement and chase of John and Mary. Ben Lyon's work as Don Juan.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Ben Lyon, Lois Wilson, Blanche Sweet. Tell the folk this one exposes the inside workings of the movie makers.

DRAWING POWER. Should go over big in any house, with a little exploitation.

SUMMARY. One of the "different" offerings of the new year. A rare picture of the type that makes 'em laugh. Real box office names in the cast. Well mounted but a bit too long.

SYNOPSIS. John Hart, teller in a bank, is fired because of a shortage in his account. He gets a job in a movie studio, is believed a "find," and all concerned start in to make him a star. His name is changed to Don Juan Hartz and he is "planted" on an incoming steamer. Then comes the press agent's scheme to marry him to seven wives. But John balks after several marriages, runs away and marries his sweetheart Mary.

THERE was plenty of Christmas spirit last week along Film Row in this city. At the Pathe exchange, all the employees received a ten dollar gold piece from the home office, the same being presented to the employees by George Ames, the manager. In addition to this the young women received a box of candy from the salesman connected with the exchange. At the Universal offices, H. C. Bissell, the manager, was presented with a very handsome lounging robe, and likewise slippers, by his employees. Herman Stern, manager for F. B. O. in Albany, received a smoking set and humidior from the office force, Vincent Fisher being called upon to make a short presentation speech.

The Griswold in Troy and Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, offered a midnight show on New Year's Eve, in each instance putting on several amateur acts along with the pictures, but without increasing the usual price of admission.

Many of the exhibitors in Albany, Schenectady and Troy appeared on Christmas Day with handsome presents received either from employees of the houses or from friends. Herman Vineberg, who handles the Albany and Regent theatres in Albany, was the proud possessor of a platinum watch given by Mrs. Vineberg. Tony Veiller, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, offered his friends cigarettes from a brand new case that he had found in his stocking. Mrs. Roberts didn't forget her husband, the efficient manager of the Troy theatre, for when he woke up on Christmas morning, there was a Dunhill pipe and tobacco pouch on the mantelpiece.

David Murray, who has been a checker at the Pathe exchange here, is now a two-reel-comedy salesman over Paul Smith's territory, Mr. Smith having succeeded Amos Leonard, who is now a district manager for Pathe.

There was a general exodus from Film Row on the day before Christmas. Ted O'Shea, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange, went to Buffalo for his turkey, while Alex Herman, manager of the First National exchange, spent the holidays in New York city. Very few exhibitors were in town on Christmas week. Mrs. J. M. Briggs, who runs the Tyler theatre in Pittsfield, was in town as was also Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward.

Morris Silverman, of Schenectady, played the part of Santa Claus along Film Row, and presented the men with cigars and cigarettes, while the young women in the exchanges were given candy.

Charles Morris, of Boston, was in Albany last week, booking pictures for the Atlas theatre in Adams, Mass.

Thomas Martell, of the United States Army motion picture service, was in Albany last week, booking pictures for Madison Barracks at Sackets Harbor, as well as for Plattsburg and other posts in northern New York.

R. J. Meigs, a two-reel comedy salesman for Pathe, journeyed down to East Orange, N. J., for the holidays.

According to reports, there are two or three changes scheduled along Film Row. Thomas Murray, who has been connected with the Famous Players office in Albany for a year or more, is said to be slated for a good position with the same company in New York. It is also said that Ted Lewis will resign from First National to accept another position.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, who has several theatres in northern New York, is to take over the Rialto theatre in Glens Falls in the near future, according to all reports. Mr. Benton has repeatedly said that he was in the field for houses and plans to increase his chain until he has at least a dozen theatres. The Broadway, in Schenectady, a residential house, is also said to be scheduled to reopen under the management of James Roach, who will, however, remain as manager of the Farash houses.

The Lincoln theatre was donated to the Boy Scouts and a picture program was shown one morning that resulted in a large attendance from all parts of the city.

Robert Mochrie, manager for Producers Dist. Corp., found the attractions of New York City sufficient to take him there for his Christmas holidays.

Work on two new motion picture theatres in this part of the state is progressing very satisfactorily these days, with favorable weather conditions prevailing. The roof has been placed on the new Strand theatre in Albany, while W. H. Linton's house in Utica is swinging along toward early completion.

Mike Freedman is now running the Rialto theatre in that city and attracting business through a number of little schemes, such as admitting two persons on a single ticket at Christmas time. It was Mike's gift to the community, and it went over big.

Four nights a week is to be the policy from now on at the Pember theatre in Granville, run by Vincent Dailey.

Charles Miller, who runs the Bright Spot in Rensselaer, remembered the employees in the exchanges with many boxes of candy.

Arthur Goldsmith, a salesman for the Producers Dist. Corp. company, dropped in at the Rialto in Schenectady the other night, and received the surprise of his life when he was announced as the winner of a big turkey.

Ralph H. Clark, district manager for Producers Dist. Corp., was in Albany during the week for a conference with Robert Mochrie.

The many friends of Jacob Golden, manager of the Griswold theatre in Troy, were shocked to learn on Christmas Day that Mr. Golden was in a hospital a short distance out of Boston. Mr. Golden had left for Boston on the Sunday before, planning to spend Christmas with his relatives in that city. He had been suffering from intestinal trouble, and submitted to an examination which resulted in his entering the hospital.

Ben Stern, manager of the Lincoln theatre in Troy, received a handsome pen and pencil from his employees.

Dennis Regan, of Greenwich, was in Troy on Monday, calling on many of his old friends at the theatres.

The sister of James Rose, who owns a number of motion picture theatres in Rensselaer and Troy, died a week or so ago, after a sickness of some little time.

There was an election among the members of the motion picture machine operators' union of Troy a week ago, and Harry M. Brooks was re-elected as president. All other officers were also re-elected.

William Fogarty, of the Lincoln theatre, wants credit for the beautiful decorations, and certainly credit is due him, so here you are Mr. Fogarty, with an added word to the effect that the work was well done.

New Year's Eve saw many of the motion picture theatres in this section with midnight shows, and the houses were invariably well filled. Some of the theatres advertised special surprise features along with the pictures.

The Olympic theatre in Watertown staged a Christmas morning matinee through Sol Manheimer, the manager, for the benefit of those who had lost their homes in the fire that destroyed a portion of the village of Felts Mills, some six or seven miles from Watertown.

Julius Berinstein, with houses in Albany and Troy, spent Christmas Day with his brothers in Elmira.

Canada

THE Capitol Theatre, Montreal, Quebec, is now regularly on the air as a result of arrangements made by Manager Harry S. Dahn to have the musical programme of the theatre broadcast from Station CKAC, a local newspaper studio, every Sunday afternoon.

One of the greatest Christmas stunts of the season in Canada was carried out by United Amusements, Limited, Montreal, operating a chain of some eight attractive cinemas in Montreal. Co-operating with the Montreal Kiwanis Club, the company staged special performances for poor children to the number of 12,000 during Christmas Week. The arrangements were made by George Nicholas Ganetakis, managing director of United Amusements.

Since Walter Davis took over the management of the Empress Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, he has made a number of improvements in the house. He has overhauled the lighting system to effect better projection results and all opera chairs have been painted a light gray to fit the general decorative scheme. The ventilation fans have been gone over and a second ticket booth has been placed in the inside lobby for the convenience of patrons.

Never in the history of the moving picture business in Canada did theatre managers devote so much attention to Christmas and New Year's features as they did during the current season. Throughout the Dominion there was an evident intention on the part of exhibitors to make the most of the occasion. Not only were special pictures booked for the Christmas holidays but appropriate stunts and special programmes were carried out.

There were Christmas entertainments in scores of theatres for orphans and other deserving children and of New Year's Eve Frolics there were legion. Practically every downtown theatre in every city in Canada presented a special midnight performances for December 31-January 1 and these shows were advertised long in advance in order to attract desired patronage.

Exhibitors everywhere in the Dominion were satisfied with results. During the Christmas shopping period, there was a lull in patronage as usual but it was "big time" for the theatres as soon as Christmas Day was reached.

Publix Theatre Policy Introduced At Rivoli In New York

Lavish Stage and Musical Numbers Support Photoplays

TO a New York public, keyed to a high pitch of expectancy by an advance campaign done on a 24-sheet scale, the Publix Theatres Corporation introduced the presentation policy which is to be inaugurated in many houses throughout the circuit, at the Rivoli Theatre on Christmas Day.

The type of show represented by this New York debut of a system already in force at other houses in the Publix chain, is of widespread interest to theatre men, since it sets a new standard for photoplay theatre programs. While it is a standard of scale rather than of content—the entertainment being revolutionary in so far as it is an elaboration of entertainment forms previously done in picture and vaudeville houses—this new system is certain to have an influence on cinema houses everywhere.

The presentation numbers are to be circuited, in accordance with a plan worked out in detail some time ago. Numbers will be produced at the studio to be erected in Long Island City. Under the present working plan the presentations are initiated at the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston.

The act which is now current at the Rivoli, called "The Melting Pot," was staged in Boston several weeks ago. It was designed and produced by John Murray Anderson, who will stage the acts henceforth to be circuited through the chain of Publix theatres.

In addition to this presentation number, the Rivoli is offering an added musical feature in the form of a jazz orchestra under the direction of Eddie Elkins. An orchestra of twenty-five musicians under Joseph Littau furnishes the accompaniments to the screen production, Herbert Brenon's screen version of Barrie's "A Kiss For Cinderella."

"The Melting Pot" is presented in four scenes. The opening episode shows the American Indian before the arrival of the white man. Next the Pilgrims are represented as arriving at Plymouth Rock and the Mayflower is seen riding at anchor in the background. This is followed by characteristic dances of six European countries, typifying immigration. Finally, one sees the assimilated Americans, this final scene presenting a background of the most pretentious order. Instrumental music, dancing and singing feature the closing episode.

Artists featured in the presentation are Boris Petroff, Russian dancer who will be supervisor of the ballets to be included in the numbers staged at the Publix studio in Long Island; Dorothy Berke, the Royal Accordian Orchestra, Carlos Peterson, Mlle. Tamiris, Helene Blair, Mae Ludlow, Johnny Dove and a large chorus of singers and dancers.

It is a very elaborately produced number, comparable with featured spectacles in Broadway musical shows. The production costs ran into several thousands of dollars, and sets the standard which officials of the Publix company state will be observed in their future presentations.

The establishment of a production studio in Long Island City is a move to put this system of presentations on an efficient working basis. The cost of the numbers will be pro-rated to theatres in the circuit in which they will be presented.

One production a week will be offered at theatres included in the circuit for these numbers. Thus a troupe will be given a week's "stand" in every city visited, and in the case of Chicago, where there are five Balaban & Katz theatres at which these presentations are to be staged, a five weeks engagement will be played by each troupe.

It is understood that the production cost of numbers which have played in Boston and later will reach New York, as has "The Melting Pot," ran as high as $11,000. This is not the peak, for the plans which Sam Katz is working out call for an extension of the circuit. Within a short time, it is expected that a sufficient number of Publix theatres can be included in the "presentation chain" to permit a production cost of $20,000 on each number.

In staging the numbers, there is no effort to associate the stage presentations with the photoplays which will accompany them on programs at the Publix theatres. The acts will be sent out with a complete plan of presentation, including scores to be rendered by orchestras and lighting plans, worked out practically in blue prints, to be followed by the electricians of the houses in which they are played.

The system, therefore, relegates to the discard the "pro-

ONE SIDE

OUR recent discussion, through this column, of direct selling by manufacturers of equipment to theatre circuits has apparently hit a responsive note with distributors. We are in receipt of many letters from leading supply houses in all parts of this country—letters running up to seven pages of single space type—enumerating in detail the necessity of these institutions to this industry. Of course views expressed by distributors are not unbiased as the very existence of these firms is involved. It is significant to note however, that in nearly every instance the same general line of thought is put forth. Coincidence such as this must indicate a more or less true state of affairs.

On another page of this department will be found excerpts from these letters. While these excerpts are in the main somewhat duplicating they also tend to throw light on a few of the more unusual phases of equipment retailing. The weight to be given all these statements is naturally an open question.

Further, these letters that we have received incidentally put forth claims, which we do not feel warrant printing, of questionable business tactics followed by some purchasers. Probably equally questionable business ethics carried on by a proportionate percentage of dealers would be brought to our attention if we were to hear the exhibitors' side of the case. The whole situation certainly is not one for us to pass judgement on but rather to make dealers, exhibitors and manufacturers realize that such methods react to the detriment of all concerned.

We expressed our views in detail on this subject not long ago and we intend to do so again in the future. The distribution of equipment is presenting a many sided problem that is in need of serious consideration. For our part, we are out to aid in bringing about a satisfactory solution.

Hyman Takes Issue With Bowes' View of Prologue

Says It is One of Most Important Units of Mark Strand Program

THE atmospheric prologue, subject of much recent discussion by theatre managers and referred to by some as a form of entertainment which has outlived its usefulness, is championed by Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y., in a recent statement answering the critics of the prologue, particularly Major Edward Bowes, of the Capitol Theatre, New York.

"Everybody is entitled to his or her own opinion as to the value of the prologue," says Mr. Hyman. "It is entirely logical that Major Bowes has found the prologue unsuited to his theatre. However, such may not be the fact in other cities and in other theatres. I can only speak from my experience here in Brooklyn for the past six and a half years. In this time we have developed the prologue until it stands forth as one of the most important incidents of the program.

"Whenever I hear a discussion on any point I immediately think of that old truism 'It is not what you do, but the way you do it.' This can be applied to theatres as well as to any other endeavor. Naturally, the prologue which attempts to lift a scene or sequence from the story would defeat its own purpose because it would destroy the continuity. On the other hand, an atmospheric prologue which is built upon the basic principles of entertainment and art, without endeavoring to give information concerning the feature film, is very likely to win 100 per cent approval from the audience. That has been our experience here.

"I believe that as far as the setting of the prologue is concerned, it is permissible to copy a scene from the picture. Into this setting you may put your artists, but have them do nothing which would take parts out of the picture itself. It is possible to build original incidents through means of mental numbers and pantomime. With an act so constructed we have found that this is just what the people want. They are given entertainment for the eye and for the ear, while at the same time they are being put in the mood associated with the feature vocal solos, dance interpretations, instrument itself. It is very important that the public be in the proper mood when the picture begins.

"Take for example the recent Harold Lloyd picture, 'The Freshman.' This turned out to be one of the most successful prologues we have ever used and which drew thousands of people into the theatre during the week. To this prologue, coupled with the feature itself, we owe the sale of block tickets to St. Johns College and Brooklyn Technical High School, amounting to more than two thousand tickets. This prologue had as a setting a college jazz band on a terrace raised from the stage by four marble steps. The jazz band was costumed in the Harold Lloyd caps, sweaters and trousers. There were six dancers in white sport suits and tams, and there was a male dancer who wore the football suit similar to Harold Lloyd's in the picture. With these people an act was built which included instrumental numbers, dances by the girls and two eccentric dances by the man. There was also incorporated in the prologue a college yell by the Ensemble. This incident was practically a riot all week, winning so much applause that it was nearly impossible to continue with the show. The result was that thousands who saw it circulated the news outside of the theatre and the people came flocking in.

"In view of that fact and the big success of all our prologues, it would be illogical for me to join in the opinion that the prologue is passing. In fact, it is only arriving, but the showman must know how to put it on for his individual theatre, or else lose the effect entirely.

"Another incident of the success of prologues was the one used for Valentino in 'The Eagle.' This being a film with Russian locale we employed a Russian orchestra, a male sextette costumed as Cossacks, and Russian dancers.

"'Little Annie Rooney,' the Mary Pickford picture, was also given a most interesting treatment insofar as the prologue went. A dozen of Gus Edwards' kids were engaged as Annie Rooney's gang. The setting had as a background a transparency drop of Brooklyn Bridge, which was lighted up to represent evening. A board fence ran across the stage and from behind this the characters made their appearance. The repertoire included songs and dances. This prologue, as was the case with Lloyd, went over so big that the show was held up in its start.

"The prologue built upon the principles of entertainment should find favor with nearly any audience. However, the individual showman must judge for himself just what his theatre needs and he must also judge for himself how he is to put on his numbers to get the most out of them. It is impossible, in my opinion, for one set rule to be used by all theatres. Theatres are different in character just the same as are human beings, and what is good for one is sometimes poison to another."

Joint Management For The Cameo, San Francisco

The Cameo Theatre, San Francisco, has been placed under the management of C. L. Toepfer, and Edgar J. Roemheld, both experienced showmen from Milwaukee. Toepfer will handle the business end of the Cameo and Roemheld will take charge of the music and presentations. Toepfer is taking over the management formerly held by C. L. Theuerkauf, who resigned in order to become Western Division manager for the Associated Exhibitors. Roemheld, who is himself a musician, is desirous to have much more music played at that house. L. E. Doane will remain as assistant to Manager C. L. Toepfer.

logue" idea of picture theatre presentations, so far as the policy of theatres in this circuit are concerned. These presentations are distinct units of the program, unrelated to the feature pictures they accompany on the bill, and therefore will be booked in turn and will play scheduled dates regardless of the feature photoplays booked for the bill.

The "Melting Pot" act which is at the Rivoli this week, during which "A Kiss For Cinderella" is the photoplay attraction, made its appearance at the Metropolitan at the opening program there. The feature at that time was "A King On Main Street." This instance serves to illustrate the policy adopted by the Publix management, which is based on the idea that pictures do not need "atmospheric" support from other offerings on the program.

The productions will be started at either the Metropolitan in Boston or the Rivoli in New York. The present scheme is to send them from Boston or New York to Chicago. When the new Shea theatre in Buffalo is completed, that city will be included in the circuit. Eventually the productions will be sent across the country to the Pacific coast, for presentation in Publix theatres there. Thirty or possibly thirty-five theatres eventually will be included in the chain.

Other productions which will play in New York are "The Angelus," another John Murray Anderson number, "Under Spanish Skies," and "Skylarks."

"The Angelus" presents a huge reproduction of the famous Millet painting of that title, shown in a gilt frame. By means of lighting effects the figures in the picture fade out and in their place are a man and woman, costumed as the characters in the picture and similarly posed. They sing a duet rendition of Gounod's "Ave Maria," and at the completion of the duet the lighting changes and the painting again appears. The number is exceptionally beautiful, and scored a popular hit at the Metropolitan in Boston.

"Under Spanish Skies" is a combination of choral and solo singing and dances. It is a street setting and opens with ensemble singing. Arias from Carmen, by soloists, follow, and then a series of Spanish dances by Boris Petroff and others. The music was arranged by Nathaniel J. Finston, who is to be in charge of the music at the Publix studios.

"Skylarks," another John Murray Anderson presentation, is described as a "moonlight fantasy." It features a troupe of Arab acrobats, seen recently in "Arabesque," a New York production staged by Norman Bel Geddes. A group of singers and a trio of dancers including May Lubow, Dorothy Berke and Helen Blair, complete the cast for this feature.

Extensive alterations to the stage of the Rivoli were necessary before the new presentations could be offered in that theatre. At the time the Rivoli was built it was designed for the photoplay entertainments then in vogue, and there is an interesting indication of the changing idea in this form of theatrical enterprise to be found in the contrast between the limited stage facilities of the Rivoli and the Metropolitan in Boston, the newest of the Famous-B & K theatres.

The Metropolitan has an enormous stage, equipped with elevating sections and the newest developments for the production of novel stage effects. The fact that so elaborate a stage equipment was installed there further indicates the trend which the heads of what is now the Publix Theatre Corporation believe picture theatre entertainments will take in the future.

The introduction of the system in New York was accomplished with a striking flourish of showmanship. The Rivoli, darkened for several days while alterations to the stage were made, was also redecorated. This fact, along with the new style of program to be inaugurated on Christmas Day, was widely exploited by advance trailers in the Rivoli and a vigorous newspaper and poster campaign.

An entirely different Rivoli opened its doors to big crowds last Friday. Everything, from the stage presentations, through the musical features, organ solos, news reels to the uniforms of the ushers and doormen, were different.

Stage Setting Used As Announcement Of Forthcoming Feature

AS an illustration of the novelty which can be introduced by the small theatre, the enterprise of the National Theatre, Madera, Calif., in reproducing a scene from a forthcoming feature as a substitute for the customary trailer announcement, stands out as one of the valuable contributions to theatre management.

The picture in whose interest this novelty was employed was Pathe's "Black Cyclone." The setting was a reproduction of one of the most expansive scenes from the play—scene stills furnishing the suggestions which the stage producer followed in creating an atmospheric stage shot.

Instead of the trailer announcement, a scrim curtain in front of the setting served as the screen for a slide with billing for "Black Cyclone." When the scrim curtains were drawn aside the setting was revealed to the audience, and reports state that the spectacle drew applause at every performance during which it was shown at the National.

The animals, mostly horses, were made in cutout. Enlargements of the animals shown in stills and stock paper were stationed about the scene. A backdrop showing a plain with a distant horizon juttied with mountains, and side panels of trees and thickets framed the action suggested by the animals. A note of realism was added by use of potted ferns and shrubs in the foreground. By means of stage accessories the effect of lightning breaking across the scene was obtained, while a tiny stream of water trickled over the rocks and gravel.

It was an awe-inspiring and realistic stage setting and brought applause from the audience at each showing. The house set was used a week in advance of the showing and the scene itself pulled in many patrons during the engagement.

Equipment Dealers' Place in Industry

Claim Special Services Rendered and Economy of Distribution Justify Their Support

IN a recent issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS we editorialized on direct purchasing by theatre circuits from equipment manufacturers to the exclusion of distributor profits. It was pointed out then that distributors would be unable to function as progressive business concerns were they to be deprived of the profits of such sales. Furthermore, the necessity of retailers of theatre equipment to exhibitors themselves was put forth.

As a result of our discussion, many of the country's leading supply dealers wrote us their version of their usefulness to this industry. While most of these letters have gone into elaborate detail too lengthy to publish, we feel that the few excerpts we have selected are well worth printing.

A leading New York State distributor gives a concrete example of service in his letter as follows:

"... There are so many reasons why it is necessary for the theatres, operated by circuits or individuals, to buy through a local representative that to enumerate them would be endless. We, therefore, will just put stress on the most important.

"The enclosed copy of letters from the Palace Theatre, Lockport, N. Y., explains itself. Due to our prompt and efficient service the theatre was saved at least $500 that one day. This is merely one of the many contingencies that arise daily and are met equally well. Service is only possible from the local dealer because of his constant direct contact with the theatre. . . ."

Interesting Angle from Oklahoma City

A supply house in Oklahoma City brings out rather an interesting angle in two paragraphs of their letter which read:

"... Large theatre circuits usually have their chief projectionists who would be of some help in picking out the projection equipment but even with the large circuits it is usually left up to the local manager and local operator to install this projection equipment and who most always needs the help and suggestions of a theatre supply house. I am frank to say that I have seen some of the poorest projection and equipment in the large theatre circuit houses.

"I have found in our territory especially that a friendly visit with the manager, making suggestions to him how he can better his projection, how he can save money on his projection, means considerable to him and this service is appreciated very much. . . ."

From a viewpoint of economical buying a West Coast distributor makes this statement:

"... Manufacturers could not distribute their own product on the coast as cheaply as we do it; we do a large business and distribute service equipment from all manufacturers.

"Individual owners of distributing businesses, devote their personal time and energy to making that business a success. The service they render cannot be bought by employees working on a salary.

"If the factory were to maintain a sales force to introduce and promote sales of new equipment it would cost them more to do business than the distributors and the cost to the theatre would be increased because the product would have to sell for more money because of this added distributing cost. . . ."

A Point of Complication for Circuits

A point of complication arising through direct selling even for the large chains is explained by a dealer in Minnesota as follows:

"... If there were no supply dealers and distributors in existence, every theatre in the country would be in one of two classes: 1st, the class containing theatres of individual ownership or small circuits owning or operating relatively few theatres; 2nd, circuits controlling upwards of twenty-five theatres. Practically every distributor has both classes to deal with.

"It seems to us the first class would be perfectly helpless without the constant aid and attention of the local dealer or distributor. His troubles are numerous and to whom would he turn with his difficulties if not the distributor? True, he could go to the manufacturer but every distributor knows that this entails endless delay in spite of the best efforts that the manufacturer may put forth.

"Identically the same situation exists with reference to the second class, in our opinion, based upon years of observation. A circuit's difficulties increase in direct ratio to the number of theatres owned or controlled.

"All distributors know they are constantly called upon to make inspections of the various theatres of a circuit for the purpose of correcting difficulties which constantly arise. While it is true that a circuit might well afford to employ a projectionist who, in street parlance, 'knows his stuff,' it is likewise true that there are a hundred and one other things outside the direct sphere of machine room difficulties that the local distributor is called upon to rectify and which a projectionist employed by a theatre would know nothing of and would have had no opportunity to come in direct contact with.

"The question of service is, in our opinion, the paramount reason why theatres and circuits should not attempt to dispense with the services of distributors.

"The service that a distributor is called upon to give is not limited to motion picture projectors alone. He is called upon with reference to screens, display frames, ventilating systems, lighting effects, opera chairs and seating arrangements, auxiliary power plants and a lot of other things. . . ."

Views from Branches of Large Organization

Several letters from various branches of one large theatre equipment retailing concern in the middle west contain views worthy of consideration.

"... Purchasing Agents in the first place, have only one thing in mind—to buy cheap. Generally speaking, they have no technical knowledge of the merchandise which they are to buy.

"We have also found, where circuits of theatres have tried to handle their own service, it has probably cost them four or five times as much as they ever paid to a supply house. They put on special men to handle service and all these men can do is to really make installation.

"The better supply houses through the country are delivering a service to theatres which they cannot buy. Many of them have tried to buy this same service but they have fallen flat so far, and they will fall flat until such a time as they are willing to make an expenditure necessary to build up an organization that is as good as the combined theatre supply houses of today. This will mean not only an expenditure of a large amount of money, but it will also mean spending several years time in which to build up an organization of this kind, and it cannot be built up profitably without the entire number of theatres of the country giving such an organization its support.

"Supposing the distributor was put out of business at this time and direct selling was in vogue; just how many theatres do you suppose there are in the United States that would be closed up from time to time because of something going wrong with their equipment and not being able to get prompt service from the manufacturer. They would of necessity, have to close as they could not get new equipment or repairs from the manufacturer and in nine cases out of ten it would be a matter of days.

"I believe the theatres of today should support the supply dealers, otherwise they may find themselves in a position where it will be necessary for them to buy direct—pay more for their equipment, and get no service at all. . . ."

Claims Distributors Needed in All Types of Business

From another division we hear:

"... In the first place in nearly every other line of business, you will find that merchandise is distributed by dealers and distributors. There is no doubt whatsoever in the many years business has been conducted in the United States that attempts have been made in other lines besides ours by customers to buy direct from manufacturers. But if you will carefully look over the field, it will be found that the distributor is still in existence, and that he is positively an economic necessity. Without the distributor there cannot be anything but an economic waste.

"Looking at direct buying from the manufacturer's standpoint, it must be agreed that if the distributor is eliminated, or if merchandise is sold direct over his head to the consumer (the theatre man) it will be a positive necessity on the part of the manufacturer to maintain sales and service organizations throughout the United States, unless, of course, theatre ownership should reach the point where all of the theatres in the United States were owned by a few men. This, however, is not very likely.

"Coming in contact as we do with so many exhibitors, it is possible to gather together the opinions of many individuals, and in this way put through improvements which we know will be accepted by the exhibitor. This fact is double edged in that it makes it possible for the manufacturer to improve his manufactured product, and at the same time for the theatre man to purchase the product in its improved state, thereby instituting an economy for himself, and greatly increasing the efficiency of his theatre, which naturally re-acts in larger box office receipts.

"You can just imagine the difficulties which would be experienced by the theatre man out in Smithville who wanted to build a theatre. It would be necessary for him to get in touch with three hundred manufacturers for his equipment and supplies alone.

"Our experience has proven in the past, as you well know, that theatre circuits in spite of their own individual service departments demand and receive more service than other individual theatres receive. And in spite of the fact that they have their service departments, if they buy direct from the manufacturer, it will be necessary for the manufacturers to service the products they sell. . . ."

Here is a distributor who believes that an equitable discount should be made to various buyers depending on their size.

"... We believe with Mr. Abbott that the large buyer is entitled to a better discount than the small one. . . ."

Automatic Ticket Company Hold Christmas Party

One of the merriest Christmas celebrations was held last week in the offices of the Automatic Ticket Register Corporation, 723 7th Ave., where a party was given by the Company for the employees.

Desks were turned into serving tables for the occasion, games were played and lucky winners of gold pieces included Mr. Burke, Mr. Hymans, Miss Loeb and Mr. Mead.

The Automatic Ticket Register Corporation has just completed a successful year and reports both machine and ticket factory operating at full capacity. Samuel Rothafel has just placed his order for Gold Seal Ticket Registers to be installed in his new Roxy Theatre, 6200 seating capacity, and the Automatic Company will cooperate with the Gorham Company in arranging special engraved counter plates for the ticket machines.

Hertner Claims Equipment Business Best in History

A good index of the motion picture industry, says Mr. Hertner of the Hertner Electric Co., is always to be found in the amount of projection equipment being purchased.

The year 1925 has been the best to date in our experience. A few Transverter installations just being made include theatres as follows: Oritania Theatre, Hackensack, N. J.; Embassy Theatre, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Ambassador Theatre, Saratoga and Livonia avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y.; Bradley Palace Theatre, Bradley Beach, N. J.; State Theatre, Elmira, N. Y.; Globe Theatre, Richmond, Va.; Palace Theatre, Slaton, Texas; Dan River Cotton Mills, Danville, Va.

New Asher Brothers' theatre which was just opened in Chicago. This house seats approximately 2,000 and is the central feature of the large business block shown above.

Bristol, Connecticut, To Have New Theatre; Other Plans Under Way

BRISTOL, Conn., is to have a new theatre and plans are in process of preparation for estimating. The new playhouse will be built by the Colonial Theatres, Inc., and will cost between $300,000 and $350,000, according to A. H. Lockwood, in charge for the company. It is expected that the contracts will be awarded early in the year so that actual work will start in the early spring and the new playhouse completed by late Fall. The new theatre will seat 1,800. It is understood that the Colonial Theatres, Inc., will cease to operate the present Palace Theatre on North Main street, Bristol, when the new theatre is completed, but that it will continue to operate the Bristol and Princess Theatres. The company manages theatres in South Manchester and Torrington, Conn., in addition to those in Bristol.

Hartford, Conn., is also to have a new motion picture theatre, work on which will be commenced in the spring. The new theatre will be erected in connection with the construction of a 15-story hotel which will be built at Asylum and Trumbull streets on the site of the old Allyn House, by the Allyn Realty Co., of which Robert J. Allyn is the head. The Allyn house is to be torn down during the winter. The theatre will be located within a few doors of the Majestic Theatre. The new playhouse will be one of the largest in the state, Mr. Allyn says, but as yet plans have not progressed to the extent that an estimate of the cost of the project or the seating capacity can be approximated.

The Embassy, Inc., is a new corporation in Boston, just chartered, which has for its object the erection and ownership of theatres. The company has a capital stock of 1,000 shares of no par value. Incorporators are J. Sumner Draper, of Milton, Mass.; William W. Hoblitzell, Jr., of Newton, Mass., and George R. Slader, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., all prominent realtors in Boston and its suburbs.

Strand Recreation Co., Inc., Orono, Me., has been incorporated to build and conduct theatres, with capital of $10,000. Incorporators are Abe L. Goldsmith and Edgar A. White.

Samuel Katze is to build a new theatre in Merrimack square, Lowell, Mass., early in the spring. Plans are being prepared by Architect James Tuck of Boston and are ready for estimating. It is expected the contracts will be awarded before the end of January. The proposed theatre will be one of the largest in Lowell.

A new theatre is to be built by Fishman Brothers, New Haven, Conn., on Dixwell avenue in the Hamden district. Plans are being prepared by Charles H. Abramowitz of New Haven. The theatre will be built in connection with a new business block. It will have a seating capacity of 1,000, with a balcony. Plans will be estimated and contracts awarded so work will start early in the spring and the playhouse will be opened about Nov. 1 next.

Two New Theatres Planned for Buffalo, N. Y.

Samuel Tishkoff and Aaron Merchey, owners of the Plaza, Rochester, have filed plans for a new motion picture theatre to cost $200,000. The general contract has been let to the Iuppa-Battle company and work on the excavation is to start immediately. The site is on the east side of Genesee street, between Frost avenue and Arnett boulevard. Plans call for a building with a capacity of 1,800. The theatre will have a large stage and a mezzanine balcony, furnished with wicker furniture. The theatre will be ready by spring.

Joseph Nicosia will build a new community theatre in Rochester, just a short distance from the Tishkoff-Merchey house. Mr. Nicosia intends to build in Genesee street, opposite Clifton. He will utilize a frame building now on the property for the theatre. Nicosia is third owner of the Chili theatre in Chili avenue.

Inquiries and Comments

Blows the Fuses

THE Blue Bird Theatre, Mill Hall, Pa., owned and managed by W. S. Hattwick has been struggling courageously to secure smooth change-overs but has struck a snag in what appears to be limited current carrying capacity of the main feed wires.

Friend Hattwick, who is using 35 amperes A. C. through a compensare informs us that when running one projector everything is nice and rosy but that when both arcs are on the line during the changeover period the fuses invariably blow and this, to put it rather mildly is decidedly, not rosy.

In fact, we should think it would prove to be pretty darn annoying. In casting about for the reason for this trouble and a method whereby it could be brought to an end, Friend Hattwick, became very interested in a recent article of ours dealing with changeovers, but approached the problem from a different angle which did not offer him much assistance. Hence, his letter, which is as follows:

Gentlemen:

So much has been written and said on projection that we find how little we know after your good write-ups in the News.

The writer was interested in your article in the News of October 28 on projection changeovers and would certainly appreciate your views on the best changeover method with this equipment of ours, and which many other theatres must have, namely:

Two Powers 6 B projectors which are supplied with current from 110 volt A. C. circuit and draw 35 amperes through Fort Wayne Compensares. I find it necessary when making changeovers, and at which time both projectors are on the line, to switch off the arc on the first, letting the projector motor continue on the line, and then strike the arc on the second, starting motor No. 2 after which I turn off Motor No. 1, thus effecting a fairly presentable changeover when everything is done just right.

Noticeable on Screen

While this gives a pretty fair changeover, as far as the screen is concerned, it is, however, noticeable to persons who are familiar with the projection of pictures even when everything goes right and when things go wrong—well, it is noticeable then to quite everybody. I am not, of course, satisfied with these conditions and so would like your advice in this matter.

We would like to know, therefore, if there is not some method whereby both arcs could be kept burning for at least a few seconds while making changeovers?

We have tried this with two compensares, and also rheostats, and even when cutting down the line the two arcs blow fuses when both are in use.

We would certainly appreciate any information you may give to help us out of this difficulty.

Common Practice

Regarding your inquiry as to whether or not there is a method whereby you can operate both arcs simultaneously during the changeover period, Friend Hattwick, we should say there certainly is and, what is more to the point, we can see no reason why you should not secure good results if you will go to the trouble of making the necessary changes.

The method of making changeovers with the equipment you possess, is common practice and there is nothing difficult about it, providing conditions are right. This method, in fact, consists of just what you are trying to do—throw both arcs across the circuit at the same time but the hitch in your case was caused by not taking the proper precautions.

Trouble Not in Equipment

Your trouble apparently does not lay in the control equipment—the compensares and rheostats which you have tried at various times—but rather in the feeder circuit. You do not say so, but the chances are that the feeder circuit was originally designed to carry the loads of but one arc and was fused accordingly. Later you probably purchased an additional projector and then your troubles commenced when trying to make the old feeder lines carry the combined load of both projectors. Certainly this fuse-blowing condition could not have dropped out of a clear sky on a circuit which formerly was all right. Furthermore, everything seems good when but one projector is used so that would eliminate the chance of accidental grounds or short-circuits.

The trouble clearly lays in the feeder circuit.

Recommendations

Our advice is as follows: First, secure the services of a competent electrician. Now a competent electrician in plain English means one who understands his business. Have him measure, by means of a proper wire gauge, the diameter of the feeder wires supplying both arcs. If he knows his business, he can then tell you immediately, the safe current carrying capacity of those wires; if not he can get the information from the Underwriters' Code Book.

The next thing to do is to determine the total current required to operate both arcs at the same time. You mention using 35 amperes for one arc when used with a compensare (transformer). Did you obtain this figure by guess or by measurement?

It is important to accurately determine the current required by one arc, after which the total amperage, making due allowance for loss in the transformers, drawn from both secondaries can be determined. It is not this secondary current which is blowing the fuses. This is done by the primary current blowing through the "line" side of the transformer.

The best way to determine the amount of the primary current is to state your problem to the local power company, if you are served by one, and ask them to measure it for you with an accurate meter. This can be done for one arc and then doubling this reading will give the current required by both arcs since it is fairly reasonable to assume that both arcs will draw equal amounts of current.

Increase Feeder Capacity

If you are not served by a power company it will be necessary for either you or the electrician to borrow a suitable meter and measure the current yourselves.

If the total current (from both arcs) then exceeds the current carrying capacity of the feeder wires it will be necessary to do one of two things.

(1) Either replace the old feeder wires with new ones of the required capacity, or

(2) Add two new feeder wires of the same size as those now used, using two wires for each "leg" in place of the one now used.

After this is done the main circuit can then be fused to carry the combined load of both arcs.

Not Probable

If it should be found, though this is improbable, that the feeder capacity at present is sufficient to carry the load of both arcs safely, then the only thing necessary is to increase the capacity of the fuses. The thing we wish to impress upon you, however, is this, do not monkey with the buzz-saw. Secure the services of a competent electrician. Your local power company would also give you the necessary information concerning the proper size of feed wires and fuses since it is to their interest to see that you use their service intelligently.

Several New Theatres to be opened in Florida and Georgia

THE Bennett and Reemelin Company, of Miami and Coral Gables, Fla., are now at work upon the erection in Coral Gables of a modern and picturesque theatre which will seat 1,000. At the present time the firm has not definitely decided upon a lease for the new house, which will be finished, it is anticipated, about March 1st of the coming year.

H. W. Dorn will open a new theatre in Larkin, Fla., about the first of March. Plans now under way call for a modernly equipped, up-to-the-minute picture house with a seating capacity of 500.

Work is progressing steadily on Adolph Gortatowsky's new 1,800-seat theatre in Albany, Ga., and the opening is scheduled for early in March. The new house, as yet unnamed, will play major pictures, and road show attractions, now being booked in the Liberty, will be shifted to the larger and more pretentious new house.

It is understood that the new theatre being built by J. C. Hancock, well-known Florida exhibitor, at Stuart, Fla., will not be ready for opening until sometime in February. Erection was begun in the early fall and it was planned originally to have the house ready by November 1st.

L. R. Brandon, of Dania, Fla., a small point just outside Hollywood, has just opened his newly completed theatre in that town. Mr. Brandon originally intended operating an airdome on the site of the present house, but later changed his plans and has in its stead erected a handsome theatre which seats 1,000.

A new theatre will soon be erected in Blue Ridge, Ga., for which the contracts have been let this week with plans for completion of the house within six weeks' time. Construction began last Thursday, and it is understood the work is progressing at a good pace. The house will seat 200, will be modern in every respect and equipped with the latest type projection machines and many new conveniences. Its site is located on the main street of the town, and the building will be of brick on a lot 75 feet deep by 35 feet wide. The front is to be cream brick, and an attractive marquee will shelter the entrance. The house will be steam heated. F. C. Butt, who is building the theatre and will operate it, is the son of a well-known citizen of Blue Ridge. Indications point to an excellent business for his house by reason of the fact that the Tennessee Power Company has begun work on a huge dam near the north Georgia town, costing in the neighborhood of $3,000,000, and requiring two years to construct, with a large force of workmen on hand. Mr. Butt has booked some excellent first and second-run features. The theatre will open for the evenings only.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Kiss for Cinderella"—Paramount, Rivoli, New York

Daily News: "If you want to forget time and the cold wind outside and any other little worries you may have, drop in (or wait in line, as hundreds are doing, despite the discomfort) to see Betty Bronson in this Barriquee version of the loveliest of all fairy tales."

Graphic: "It's a winner from every angle. It has box office appeal, heart interest, spectacular mountings, delightful comedy, real pathos—in fact, everything that goes to make up a picture one cannot afford to miss. Betty Bronson seems to be an inspired Cinderella. Tom Moore is delightful."

Telegraph: "Herbert Brenon's picturization of J. M. Barrie's play for Paramount adroitly captures the whimsical charm of the noted Scot, yet it remains at all times substantially interesting. It is not whimsy for the few, but good box office for the many. Every one concerned in it has earned the big star that caps the top of the Christmas tree."

American: "Again Herbert Brenon has attempted to film a Barrie play and again he has succeeded... Once more Betty Bronson is a Barrie heroine. Her gayety and enthusiasm are infectious. Matt Moore was a splendid policeman and a gorgeous prince."

World: "'A Kiss for Cinderella' is a much better picture play than was 'Peter Pan.' In it there is expressed a very definite feeling for the deign of fantasy in picture form. It is easily the most refined and most characterful performance yet given by the small and delightful Miss Bronson, and justifies, if, indeed, other pictures which have gone before have not, all the generous and tender treatment which has been accorded this pretty flower of the Paramount garden."

Mirror: "'A Kiss for Cinderella' is a beautiful, well dressed production that is a credit to Director Brenon. It has been superbly photographed by Roy Hunt. Indeed, Mr. Hunt's ballroom compositions, and the ride of the coach bearing Miss Bronson through the clouds are simply gorgeous."

Times: "Mr. Brenon, ought to be toasted with baked potatoes and ice cream cones, as is the king in this whimsical narrative, for he has produced a marvelous rendition of the Barrie play. He has crowded most cleverly into a comparatively short sequence an unbelievably joyous conception of Cinderella's ball. It is a gorgeous piece of work in which the camera wizard and the stage designer have ably supported Mr. Brenon."

"Three Faces East"—Pro. Dis. Corp., Forum, Los Angeles

Times: "It is by all odds one of the best mystery stories that has yet been made for the screen. It combines very convincing performances by Clive Brooks, Jetta Goudal and Robert Ames with a fine air of suspense in the plot and some exceptionally good spectacular effects in the climaxing scenes showing the destruction of a fleet of airships engaged in an attack upon London."

Daily News: "It is a mystery play that holds the interest of the audience from the first foot of celluloid until the grand climax. A success? Well one should say so! This picture has attracted the greatest crowds to the Forum in perhaps the history of the theatre and no wonder. It is an opportunity to see Jetta Goudal, the emotional actress in a characterization of a world war spy that will undoubtedly spell money to the producer."

Examiner: "Rupert Julian has handled this adaptation of Anthony Paul Kelly's successful mystery drama with many good effects. The picture and the direction offer Clive Brooks one of his best roles, with a nice touch of the romantic which he plays well. The film is effective and interesting."

"Road to Yesterday"—Pro. Dis. Corp., Orpheum, Chicago

Daily News: "As a piece of creative endeavor in the field of art, 'The Road to Yesterday' has all the earmarks of Cecil De Mille's handicraft.—It is the best De Mille production since 'The Ten Commandments.'"

American: "One of the best and most sincere things Cecil B. DeMille has ever done. Is really cleverly presented there being two ways to look at its point..."

Post: "De Mille is always a good entertainer and 'The Road to Yesterday' proves that he hasn't lost any of his skill. It aims to beguile your fancy and intrigue your imagination and it succeeds very well.—It is a first class offering and certain to please the majority of picture patrons."

Tribune: "It is fascinating.—Intensely romantic, lavishly produced and beautifully acted?"

"Lady Windermere's Fan"—Warner's, New York

World: "Lubitsch deals persistently in art. Each Lubitsch scene, garnished with the brilliance of a fanciful, imaginative, impressionistic touch, unfolds itself into a full, unmistakable and tremendously simplified episode. 'Lady Windermere's Fan' is pictured in the style of the German director at his very best. It is a smart, carefully pointed, now and again humorously brilliant undertaking."

American: "Lubitsch has taken Wilde's play and made it his own. All evening we tingled with delight at the delicacy, the originality, the precision of the directing. Irene Rich, May McAvoy and Bert Lytell were touched by Lubitsch's magic. The minor characters were equally well cast."

Morning Telegraph: "The sophisticated combination of Oscar Wilde and Ernst Lubitsch makes a delightful picture, with gay bits of humor and a charmingly told story. It is an outstanding good picture. Lubitsch could never be dull."

Evening Post: "'Lady Windermere's Fan' is beautifully, delicately framed by a picture maker who knows, down to the smallest detail, how to tell an interesting story with a camera. The celebrated 'Lubitsch touch' is everywhere to be discerned, and the players give, for the most part, unforgettable performances."

Evening Journal: "Expert directing and acting make the story delightful. Irene Rich steps out of her usual character and plays the part of a fascinating lady with a past. May McAvoy is lovely as Lady Windermere. There are many sophisticated touches and the cast is excellent."

Telegram: "As honest and intelligent a piece of screen entertainment as we seen during the entire year. The settings are artistic and impressive. The cast is an able one."

An Alaska New to the Screen Filmed in All Its Beauty!*

The book that is thrilling hundreds of thousands of readers today, comes to the screen with its sweeping drama of love and unbridled passion—picturing an Alaska hitherto unknown to movie fans.

It is a powerful story of the North, unfolded in the shadow of grotesque totem-poles—revealing the primitive rites and dances of the famous Aleut Indians as background for an absorbing melodrama that reeks with the kind of entertainment for which the public is clamoring.

Mr. William Sistrom,
Gen'l Manager Metropolitan Pictures Corp.,
Hollywood, Calif.

Dear Mr. Sistrom:

I am very happy that the Metropolitan actually sent its players into Alaska to film my novel ROCKING MOON in the locality portrayed in the book. There is no substitute for Alaska, you know, and the public has become very tired of Alaskan stories screened in California--and Canada.

As soon as it became known that ROCKING MOON was being filmed in the North I began getting letters and telegrams of congratulation because at last an Alaskan story by an Alaskan writer has really been filmed in Alaska. This is the first time in the history of moving pictures that this has been done. I enclose for you an editorial on the subject from the Juneau (Alaska) Daily Empire. I have also been receiving enthusiastic letters of inquiry from my American Magazine readers who followed ROCKING MOON as a serial in that magazine. They are particularly interested to know if they shall see, in the screen version, real foxes and an authentic Alaskan fox farm. It is with great satisfaction that I write them that they will.

There are two other things which I appreciate more than I can tell you: One is the sympathetic work of the director, George Melford, and his fidelity to Alaskan facts; the other is your careful selection of players for my story. It seems incredible that you could get together for a cast in which each actor is so exactly fits the part to be portrayed. Lilyan Tashman is my lovely Russian Sasha to the life; John Bowers might have been the inspiration for handsome, courageous Gary Tynan; Rockcliffe Fellowes is the image of that fascinating, masterful fox-pirate, Nicholas Nash. I am pleased, too, with Luke Cosgrove as kind old Colonel Jeff, and Laska Winters as my tragic little creole, Zoya. And honestly, if I should meet Eugene Pallette in a ballroom, I'd step up to him and say: "Hello, Side-money!"

I won't detail my enthusiasm further, but I felt I must let you know that you have screened the novel of one appreciative and satisfied Alaskan writer who is Cordially yours,

Barrett Willoughby

CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS ARE THE FAIREST

¶ The exhibitor who sends in box-office reports to MOTION PICTURE NEWS has no possible object in view other than giving brother exhibitors a fair and impartial statement of what the attraction did at his theatre.

¶ He has no reason for under-statement, for he knows that a report published anonymously cannot be used to his personal disadvantage in any way. Similarly, he has no possible motive for exaggeration.

¶ Nothing is more confusing than to struggle through a score of varying reports, "Big," "Fair," "Good," "Poor," and what not, and to try to iron out individual variations of condition and opinion and arrive at a true estimate of the picture's worth.

¶ For that reason, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, by means of a simple and easily understood percentage system, reduces all reports to a "common denominator" that tells the story at a glance, saving time and confusion for the busy manager—presented again this month in

The New Kind of Entertainment

THE inauguration at the Rivoli Theatre of the Anderson revue brings closer to our editorial doors what we have already forecast—that this new kind of entertainment in picture theatres will come quickly to the front this year.

Our mind goes back to the first divertissement in picture presentation—the first, at least, that came to our attention. It was in 1913 at the Regent Theatre, New York, under S. L. Rothafel's management. The picture was "The Last Days of Pompeii;" a score of people back of the screen shouted as the city was destroyed.

With the building of the larger theatres in 1914 and thereafter, large orchestras were introduced and then came prologues. With the opening of the Capitol Theatre vaudeville was introduced. Later Rothafel and Riesenhof developed these stage attractions to a high degree, but for a long time it was felt that they must uphold and partake of the note of the picture, its atmosphere, etc.

About three years ago we published an article from Thomas D. Soriero, manager of the Whitehurst Theatres in Baltimore, stating that the prologue was passing. Entertainment, he contended, that was designed to add to the picture's interest by interpreting it really detracted from the appeal of the screen; that what was wanted was all that the word divertissement implied, namely, a departure, a change, a variety of attraction. And he instituted at that time, at the Century Theatre, a series of twenty-minute operettas and flash acts, such as revues and ballets.

Prologues have undoubtedly passed; and variety acts are with us. In England—we quote from The Kinematograph Weekly—"throughout the year the policy of adding vaudeville acts to kinema programmes has grown steadily. One circuit is reckoned to stage up to seventy vaudeville acts every Friday night."

In this country there will be much progress along these lines this year. Publix Theatres have announced the erection of producing studios for this class of entertainment. Probably they will be developed at different points throughout the country. Picture theatres in general, the neighborhood theatres as well as the first runs, will undoubtedly turn to vaudeville, as in fact many already have.

With the seating capacity of the big motion picture theatres, the very best producers, artists and acts of the highest order can and will be secured: we may expect to see some remarkable developments, as the super-theatre gets under full headway, unprecedented in the show world. But for theatres other than these a note of caution may well be sounded.

Pictures are pictures. Pictures are the drawing card—everywhere. It is loose talk to say that a big house can be run with its show, regardless of the picture; and the men who know by actual experience don't talk this way. Picture entertainment has advanced to a high degree, and vaudeville has got to match it.

When we say pictures are pictures, we refer to the short features as well as the long. The writer has seen bills—and in some pretentious theatres, too—where the stage acts might better have been dispensed with in favor of good short pictures; much better, for the sake of the box-office. And the wise exhibitor knows this.

It simply won't do to put on cheap vaudeville and hastily and crudely devised acts merely to do what the big house with its huge income can afford to do so well. Otherwise, many a box-office will point a moral stronger than the one this editorial strives for.

W. A. Johnston

WARNERS' super - picture, "The Sea Beast," was given a preliminary showing to the press last week. It will be reviewed in these columns later, when it opens at the Warner Theatre, where a long run at advanced prices has been arranged.

We speak here of the acting of John Barrymore, which we believe to be about the finest of all the stellar performances on the screen. His transition from the gawky, larky whaling lad into the suffering man crippled by the sea monster, and then into the prematurely aged, vengeful demoniac captain of the whaler, is a wonderful and admirable and great characterization. It is fitting, too, to add that Dolores Costello wins her laurels in this picture as an actress and a big drawing card at the box-office. There are big moments in the picture. It shows throughout the care and expense that have been lavished upon it.

IT is common report on Broadway that William Fox is making it next to impossible for any other producer to secure Broadway's best stage plays.

Starting last year with the deal with John Golden, he also added to his bag "The First Year," "The Fool" and "Lazybones." The Golden alliance continues into next season. "Lightnin'," "The Wheel," "Thunder Mountain," "Thank You," and "Wages for Wives" will be followed by the filming of "Seventh Heaven," "Pigs," "The Holy Terror," and "Going Crooked."

Then came the contract with David Belasco for the filming of the stage classics: "The Music Master," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "The Auctioneer," and "The Grand Army Man," and including also "The Lily" and "The Comedian."

Through the American Play Company, film rights were secured to the celebrated Charles Hoyt plays, of which "A Trip to Chinatown" is well advanced in production and nine other plays are to follow.

"What Price Glory," "The Cradle Snatchers," "Is Zat So"—all outstanding hits of the current season—have been bought at startling prices; and the newspapers are announcing right along the probable purchase by Fox of most every play that flashes into success, together with alliances with New York's foremost producers. Screen rights have been secured to "The Family Upstairs," "The City," "Whispering Wires," "The Way Things Happen." It is safe to say that similar and important announcements may be expected weekly from the Fox camp.

All of which is important. Fox made his line-up last year one of special attractions. Not merely well advertised stage plays of the present and the past, but also spectacles, thrillers, stories of war like "Havoc," patriotism like "As No Man Has Loved," and such good show stuff added as Tom Mix's well-handled trip to Europe. "The Iron Horse" need not be mentioned here, except that it brought into the limelight the director and cast who, this year, are to make "The World of Promise."

The Week in Review

Fox, as we have remarked before, makes shows, which is more basic than theatres, mergers, etc. And the new season, with the reconstruction of the producing forces under W. R. Sheehan and with James R. Grainger at the sales helm, certainly looks good.

AFTER all the smoke and confusion which issued from Berlin during the conferences between the Ufa officials and representatives of Famous Players, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal, the sky has cleared—and apparently everyone is happy. Ufa is relieved of an embarrassing financial position, Universal gains play-dates in German and American theatres and is relieved of the loan and the distribution of Ufa product, Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn gain great advantages in the splendid representation which they will enjoy in the Ufa houses.

All in all, great credit is due to Sidney R. Kent of Famous, Leopold Friedman of Metro-Goldwyn, and Carl Laemmle of Universal, as well as the others concerned, for the sane and sensible solution which was arrived at. A complete and bitter deadlock might easily have been reached which would have done irreparable harm to international relations and resulted in a costly commercial war. Instead of that, a compromise has been effected which damages no one and which leaves each company materially better off than before.

The feeling has been expressed in certain quarters that Universal has come off rather badly in the deal, with only a few shreds of the benefits which it would have derived from the original arrangements. That opinion is not very well borne out by the facts. Universal has lost certain advantages, to be sure—but it is a question as to whether the benefits gained by the realignment do not more than compensate for the losses.

All credit to Carl Laemmle for being the first to perceive the value of such an international affiliation—the best proof of which is the situation created by his announcement that he was about to sign with Ufa. All credit, too, for the diplomatic and businesslike manner in which he consented to a compromise which would leave all parties happy and better feeling all around.

"BEN-HUR," the Superb, is with us, and the applause greeting its premier echoes in the ears of those who added their voices to the chorus of acclaim. A truly marvelous production, of such tremendous scope and magnitude that even the most blase members of the experienced first-night contingent were stirred to enthusiasm. Remembering the furore created by the stage play a decade ago, and our own unrestrained admiration for illusionary melodramatic effects attained during such episodes as the big chariot race by use of clever mechanical inventions, we could not help thinking how utterly the screen has dwarfed the "legitimate" in the massing of spectacular detail and achieving dynamic climaxes.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

It is, of course, as a gigantic and soul-moving spectacle that "Ben Hur" is destined to live in the public memory. A masterpiece of surpassing beauty and massive settings, it breathes and develops a sense of majesty that, combined with its symbolic splendor and reverential suggestion of the tragedy of the Christ, holds an audience spellbound, except for such intervals as the chariot race and sea fight of the galleys when the thrill of nervous action, clashing combat and flashing steel awakens a storm-tumult of vocal appreciation.

THAT the story theme concerning the loves of the gallant Jewish lad and lovely maiden was not submerged and lost in the sweeping tidal waves of the spectacular flood is a lasting testimonial to the directorial skill and fine judgment of Fred Niblo. That romance is necessarily a secondary issue in comparison with the feature's far-flung glory of vividly realistic accomplishment, but enough of the tender passion's charm shines through the crashing conflict of opposing factors to placate those to whom film entertainment on ever so grand a scale lacks appeal, if the straight heart-touch and sentimental lure be missing.

The famous race is a never-to-be-forgotten triumph of camera technique. Ben Hur's white steeds straining every nerve and sinew in the wild, mad, gallop, sometimes losing, again gaining ground, the haughty Messala sneering disdainfully at his opponent, the crashing of the chariots; horses, men, kicking, rolling on the arena floor, a chaotic mass of struggling flesh and blood, the whirlwind finish, the furious force and searing tension of it all!

Another no less wonderful photographic feat is the filming of the battle between the galleys, with the half-nude, hapless slaves toiling desperately at their oars, keeping time in unison to the beat of their taskmaster's uplifted hand of authority, the close-action fighting as the craft collide, the sinking vessel, and countless heads rising and falling with the waves as the drowning victims struggle toward the shore.

The opening sequence of the Nativity is delicately and exquisitely handled, Betty Bronson as the Madonna making an impression of rare, spiritual beauty that will linger long in the minds of the beholders. Other scenes in which the reverent, religious suggestion is beautifully carried out are those registering the symbolism of the star guiding wise men and shepherds. Christ's ride into Jerusalem and the solemn, fateful march to Calvary.

AS to the acting, too much praise cannot be awarded Ramon Navarro for his fine, heroic portrayal of the Hebrew youth who loved, suffered, fought and won. Francis X. Bushman's splendid muscular frame and handsome features fitted him eminently for the role of the proud, overbearing Messala, and the dash and daring of his execution proved that he has retained much of the fire and energy of youth which distinguished him as a star of former days. Other outstanding performances are those of Nigel de Brulier, as Simonides; May McAvoy, as Esther; Claire McDowell in an affecting mother role; Winter Hall, as Joseph; Carmel Myers, as Iras and Kathleen Key, as Tirzah.

To slightly paraphrase an old quotation, "Ben Hur, came, was seen, and conquered!" An amazing production, and one which it is gratifying to recollect MOTION PICTURE NEWS was first of all trade papers to herald as a future screen sensation.

ONE of the happiest men in New York the morning after "Ben-Hur" opened at the George M. Cohan, we dare say, was Director Fred Niblo. The long, weary months of planning and toiling and worrying were over at last, and the picture safely launched. As a result he was as delighted as a young boy over the many nice things said about the picture—but he was still wearing the same size hat. Like most of the really big figures (and he can hardly be other than that from now on) he is unassuming and cordial. The morning after the opening, although he had not yet even had time to read the New York newspaper notices, he found time to receive various members of the press.

It is a rare pleasure to talk to Niblo, so free from affectation and pose is this man who himself was a Broadway star but ten years ago. With engaging candor he told us of the making of "Ben-Hur," giving credit freely to those who had helped him—to his assistants and his cameramen, to Carey Wilson and Bess Meredyth for the script, to the players for their courage and patience and enthusiasm, and so on down the line.

He described vividly the strain he had labored under when, as in the Mediterranean sequences, the lives of hundreds of men depended upon his preparations and care, and when one faulty move or oversight might send them to destruction. The chariot race, too, kept him lying awake nights, dreading the accidents which the following day might bring. When an

MR. HAYS has added a former Governor to his staff—Carl Milliken of Maine, who is also a distinguished churchman and a man of wide interests. He is already well-known and very favorably known to the industry; his appointment is an event of real significance.

GOVERNOR SMITH has again come out flat-footed in opposition to censorship, and urged its repeal in New York State. His argument is incisive and unanswerable. Repeal would seem to have more than a fair chance of succeeding this year.

WE are very much interested in the announcement this week of the radio arrangement effected by the Hays organization through Station WJZ. Wednesday afternoon talks are being given by prominent figures in the industry—Col. Jason Joy, head of the Hays Public Relations Department; President Woodhull of the M. P. T. O. A.; D. W. Griffith and others. This is a very important work. It is utilizing the magic of the air to further public good-will.

PURCHASE of the United Studios in Hollywood by Famous Players is another indication of the expanding production activities of that company.

That wasn't static you had on your loud speaker the other night—it was Mack, one of the leonine beauties at the Universal City Zoo, broadcasting "Moonlight and Roses and You" to an appreciative audience.

The United plant covers 26 acres, and has long been regarded as one of the important producing centers in the film colony. First National, which has been using the United facilities, will continue there until May 1, after which other arrangements will be made, with the building of a new plant being considered as one of the possibilities.

THERE was discussion, at the recent convention of the M. P. T. O. of Oklahoma, of a State income tax on producers who use the percentage system. L. W. Brophy, secretary of the organization, was quoted in the daily press as condemning percentage and urging the tax.

There are two vital points to be considered in this connection, it seems to us. The first is that percentage in itself is not an evil. On the contrary, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has for years advocated it as the correct and fair method both for producer and exhibitor, provided it is fairly conducted. Abuse of the percentage plan is, of course, indefensible.

Just as important is the fact that the urging of additional taxes on this already tax-burdened industry is a mistake. It can be productive of nothing but trouble and injustice to the business as a whole.

In Connecticut, it will be recalled, certain ill-informed persons believed they were placing a tax upon the distributors. But the tax was passed along, as taxes always are; and the result was a serious tangle which was ironed out only after weeks of difficulty.

We regret to see an exhibitor openly favoring such a proposal, as that attributed to Mr. Brophy.

accident did occur, and horses, chariots and men were piled up at one of the turns, five years were taken off the wrong end of his life, he declares—though luckily not a man or horse was seriously hurt.

His description of the weeks of preparation for the chariot race scenes, when a large vacant lot was rented and converted into the Circus Maximus, was especially interesting. The details to be attended to were enormous—the engaging of thousands of extras, costuming them, erecting the enormous circus, preparing the track, finding the horses, and endless other tasks. The direction was divided among several men, with 22 assistants working among the crowd of extras.

An interesting feature is the fact that four negatives were made of "Ben-Hur," instead of the customary two. The picture is expected to have so long a life as to require more prints than could satisfactorily be taken from the usual one domestic and one foreign negative.

It was characteristic of Niblo that when Lloyd Nosler, his youthful cutter, entered for a moment he diverted the subject of the interview from himself to Nosler. This young chap has performed the prodigious task of selecting 12,000 feet of film from almost a million feet shot. Every day, Sundays included, for more than a year Nosler has looked at not less than four or five thousand feet of "Ben-Hur," and usually more. Yet, he declares, he is still interested in it.

We might go on and on indefinitely quoting Niblo's comments and sidelights, but since we must stop somewhere we close with an incident he relates which illustrates well the undying optimism of picture executives. After the months of strain and labor were over, and Niblo was leaving for New York, Louis B. Mayer called him aside and said: "Well, Niblo, now that you've finished 'Ben-Hur'—when you come back I want to put you on a BIG picture!"

AFTER "Peter Pan" it scarcely could be considered an experiment to bring to the screen Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella" under the auspices of Herbert Brenon's direction and Betty Bronson's portrayal of the winsome heroine of that charming work of dramatic fiction. Yet there is no insuring the success of an enterprise in photoplay production—the shrewdest precautions against failure, the most sincere efforts to achieve success have proved their fallibility in picture making as in the creative arts. But here is an instance where the end justified the means, and the enthusiastic applause of critics and reviewers must be echoed and re-echoed by all those who appreciate fine things in the theatre.

The quaint and piquant charm of the central character, the quiet humor and moving pathos of her real and imaginary adventures, the pictorial beauty of the dream phantasy, all come to full flower under the artistic touch of the director and his able companions in the work of picturizing "A Kiss For Cinderella." It is a screen work of transcendent beauty, with the direction, the acting of Miss Bronson, Tom Moore, Henry Vibart and Esther Ralston, reaching the heights of their respective goals.

Censorship Useless Says Gov. Smith

Again Recommends Abolishment of N. Y. Motion Picture Commission in Address Before State Legislators

GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH again recommends the abolishment of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, just as he has in previous messages to the Legislature. Addressing members of the Legislature at the state capitol in Albany on Wednesday noon, January 6, at the opening of the session, Governor Smith, devoting a portion of his remarks to the question of motion picture censorship, outlined his viewpoint in the following language:

"Foremost among many useless activities of the government is our attempted censorship of moving pictures. Censorship stands in open opposition to the American idea of freedom and liberty. We have sufficient laws to punish those who outrage public decency. If we haven't they should be enacted.

"The arm of the state must never reach out against freedom of speech or freedom of the press, and the exhibition of motion pictures is not far removed from those fundamental liberties that we have sought to guarantee to every citizen.

"It will be no backward step because the censorship of motion pictures was caught up in the mad scramble to censor everything only a few years ago. We have retraced our steps from the policy of subjecting our school teachers to a loyalty test as we have likewise turned our back upon the governmental policy of licensing private schools.

"The security of the state does not rest upon its ability to condemn acts before their commission, but rather upon its ability to punish violators of the law."

Looking at the situation in an impartial way, there is every indication that motion picture censorship will probably be wiped out of existence in New York state by July 1. There are three things that point to this as being probable. While the New York State Legislature still remains Republican and would not naturally adopt Governor Smith's suggestion of abolishing the Commission, the fact remains that any patronage now going to the Commission would be Democratic, and would be named by the Governor. This means that the Republican Legislature will not be as keen as in the past for the retention of the commission when it meant several fat plums.

Today two of the three heads of the Commission are Democrats and the terms of the third, George H. Cobb, a Republican, expired on January 1.

The fact also remains that last year, as well as the year before, quite a number of the Republicans in the Legislature, were inclined to swing over to the Democrats, when it came to voting on the question of censorship. Party leaders found themselves in hot water in more than one instance when they attempted to line up the Republican forces solidly against carrying out Governor Smith's suggestion of abolishing the Commission. If this was so last year, it will be even more so this year.

No berth has yet been made for the Censorship commission in the plan of reorganization of departments and commissions. Governor Smith must be given credit for being consistent for even though there is already a $7,500 job open on the Commission for some Democrat, the State's Chief Executive does not turn aside but still maintains the attitude that censorship of motion pictures is absolutely nonsensical and should be done away with once and for all time.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

A SPLENDID TRIBUTE

AN inspiring tribute to J. Gordon Edwards, the producer-director who died last Thursday at the Hotel Plaza, New York, after being stricken with pneumonia on Christmas day, has been paid by A. L. Selig, one of the best known publicity men and a close friend and associate of the late director. It is as follows:

J. Gordon Edwards has passed but "to live in the hearts of those we love, is not to die."

There are so many things that can be said of J. Gordon Edwards, but mere adjectives cannot adequately describe the love, affection and esteem he was held in by those who came in daily contact with him and who knew of the big heart that beat in that great big body of his.

"Daddy" as he was affectionately called by all who knew him, it is safe to say, left not a man or woman on this earth who could say aught but the highest of encomiums of him. Amid his great achievements for the motion picture screen he still remained the affable, friendly human being that Nature intended him to be.

No cry of distress, no story of poverty, that did not receive the helping hand of "Daddy." He did not forget the friends of his early years of struggle, and his words of encouragement and in many, many cases a monetary consideration turned many a helpless soul from the path of despair to a more cheerful outlook on life.

Crowning all these qualities of "Daddy" was his idealistic love for his wife—his sweetheart—a love that in itself was the overshadowing passion of his life. And that love returned in the same idealism by Mrs. Edwards, stands out among those who were fortunate enough to come in contact with them.

To the screen J. Gordon Edwards gave some of the greatest spectacles—pictures that will live as epics until the day of Doom. He has had under his direction literally many thousands of men and women—but they were human beings to "Daddy" and from the very humblest of extras to the star, there was that devotion and fidelity that gave to their director the best that was in them.

Many will miss "Daddy"—his genial personality, his cheery presence, his mischievous twinkle in his eye, his commanding figure—over six feet, two inches—most of all his sweet, devoted wife, whose very life was wrapped up in her distinguished husband, who was with him from his earliest struggles until success crowned his efforts—but—

WALTER WEDS
WALTER F. EBERHARDT, who writes the Satevepost and other national advertising copy for First National, and M.ss Harriet Howard Kimball, were married on Wednesday, December 30th, at the Church of the Transfiguration, New York City.

The groom (whom we assume wore the conventional black) has been with the publicity and advertising department of First National for a number of years, having handled exploitation publicity for some time, then national tie-ups, and now national advertising. He has also been prominent in the affairs of the A. M. P. A.

BACK FROM BIRMINGHAM

HAVING resolved to be out of the trenches by Christmas, the members of the "Men of Steel" unit just barely crept under the wire, the last contingent arriving in New York from Birmingham on Christmas morn, tired but happy.

For seven weeks the company filming First National's epic of steel has been on location in the southern city, including Milton Sills, Doris Kenyon, Mae Allison, George Fawcett, Director George Archainbaud and about fifty others. Remarkable co-operation was given them, and some striking shots are understood to have been gotten in the open pit mines and the steel mills.

A BOOK OF GREAT VALUE

NAT G. ROTHSTEIN and his aides at Film Booking Offices have brought out a book which should prove unusually popular among exhibitors—in fact, we shouldn't wonder if it became a best seller. It is a booking book, pocket size, which the company is distributing gratis to exhibitors who apply for it. For completeness and practical arrangement it surpasses anything we have seen.

Attractively bound in a dark green leatheroid, it should stand the wear and tear of daily use in good shape. Two full pages are provided for each week's program, with space for listing the short subjects as well as the feature, and with a place on the right hand page for keeping a record of all accessories and of advertising expenditures.

An added convenience is the listing of all public holidays, Lent, and so on, next to the dates on which they occur. All in all, a mighty useful little book and one which well represents the practical show brains back of it.

W A MERRY LIFE, FORSOOTH

E hear often of the problems of the casting director, who must now and then must find a three-legged man, or red-haired twins, or a Missouri fiddler or what have you? But another individual who has his problems and griefs and worries is the purchasing agent, of whom we hear less.

gives an interesting picture of the queer purchases that are all in the day's work. Here are some of the things that he has been called upon to obtain recently for "Our Gang," Charley Chase, Glenn Tryon, Clyde Cook and Hal Roach comedies:

One (1) rooster that would crow without looking at the camera.

Three (3) large apes, one trained to do the Charleston and one that would walk sidewise, facing the camera.

One (1) automobile wrecked and put together again in such a way that it would fall into 1,216 pieces, or thereabouts, at the director's command.

One (1) parrot with a fondness for riding on the steering wheel of an auto.

Seven (7) tons of corn fodder, possessing a strong photographic likeness to snow.

Workmen's clothes which would look like leather but tear easily.

One (1) snappy, brand new roadster equipped for a romantically inclined driver, with all controls on the left hand side of the steering wheel.

French found them all, but he has good reason to know that making comedies is no laughing matter.

THE BIOGRAPH GIRL

FLORENCE LAWRENCE, the original "Biograph girl," is going into vaudeville for the second time this winter, hitting the Big Time on this occasion. Her vehicle is Ethel Clifton's "Diamond Cut Diamond," the sketch which Mrs. Wallace Reid used some time ago.

It is pleasant to know that the film fans still remember her with warm affection, and that letters, flowers and such tokens of remembrance have been flowing in at each performance.

A $53,608 TREASURE

WHILE playing at being a doughty buccaneer with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate," Captain George C. Wester, master of the full-rigged ship Llewelyn J. Morse, part of the Fairbanks fleet, has received notice that a real treasure of $53,608 (no stage money) is awaiting him.

More than thirty years ago, Captain Wester was one of the American sealers outlawed from the Bering Sea by the U. S. The Canadian government contested the claim of jurisdiction and won. The American government indemnified the Canadian sealers, and the U. S. vessel owners then instituted action to be similarly indemnified for seals which they might have caught had they been permitted to hunt. Just the other day Captain Wester and 67 other skippers won their claims in the Federal court in San Francisco, for the years 1892 and '93. At last reports, however, he was still navigating for the Fairbanks production, with no intention of becoming an independent producer on his own.

STARRING THE SHORTS

BULLETINS of the Better Films committee of the National Board of Review for the past two weeks award none of the asterisks denoting "a particularly good picture" to features, but pin five of them on the short subject producers. All five, it so happens, are Pathe releases, and the subjects so honored are: "All Astride" and "The Uprising Generation," both Sportlights, and Pathe Review No. 51, No. 1 and No. 2.

WIELDING A MEAN BRUSH

WHEN Hobart Bosworth went to famous old Fort Huachuca, Ariz., with Victor Schertzinger, for the purpose of making Fox Films version of "The Golden Strain," he took with him some odds and ends which he called his "Trifling tools." Those who were intimate with the celebrated character actor knew that this outfit contained his painting kit.

"I thought," said Bosworth, "that I could do a little daubing between sequences. If the thing came out nicely—all well and good. If not—all I wasted was a tube or two of paint and some good white cloth."

Renee Adoree in a doll scene with the marionettes which she uses in "The Black Bird," which Tod Browning has both written and directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The company remained at the Arizona fort three weeks. During this time Bosworth had several idle days. He made the most of them. Sitting at his window, in the famous "horseshoe"—a row of officers' dwellings which surround the post—he painted early and late. His best view—that of the Mexican range—was just to the South.

Returning to Los Angeles, Bosworth encountered Peter B. Kyne, famous California author.

"You wrote the story," Bosworth volunteered, "but somebody else painted the picture. Here's the result. I move that we send this to Colonel 'Jim Crow' Rhea—commander at Fort Huachuca—with our compliments."

"Great!" said Kyne. "I know 'Jim Crow' Rhea—soldiered with him, in fact."

"That being the case," said Bosworth, "we might send your picture along with the painting. He'd appreciate both."

"As well as your own," Kyne suggested.

"In that case," said the obliging photographer, "I suggest a photograph of the picture—with Messrs. Bosworth, and Kyne looking on. He'd surely appreciate that!"

And when Colonel Rhea wrote—acknowledging the lovely gift—he said the Tenth Cavalry was so proud of the painting he would hang it in the Officers' Club at Huachuca.

$16,000,000 Loew Pittsburgh Project

Transaction for Theatre and Office Building Heads Many Theatre Expansion Deals During Past Week

A BUILDING to be erected by Marcus Loew in Pittsburgh at a cost of $16,000,000 heads the new theatre transactions, of which there have been many throughout the United States during the past week. The Loew project calls for a theatre with a seating capacity of 4,000 and a large office building. Building operations are scheduled to start May 1st. The deal was closed by E. A. Schiller, general representative of Loew's, Inc.

Among the other important transactions, the new Broadway Theatre in Portland, Oregon, a 2,500-seat house now in course of construction, was taken over by lease by the North American Theatres Corporation, a subsidiary of Producers Distributing Corporation.

The house was being built by the Ackerman and Harris vaudeville and musical show circuit. Present plans indicate that the motion picture end will be handled by the Producers organization, with the vaudeville features still to be supplied by the Ackerman and Harris company. The former organization will have complete charge of the management of the house.

The Grand and Royal theatres at Peterborough, Ontario, have been acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, it is reported. Famous Players already have the Capitol Theatre at Peterborough, the manager of which being A. G. Crowe, one of the best known theatre men in the Province.

Dan Michalove of Universal in the Southeast is making a tour of Florida towns where company theatres are located. Upon his return some definite policy for the expansion of the theatre department will be announced.

The Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, originally incorporated under the laws of Delaware, has been granted a charter by the Secretary of State to engage in business in New York State. The concern has a capital of $1,000,000. Charles B. Paine is the president.

Fox is said to be contemplating the building of a big first run theatre in Brooklyn on a site close to the Brooklyn Strand. The new house, it is said, will seat between 4,000 and 4,500, and will be ready in about a year.

Joseph Stern and Louis Golding have procured land for a theatre in Union, New Jersey, at the corner of Morris and Stuyvesant Avenues. The theatre will seat approximately 1,250 and will cost approximately $200,000. Construction will start February 1st.

A half interest in the Rialto, Omaha, was sold during the week. Famous Players-Lasky bought the half interest, the sellers being Keith Neville, Walter Brandes, Arthur Mullen and John Latenser. A. H. Blank, who owns the other half, will operate the house as heretofore. The Rialto was built seven years ago.

Merging of the Robbins chain of theatres with the Mark Strand corporation of New York was officially announced in Syracuse this week, when representatives of the firms met to complete details of the merger, which is expected to be consummated within a month. The conference, confined to officers of the firm, brought Moe Mark, president

Warners Open Seattle Egyptian

WARNER BROTHERS formally opened Warners Egyptian Theatre in Seattle on Christmas Day. It is declared to be one of the finest theatres in the Northwest and was built at a cost of $250,000. It is built in the Egyptian style throughout, the exterior being an adaptation of Egyptian temples. The house seats 1,300 and boasts the largest organ in Seattle, as well as a ten piece orchestra. L. K. Brin, a veteran theatre manager is the managing director.

Among the unique accommodations in the new theatre are a "crying room," a glassed enclosure where mothers may sit with their babies and watch the performance, and a smoking room also glass enclosed, from which the pictures may be seen.

"The Man on the Box" was the opening attraction, with Syd Chaplin, the star, and "Chuck" Resiner, who directed and played a comedy role, appearing in person. A capacity house with many Seattle dignitaries attended the opening.

The erection of a new theatre in Detroit, to cost $500,000, is announced by W. S. Butterfield, head of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises. The company owns the Regent and Capitol in Detroit and theatres in several other cities in Michigan. Work on the new building, to be known as the State, will begin early in the spring and will be completed by October or November.

The John H. Kunsky enterprises, already owners of four big downtown Detroit theatres, and associated with Ballaban and Katz in the building of the magnificent new Michigan theatre, soon to open, announced this week that it is planning several new big theatres of the Michigan type, equipped to handle large revues besides pictures. The Michigan will accommodate 5,000 persons.

The deal between Publix Theatres corporation and the Shea Amusement company of Buffalo has finally been closed. The Shea houses will be controlled by a new corporation to be known as the Shea Operating Company, the officers of which are: Michael Shea, president; Harold B. Franklin, vice president; Austin C. Keough, secretary, and Fred Metzler, treasurer.

The members of the board of directors are Mr. Shea, Vincent R. McFaul, Harold B. Franklin and Sam Katz. McFaul, who has been with Mr. Shea a quarter century or so, starting in as office boy in the Shea office in the old Garden Theatre, and who has been manager of Shea's Hippodrome since Harold B. Franklin left that post to head the Paramount theatre department, will be associated with Mr. Shea in the physical operation of the Shea chain.

He also will be managing director of the new Shea Buffalo, which is scheduled to open Saturday, January 16. The company will control Shea's Court Street, Hippodrome, North Park, Kensington, now under construction; Buffalo, about ready to open, and a new theatre, the Metropolitan, which it is planned to build at 628 Main Street, between the Buffalo and the new theatre which the Coplon Brothers are building and which will be leased by Fox. The company also proposes to open theatres in many of the residential sections of the city.

Finkelstein and Ruben celebrated the Christmas holidays by announcing plans for the construction of two new theatres in their Northwest territory. One is to be erected at Huron, S. D., and the other at Aberdeen, S. D. Contract for the Huron house was let to the Maul Construction Company. It will seat 1,100 people will cost $150,000 and will be located in the business district. Russell & Lindgren got the contract for the Aberdeen theatre, which will seat 1,400 and will cost around $225,000.

United Acquires Rhode Island Houses

Three more theatres in the Pawtucket Valley, Rhode Island, have been taken over by the United Theatres, Inc. This gives the United control of all of the theatres in the valley as they already operated the Majestic and Palace Theatres in Arctic for several weeks.

The new ownership gives Owen B. Thornton, dean of Pawtucket Valley theatrical men, the management of the four theatres in Arctic. James Thornton, son of Owen B. Hays Office Ties Up With WJZ on National Broadcast

Weekly Talk Going Out on Super Service Power

BY arrangement between the M. P. P. D. A., Will H. Hays, president, and the Radio Corporation of America, an address on some film topic of general interest is being given each Wednesday afternoon at 2:45 p. m. from station WJZ by a leader of the film industry or other prominent national figure. These addresses go out from the studio of WJZ in Aeolian Hall, New York City, and are put on the air on super-service, the new high power authorized under the experimental license to this station, and which has been heard in all parts of the country. All details of the broadcasting are being handled by the two organizations jointly.

The addresses will be of a purely general nature, for the benefit of the industry at large, and will in no way publicize individual productions or players. The super-service, it has been found, will make these talks available to radio listeners in approximately 30 states. The afternoon period was chosen because there is less interference at that hour from other high powered stations.

Colonel Jason S. Joy, director of the Department of Public Relations of the Hays office, was the first speaker. He outlined the radio service play and made a strong plea for constructive co-operation. R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., spoke on January 6th on Laugh Month; January 13th will bring the Rev. George Reid Andrews, chairman of the Committee on Educational and Religious Drama of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and vice-president and general manager of the Religious Motion Picture Foundation, who will talk on "Religious Motion Pictures"; and January 20th will see as the speaker James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, on "Why Western Pictures."

Among others who have already spoken are D.W. Griffith; Mrs. Robert H. Flaherty, wife of the explorer-photographer; Charles A. McMahan, executive secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Council; and John C. Eversman of the Hays office. Schedules are now being mapped out to keep the service continuous throughout the year.

Woodhull's talk was titled "The Art of Making You Laugh," and some of the highlights in it were:

"I trust that the folks listening in will pardon me for a moment while I pay my respects to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, who are meeting today at Pittsburgh. I say 'pay my respects' because it is with the highest regard that I always think of the personnel of that organization.

"I am speaking for the motion picture theatre owner, who retails to you, the public, the product or picture produced and distributed by the first two units.

"It is my thought that a theatre just as much as any other institution has its own important part to play in the rendition of community service, and is one of the five great educators, namely, the pulpit, the press, the school, the radio, and the screen.

"The latter is an universal language. No printed word or wonderful oratory can be understood in every language and in every country, but a picture depicting mother-love, comedy, drama, or any other situation, registers with all the people throughout the universe.

"All this is merely a foreward to the message it is my pleasure to convey to you today.

"The month of January has been dedicated to laughter by an association of gentlemen in our industry who devote their efforts to the production of the shorter subjects of the motion picture programs; and may I say, speaking for the theatre owners, that the time has arrived when it has become necessary for us to pay quite as much attention in the planning of our entertainments to these most important featurettes as to the longer features, and I am quite sure if you will ask the theatre owner or manager in your community, he will tell you that one of his greatest worries is the art of making you laugh. It is a very serious matter, and while January is being celebrated as "Laugh Month," and the theatre owners all over the country are making a special effort to keep the brighter side of life foremost, one of the principal reasons that I so heartily welcome this promotion of laughter is because of the fact that it is directing the attention of the movie fan quite seriously to the matter of comedy.

"If there is any group of workers in motion pictures who give much to picture lovers, and I am afraid receive little in the way of recognition, it is the splendid group of fine men and women who are devoting their lives to making you happier through laughter.

"You may not have realized it before, but comedy is an absolute essential to a well rounded bill of entertainment, and yet too often you have perhaps accepted it as a matter of course, and when the laughs are over, and you have been one of the many to write admiring letters to the stars, you have perhaps overlooked forwarding a little word of encouragement to the comedy artists who, for a few moments, at least, lifted the weight of worry and tears, of which our average lives are all too full, and made these lives happier with a laugh.

"It is perhaps due to the fact that you have neglected to tell your local theatre manager how much you enjoyed the short subjects that he has in many cases devoted his entire time to the selection of his feature, and purchased his short subjects with the idea of their being fillers instead of featurettes.

"Comedy is fast coming to a position of predominance in motion picture entertainment. Many of the big feature productions of this season have been out comedies, and the dramatic director today who fails to inject into his picture a plentiful supply of comedy relief has put forth his creation under a most terrific handicap.

"It is, however, the briefer comedies in which we are most interested during January, "Laugh Month," and I do not feel I have to direct your attention to the improvement in quality manifested in the shorter subjects during the last few seasons.

"Many of the two-reel films that make you roar with laughter represent six to eight weeks or more of constant work by huge studio organization and in their making it is often necessary to photograph 8000 to 10,000 feet of film to get the 2000 feet of finished product, in order that you may laugh for twenty minutes.

"I sincerely hope that during this month of January you will secure an unlimited store of healthful laughter, and also that in the future you will remember that your local theatre manager has a problem that has never dawned upon you before."

Compromise Made in Ufa Situation

Universal, Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn Will Share Benefits of Joint Arrangement With Leading German Concern

AS outlined briefly last week in a late dispatch from the Berlin correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the final outcome of the negotiations in Berlin between the officials of Ufa and representatives of Universal, Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn is a modification of the original deal between Universal and Ufa under which the advantages derived therefrom will be shared by the three companies.

The loan of $4,000,000 for 10 years will be extended by Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn jointly, instead of by Universal, the interest rate to be seven and one-half per cent, it is understood. The Ufa program will include nine Universal Jewels, instead of 16 as originally planned. The balance of the program, presumably, will be largely made up of Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product.

Newspaper accounts painted the conferences in Berlin as a veritable "battle of words and money," with Famous and Metro-Goldwyn threatening to build a chain of houses in competition with Ufa in Germany, where they would show American pictures at cut prices, unless the Universal deal was cancelled and awarded them. This was emphatically denied by Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who told a NEWS representative:

"Such reports are absolutely untrue. The conferences were entirely amicable and conducted for the general good of the American trade. There was no coercion or threats to build theatres in competition with Ufa."

Elek J. Ludvigh, at Famous Players, who was abroad for that company some time ago to investigate conditions, stated that S. R. Kent, general manager, had advised nothing further than that the deal had been closed, and that full particulars of the Famous Players participation in the deal would not be known until Mr. Kent's return, some time next week.

Universal originally agreed to distribute one-third of the Ufa output in the United States, which on the schedule of the past year would mean 11 or 12 features. It is now relieved of this obligation and Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn will distribute five Ufa pictures each, per year, if they are suitable for the American market.

One or two elaborate productions, it is said, will be made by Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn each year in Berlin in conjunction with Ufa. No other production abroad is included in the deal, however.

Whereas Universal was to have two of the five directors on the Ufa board, Famous and Metro-Goldwyn, according to press reports, are to have two-thirds of the board of directors. They are also to share in any theatres erected by Ufa in the future. Ufa now has 130 houses and books for a total of nearly six hundred.

According to cablegrams from Carl Laemmle received at the home office of Universal in New York, important advantages were conceded to Universal by the other two American companies in the deal for playdates in their houses in the United States and particularly in New York City. Laemmle also stated that he could go no further without overthrowing principles of independence for which he has always

Foreign Bureau Again Up in Washington

EFFORTS to secure the establishment in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of a motion picture division, which will look after the needs of the American film producers abroad, are expected to be renewed during the present session of Congress.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, accompanied by Director Julius Klein, this week will appear before the House committee on appropriations to discuss the estimates of the department for the fiscal year 1927. Those estimates as approved by the Budget Bureau do not carry any provision for the establishment of a motion picture division, but it is expected that individual members of the appropriations committee, who last year discussed the question with Secretary Hoover, again will delve into the subject with a view to determining whether the bureau cannot be created.

Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays office, is expected to appear before the committee to urge the inclusion of an item in the bill providing the funds with which the division could be set up.

fought hard in this country, and that he had had no desire to acquire a monopoly of the German field.

Consequently, Universal, being assured of representation in the Ufa theatres in Europe and the Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn houses in America, expresses itself as entirely satisfied with the outcome of the negotiations, particularly in view of the fact that it is relieved of the $4,000,000 loan and the distribution of Ufa pictures in America.

The principal portion of the annual report of the board of directors of Ufa, read at the meeting on December 30th in Berlin, is as follows:

The business year 1924-25, the first after the publication of the first gold mark balance sheet of June 1, 1924, calls for a detailed report, because it has brought about for the international film business as well as for our own concern entirely new situations and also because of the fact that into this period falls the strongest expansion and development our firm has had since its organization. This period of expansion runs well into the current business year.

It is the aim of the American film industry, which was in a position to expand steadily, since all economic forces in Europe were tied up by the war, and which has a strong fundamental basis in its tremendous home market and its important sales organizations throughout the world, to conquer the markets of Europe. Despite the unfavorable political and economical situation in Germany, the German film industry has succeeded in holding its ground against the American competition. This is true especially in the case of our own company, which maintains the leading position in Germany and which for exactly this reason, has certain binding responsibilities. The stand taken by the German film industry does not mean enmity against America; on the contrary, our position on the world's markets calls for the best of business relations with the leading American film firms and we are of the opinion that the public in Germany as well as that of every other country in Europe, in which we are represented, has a perfect right to demand from our renting establishments the best of the entire world's productions. But, quite naturally we are obliged, above all, to see that our own organization and production is kept on so high a standard, that, on one hand, America can't ignore this organization and that, on the other hand, German standard works are produced, the quality of which will make them successful throughout the world. This policy we shall adhere to in the future as well as at present.

Only in connection with material financial sacrifices could this policy be carried through with a promise of success. The big American concerns were ready to open branches in Germany for a keen competition within Germany and at the same time, to block German products from the American market. In view of these prospects it appeared necessary to fortify ourselves by expanding our renting organizations and by improving the quality of our product, if we were to successfully meet the American offensive. Our position as the leading German film concern made these measures so imperative that we could not delay them even in a period when the economic and financial situation in Germany called for strictest reserve.

The situation depicted above is reflected in the balance sheet inasmuch as the items covering the costs of our studios and stocks are substantially higher as those of the balance sheet of the preceding year.

As far as the various branches of our enterprises are concerned, attention must be called to the following facts:

Production and studios: While it is conceded that, in Germany, the government restriction of import has helped in erecting a dam against at least a flooding with cheap American pictures, on the other hand, this very measure called for the production of a certain number of German films as a compensation for the import from America. For we cannot show foreign productions if we have not on hand the same percentage of home productions. Since there was little time to cope with this problem in our studios, not only large amounts were necessary for the prosecution proper but also new investments for up-to-date equipment of the studios and their supplements.

In the past business year our scientific department has not stopped at the production of the usual scientific and educational reels. A substantial number of plays with scientific or educational tendencies has been produced, based for instance on matters of agriculture or sports.

During the past business year we have acquired the majority of stock of the Aktien-gesellschaft Fur Film-Fabrikation in Berlin—Tempelhof, a big and modern printing laboratory with own buildings and real estate.

Renting Establishments: Our renting establishments have developed favorably during the past business year. A favorable selection of German films, other than of our own production, our own films of quality and standard and profitable contracts for foreign films has brought about this happy result.

Theatres: The number of patrons in our theatres has materially increased during the past year. On the other side, however, the expenses, due to the increasing demands of the public in regard to programs offered and especially through the general increase of running expenses has also been materially augmented.

The following new theatres were opened during the past business year:

Ufa theatre, Turmstrasse, Berlin.
Frankischer Hof, Cologne.
Ufa-Palast, Gelsenkirchen, Westfalia.
Albert Hall, Leipzig.
Schauburg, Gleiwitz.
Helios Lichtspiele, Hindenburg.
Ufa-Palast Victoria theatre, Leipzig.
Kaiserkrone, Kiel.
Muenz theatre, Koenigsberg.
Urania theatre, Koenigsberg.
Trianon theatre, Koenigsberg.
Stadthallen Lichtspiele, Koenigsberg.

Since May 31, 1925, the following houses have been added:

Ufa-Palast Konigstadt, Berlin, Mozartsaal, Berlin, Ufa-Palast Oberhausen in Westfalia, Tonhallen-Lichtspiele, Bochum, Westend-Hall Leipzig, Kammerlichtspiele, Oppeln Beuthen, Intimes theatre, Beuthen, Schauburg, Beuthen.

The Ufa theatre Turmstrasse is the first modern cinema building erected in Germany since the termination of the year. The purpose of the theatre is to offer to the laboring classes a place of recreation with comfort and up-to-date entertainment. The Koenigstadt theatre serves the same purpose.

Aside of these steps it has been our ambition to keep pace with the best first run houses of New York and other capitals. The reconstructed Ufa Palace at the Berlin Zoo, which has been enlarged and luxuriously decorated has brought record attendances of as much as 9,000 people per day. By a special transaction we have obtained controlling influence on the Gloria Palast, a first run theatre to be opened in the near future on one of the most important traffic centres of Western Berlin. This transaction consisted in our acquiring the majority of the stock of the J. C. Pfaff A. G. Berlin, which concern among others owns the Roumanian house, sheltering the Gloria theatre and situated right opposite to the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Cathedral.

The exorbitant entertainment taxes imposed on the cinema theatres by the German municipalities—a thing unknown in other countries—has had the effect that our theatres have not made a substantial profit during the past business year, while the middle class of exhibitors and the smaller ones were absolutely wiped out by this system of taxation.

In the same measure as our production has increased our organizations in foreign countries have been augmented. Following the establishment of renting organizations in Czechoslovakia, Holland, Switzerland, Finland and Poland, additional renting branches have been organized in Austria and Hungary which are based on their own first run houses. The opening of sales branches in London and Paris, for which important contracts are ready and waiting, is impending.

After having overcome initial difficulties, our New York branch has gained a fair footing and gives hope for successful activities.

The number of employees and workmen of the Ufa was 5,000 at the end of the business year. The salaries and wages paid by the firm during this period, subsidiary firms and wages for actors and extras included, amounted to 16,000,000 marks.

The net profit of RM3,078,314.17 as shown on the balance sheet, we propose to use as follows:

Six per cent dividends on a stock capital of
RM45,000,000	RM2,700,000 00
Tantieme as per statutes....	100,000 00
Credit to new account.....	278,314 17
Total	RM3,078,314 17

The outlook for the new business year in the various branches of our enterprises gives hope that the incoming amounts will not only eliminate the present financial tension but that an adequate profit will be turned over to the shareholders. This hope is especially based on the new renting and theatrical season which commenced on October, 1925. On the other hand our increased production of last year and our large stock of ready films make it seem superfluous to divert the same amount as last year into this branch of business, so that the temporary tension which perhaps was a trifle too sudden, but at the same time unavoidable in the organization of a European film concern of importance, can be regarded as a matter of the past.

Improvements on Fox Lot Rushed

New Buildings Erected at Fox West Coast Studio to Cost Almost a Million Dollars; Will be Complete "Movie" City

APPROXIMATELY a half million dollars has been expended and a half million more has been appropriated to make Fox Hills, in Hollywood and Westwood, which property was acquired by William Fox some time ago, a most complete producing unit both from the esthetic as well as the practical angle.

The buildings making up this unit consist of a new administration building erected at a cost of $50,000, a previewing theatre at $10,000, a completely equipped still-portrait studio costing $5,000, a wardrobe building at $20,000; a huge stage calling for an expenditure of $75,000 and a new reception building covering an entire block, between Delong Pre Avenue and Sunset Boulevard which called for an additional $75,000.

The arrangement of these buildings has been decided on as a model for all future construction of this nature. The business manager and his personal staff will be located on the first floor of the Administration building as well as the scenario editor and his staff. The directorial staffs with their personal offices will also be found on this floor.

On the second floor are the offices of the art director and his staff, the scenario writers and readers, the technical staff and the big library, in which are over twenty thousand volumes in charge of an expert librarian and a staff of assistants who pass on all technical points regarding correctness of all scripts. On this same floor is the script editors room where manuscripts are disposed of.

In keeping with the Spanish architecture which predominated, the exterior is of stucco with a red tile roof and artistic wood trimmings. Special attention has been paid to the lighting and ventilation systems.

The reception building fronts on the North Western Avenue side of the West Lot. The entrance is to a reception lobby, 40 by 60 feet in dimension, with tiled floor and wainscoting, ivory colored plaster and heavy beamed ceiling, all of Spanish design. In one corner there is a pool and wall fountain. Wrought iron is used for the doors and the fixtures, making for an harmonious and striking effect. The entrance, of hand-tooled art stone is surmounted by an electric sign with concealed lights.

An information desk in the main lobby facilitates the transaction of business in an efficient and quick manner.

Visitors must pass through this entrance hall to enter the lot, which is reached by a long corridor to the Administration Building, the bungalows of the stars, the offices of the general superintendent, Tom Mix training quarters, the previewing theatre, and the stages.

The previewing theatre will be Spanish design, the interior color scheme of polychrome with the ceiling in blue. The floor will be in black and tan tile. Again the indirect niche type of lighting is used most effectively. Seating capacity is 100, with the seats of upholstered plush and of the most recent type. The projection room is perfect of its kind, employing the latest improvements throughout. The proscenium arch is 13 feet wide by 5 feet deep and affords space for a large screen.

The new wardrobe building is the largest in Hollywood. It is 36 by 110 feet and has accommodations for the largest assortment of wardrobes in the industry, as well as rooms for costumers and their assistants, special fitting rooms and one floor devoted to the use of extras entirely. An innovation is the well between the first and second floors, providing for the care of valuable rugs and hangings, which may now be hung instead of being rolled and folded and preserves their quality.

The still-photograph studio is one of finest of its kind, employing the services of an expert photographer and his staff, who are constantly at work making portraits of Fox stars.

The Fox lot seems a most cosmopolitan city, with many streets laid out for production purposes. There is a Western street; a New England lane; a Spanish avenue; an old English street; a French ruin street; haciendas and detached houses. Also the reproduction of Johnstown at the time of the great flood in 1889 is well developed in construction. Other operations include a cyclorama, a treadmill, skyline, the largest individual motion picture stage in the world, a portable stage and new electric generator sets.

Pathe and Sennett Sign New Contract

Deal Consummated This Week Involves Production and Release of Two-Reel Comedies For Several Years

A NEW contract involving several hundred productions and several million dollars was entered into this week between Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Mack Sennett, veteran comedy producer. The deal provides for the production and release of fifty-two two-reel comedies per year over a period of several years.

This schedule, according to the parties concerned, calls for substantial increases in production costs in order to insure the highest-calibre talent and material available in the way of stories, direction, cast and general high tone production.

In a statement announcing the new contract, Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, stresses the efforts of Pathe to establish its short-comedy output on a plane of quality with the finest feature productions on the screen. In his statement Pearson says:

"The production cost under the new contract is increased by from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent over our previous arrangement. The entire transaction involves several hundred productions and several millions of dollars.

"It has been the aim of Pathe and Mack Sennett to produce comedies that for sheer excellence of entertainment and box-office drawing power will rival that of the best feature-length pictures on any exhibitor's program. While, heretofore, rental grosses have not permitted all the production latitude desired, the new arrangement gives the producer ample elbow room on this score, and if the plans now in hand are carried out a real treat is in store for the Pathe customers and motion picture fans all over the world."

Ben Turpin has been signed to appear in a series of two-reel comedies and Raymond McKee and Ruth Hiatt will make a series of domestic comedies depicting the mishaps of the "Smith Family." McKee and Miss Hiatt will play Mr. and Mrs. Smith, respectively, Mary Ann Jackson plays the Smith baby and "Cap," grandson of "Teddy," the well-known canine actor, also plays an important part in this series. The first Smith Family comedies listed are "Smith's Baby," "Smith's Vacation" and "Smith's Landlord."

In addition to the Turpin and Smith Family series, the Alice Day and Ralph Graves starring series will be continued and a number of Harry Langdon specials are listed under the terms of the new agreement. As in the past, Miss Day will be supported by such players as Danny O'Shea, Ruth Taylor, Eddie Quillan and Joseph Young. Graves' supporting cast will consist of Thelma Parr, Eugenia Gilbert, Marvin Lobach and William McCall.

Harry Langdon will be seen in six special productions, three of which have been dated for release, the remainder not yet scheduled. These special productions are titled "Lucky Stars" and "The Junk Man," which are two-reelers; "There He Goes" and "Saturday Afternoon," made in three reels; "The King" (tentative title), in four reels, and Langdon's initial five reel comedy production, "His First Flame."

The Mack Sennett brand comedies will be continued, the cast for this series including Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Madeline Hurlock, Eugenia Gilbert, Kewpie Morgan and other members of the stock company. The well-known Mack Sennett bathing girls will also grace the casts of the fun films.

United Studio Bought By Paramount

Famous Players to be in Possession of Big Coast Plant in Spring—First National May Build

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY has purchased the United Studio in Hollywood and will take it over May 1. Official announcement of the purchase was made this week by Jesse L. Lasky, who declared that the step was taken to enable Paramount to carry out the most ambitious production program in its history.

The First National production units on the West Coast will continue at the studio until May, when other arrangements will be made. These will be determined on the arrival of Richard A. Rowland, who left New York for Los Angeles on January 4.

In response to a request for a statement, John McCormick, general manager of production on the West Coast for First National, wired MOTION PICTURE NEWS as follows:

"We are considering various propositions for purchase or lease of plants now available. Also considering properties on which to build our own plant. However, nothing will be decided until Rowland's arrival and until after he has had opportunity to go over whole situation and which will probably require couple weeks. Meantime we remain present studio until May 1 as per our arrangement."

It is reported First National is negotiating with the De Mille and Metropolitan studios in Culver City and Hollywood for space to house its own and allied units.

St. Paul Exhibitors Form Advertising Combine

TEN exhibitors in St. Paul, Minnesota, have banded together for the purpose of competing with the Finklestein and Ruben interests in that city as regards advertising in the newspaper columns, as the first step in a new movement to attract business to their theatres.

Heading the advertising used by the ten houses will be copy of the Tower theatre, operated by Joe Friedman, which will carry a by-line proclaiming it St. Paul's only independent first run house.

Space has already been leased at the Metropolitan studio by Corinne Griffith. The De Mille and Metropolitan plants are now under one management and there is plenty of room for production units other than those at work for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

First announcement of the deal with Famous Players was made on the Coast by Joseph M. Schenck and M. C. Levee. The sale figure given in this report was $5,000,000.

Paramount production activities will be transferred in May from the Lasky Studio in Vine Street, Hollywood, to a new producing center.

"Although our studio in Hollywood has long been considered the best equipped plant in the country," said Mr. Lasky, "it is not big enough to take care of the productions which we have scheduled for this coming year. The United Studio has nine stages and its 26 acres will enable us to expand our activities to take care of the production program we have in mind."

For the present, said Mr. Lasky, there will be no disposition made of the Lasky studio property, which is in the center of Hollywood. It is probable that some production will continue at the Lasky studio throughout the summer, as it is not expected that the necessary additions to the United Studio can be made in time to take care of all of the Paramount production activities for some time to come.

The purchase of the United Studio by Famous Players follows the celebration last month of the twelfth anniversary of the Lasky studio. Twelve years ago Jesse L. Lasky and Cecil B. De Mille made their first picture in a small barn which now occupies a corner of the Lasky studio, and last month all of the stars, directors and leading players of the Famous Players organization gathered in this barn to help Mr. Lasky celebrate the anniversary.

Former Gov. Milliken Joins Hays Staff

Succeeds Courtland Smith, Who Goes to Fox Theatres Corp.—
Jerome Beatty Appointed Assistant to President

SEVERAL important changes were announced this week in the staff personnel of the Hays organization. Courtland Smith, secretary of the association since its inception, has resigned to accept a post with the Fox Theatres Corporation.

Mr. Smith is succeeded by Carl E. Milliken, nationally known churchman and Governor of Maine from 1917 to 1921.

Jerome Beatty has been appointed an assistant to President Will H. Hays. He will assume many of the duties heretofore in charge of Courtland Smith.

Governor Milliken, who has had a large business experience, is prominent also in many activities of the Baptist Church, the Y. M. C. A. and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. He is president of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society and chairman of its finance committee; former president of the Northern Baptist Convention, a member for twelve years of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., a director of the Playground Association of America, and is active in many other civic and religious organizations. In 1911-1912 he toured the United States with John D. Rockefeller, Jr., speaking in behalf of the Interchurch World Movement.

Governor Milliken is a member of the

Carl E. Milliken, newly appointed secretary of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America

Board of Directors of the Religious Motion Picture Foundation. Upon completing his term as Governor, he took up a study of motion pictures as a social force. With a group of Maine men he produced a series of pictures from outdoor stories featuring Maine scenery.

He was born on a farm in Pittsfield, Maine, and holds degrees from Bates College, Harvard, Colby and the University of Maine.

Mr. Beatty was loaned to the Hays organization last April by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, to conduct the Greater Movie Season celebration. Arrangements were made by Mr. Hays to make the loan permanent, and since the end of Greater Movie Season, Mr. Beatty has been in charge of various activities of the association.

After ten years' newspaper experience throughout the United States, Mr. Beatty entered motion pictures as publicity director in 1915 for Essanay. Following that he was with Thanhouser, McClure Pictures, and six years with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, as advertising manager, then director of publicity and advertising and later as representative of the Department of Distribution in the Lasky Studio in Hollywood. He left Famous Players to join Preferred Pictures, and upon the dissolution of that company went with Universal as Director of Exploitation. He has been a frequent contributor to magazines.

'Ma' Ferguson Proclaims Laugh Month

Texas Laugh Month Committee Enlists Services of State
Governor in Gigantic Exploitation Idea

THE biggest local stunt so far engineered in connection with Laugh Month—and one of the greatest pieces of exploitation work ever put over by motion picture men—has been engineered in Texas by the Laugh Month Committee of Dallas exchange men and the Texas Motion Picture Theatre Owners whose combined efforts brought about the issuance of a governor's proclamation declaring January Laugh Month in the State of Texas.

On Thursday, December 31, Governor Miriam A. ("Ma") Ferguson, in the presence of the Dallas Laugh Month Committee and Col. H. A. Cole, President of the Texas M. P. T. O., signed the following proclamation:

"Realizing that the year of 1925 brought prosperity to many, though adversity to some; and

"Believing that a cheerful, happy outlook is the best antidote for gloom, as well as the greatest assurance of future well being; and with the most heart-felt conviction that 'It is better to laugh than to mourn,' and that 'we must laugh to live'—

I HEREBY PROCLAIM the month of January, 1926, as 'Laugh Month,' for the state of Texas; and I recommend to the people of this great and glorious commonwealth that they start the year with happy laughter and good cheer, with the assurance of a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

(signed) MIRIAM A. FERGUSON,
Governor of Texas.

Fox Buys "Sandy," Newspaper Serial; Will Be Spring Release

"SANDY," the new newspaper serial story from the pen of Elenore Meherin, the author of "Chickie," has been purchased by Fox Films to supplement its group of spring releases, according to an announcement by James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the Fox organization.

Because of the success of "Chickie," there was spirited bidding among the various producing organizations for the screen rights to Miss Meherin's latest effort.

Upward of one hundred newspapers in the United States are running "Sandy" serially.

Mr. Grainger announces that he intends to place the entire Fox advertising, publicity and exploitation staffs to work on one of the greatest campaigns ever put over in connection with a motion picture.

In an effort to make "Sandy" a sure fire artistic and financial triumph, Mr. Grainger also announces that every detail of its production will have a strong box office appeal. A cast of all star proportions will be chosen, and a director of proven merit will be selected to handle the megaphone over the filming. The scenario will be the work of one of the most capable adapters in the business.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of Fox Films, who has been at the Fox West Coast Studios for the past four months, will personally supervise the production details. He is now considering three directors preparatory to making the final selection and has instituted a careful search for the best type of girl to bring to the screen the vivid personality of "Sandy," McNeil, the beautiful young girl of nineteen who is the heroine of the story.

Paramount Reorganizes Staff

Changes in Exploitation Department Following Resignation of Saunders

GEORGE E. WEEKS, general manager of distribution for Famous Players-Lasky, has completed the reorganization of Paramount's exploitation department, following the resignation of Claud Saunders as manager.

Oscar Kantner, formerly exploitation representative in San Francisco, has been transferred to the home office to supervise the activities of the field force. Leon J. Bamberger, formerly assistant to Saunders, has been appointed manager of special exploitation with national campaigns under his supervision.

Since Saunders' resignation there has been a realignment of the field force which now comprises 16 men. This staff will be enlarged immediately, however, under Kantner's direction.

The present field representatives and their assignments follow:

Lee Balsley, Columbus—Columbus and Cleveland territories; Albert Birch, Denver—Denver and Salt Lake territories; John Callahan, Boston—Boston, New Haven and Maine territories; Ed Corcoran, Philadelphia—Philadelphia and Wilkes-Barre territories; William Danziger, Chicago—Chicago, Milwaukee and Peoria territories; Curtis Dunham, Dallas—Dallas, Oklahoma City, San Antonio and New Orleans territories; Harry Eagles, Seattle—Seattle and Portland territories; Kenton Franklin, Atlanta—Atlanta, Jacksonville, Charlotte and Memphis territories; George Gambrill, Cincinnati—Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Louisville; Russell Moon, New York City—New York, Albany, Buffalo and Jersey territories; Luther Putnam, Minneapolis—Minneapolis, Sioux Falls, Des Moines and Omaha territories; William Robson, Pittsburgh—Pittsburgh territory; Harry Swift, Los Angeles—Los Angeles territory; Edward Wall, Detroit—Detroit territory, and Irving Zeltner, Washington, D. C.—Washington territory.

Rowland Leaves For Coast

First National General Manager Will Confer With Various Producers

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, general manager of First National, has departed for his regular mid-winter visit to the west coast studios to discuss production plans with producers and directors associated with the company.

Just before his departure Rowland said:

"I believe that the coming year will prove more conclusively than ever the box office value of popular stars. A production may be artistic, the story may have dramatic value and there may be the appeal of a good box office title, but without a star whose name means something to the public, the actual worth of a picture will not be realized. This is not theory but fact, as shown by exhibitors' reports on pictures without stars and those with them."

Production plans of the company, according to Rowland, are well ahead of schedule, both on the west and east coasts. He expressed himself as pleased with the work done by George Archainbaud and his company starring Milton Sills, recently returned from Birmingham where exteriors were made for "Men of Steel," which will be one of the big schedules of the coming year.

While in Los Angeles Rowland will confer with John E. McCormick, western representative of First National, who is presenting Colleen Moore in a series of starring pictures. He will have an opportunity to consider in detail the plans of the allied producers, whose product is handled by First National. Among these are Joseph M. Schenck, Sam Rork, M. C. Levee, Marion Fairfax, John M. Stahl and E. M. Asher.

Texas, giving a most auspicious start to the celebration of Laugh Month in that state. Motion pictures and still photographs of the signing of the proclamation were made, and while the newspapers were printing the still pictures, all four news reels were showing the ceremony in the theatres throughout the state.

The Dallas Laugh Month Committee which put over this great piece of exploitation work is comprised of F. A. Tomes, Manager of the Educational Exchange, Oscar A. Morgan, Pathe Exchange, P. K. Johnston, Fox Exchange, and R. C. McIlheran, Universal Exchange. This Committee was formed as soon as plans for National Laugh Month were announced and promptly met with Col. Cole, head of the Texas exhibitors, to map out the Texas campaign.

With their hearts and souls sincerely in the work and with the finest spirit of co-operation at all times, the Laugh Month Committee and the exhibitors' organization secured the complete co-operation of the executive office at Austin. The Laugh Month Committee and Col. Cole went to Austin on December 31 accompanied by camera men and Associated Press representatives and within an hour after the proclamation was signed the Austin Statesman announced it in a big two-column box story on page one.

Manitoba Theatre Fire Loss $20,000

The Princess Theatre at Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, was destroyed by fire with a loss of $20,000 when flames spread from a freshly-lit furnace before the start of the evening performances. The manager was Ernest Webb, and the owner was J. Steinmann who bought the property one year ago. There was insurance of $13,000.

First Children's Matinee Held in New York

THE first of the "Saturday Matinee Movies," sponsored by some of the children of New York's "Four Hundred," was held at The Sulgrave, located at 67 Park Avenue, New York City. These matinee's will be in the nature of a philanthropy by the residents of this section for the less fortunate youngsters on the East Side.

The idea is to give the children carefully selected entertainments, reduced in size of projection and length of program. The entire proceeds of these matinees, of which there will be eight, will go to the fund of the Yorkville Centre Junior Camp for Boys. Miss Regge Doran, Director of the Pathe Public Relations Department, is giving active cooperation to the sponsors of this new form of entertainment.

The first program will consist of an "Our Gang" comedy, a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a Will Rogers comedy, and Pathe News and Review. Following programs will be somewhat varied, depending on the requests of the children. Sue Hastings' Marionettes will appear on at least one of the bills in addition to the screen fare.

Montreal Reports Show No Attendance Slump

That there was very little in the way of a big summer slump with Montreal moving picture theatres, nor very much in patronage fluctuations throughout the year, has been indicated in the civic report issued December 30 regarding the revenue derived from Montreal theatres during the fiscal year ending November 30, 1925.

This report shows that the total patronage at all local theatres during the 12 months period was 19,513,128, the amusement tax having been paid on this number of tickets. The tax revenue was $688,606, this being approximately 10 per cent on the face value of the tickets sold. From this, it is easy to figure that the gross revenue for all Montreal theatres during the fiscal year was close to $7,000,000, if the amusement tax statistics are reported correctly.

The number of theatre tickets sold and the revenue derived during the various quarters of the fiscal year are as follows:

Quarter ending February 28: tax collected, $185,475; admission tickets, 4,682,187.

Quarter ending May 31: tax collected, $178,114; tickets sold, 5,014,924.

Quarter ending August 31: tax collected, $139,075; admission tickets sold, 4,569,532.

Quarter ending November 30: tax collected, $185,940, and tickets sold at local theatres to 5,246,464 persons.

Illion, N. Y. Taxpayers Vote for Sunday Pictures

The village of Illion, N. Y. will now enjoy Sunday motion picture shows as the taxpayers, after one of the biggest fights in the history of the village, voted in favor of the Sunday shows.

Centralized Censorship Urged for Canada

THE subject of moving picture censorship recently caused a snappy debate in the British Columbia Legislature when G. A. Walkem, one of the legislators, advocated one censorship for the whole of Canada instead of the nine film censor boards as now maintained, one for each of the nine provinces.

Walkem made a strong plea for a movement to urge all Provinces to consider centralized censorship in Canada. Attorney-General Manson of British Columbia supported the plan but disagreed with the suggestion that film censorship was entirely unnecessary. The upshot of the debate was that an appropriation of $1,500 was passed by the House at Victoria, B. C., for further dealing with the subject.

The centralization of film censorship in Canada was advocated largely as an economical step.

Harry Carr Appointed Managing Editor Of Paramount Production

A SIGNIFICANT move to give the public a medium for critical influence in the making of motion pictures was taken by B. P. Schulberg and Hector Turnbull, associate producers of Paramount, when they announced the appointment of Harry Carr, nationally known newspaperman, as managing editor of production of Famous Players-Lasky Hollywood studio.

Carr is an editorial power, a noted dramatic critic and writer, and western representative of the Brewster Publications. He is an authority on motion pictures, having been chief advisor to D. W. Griffith and literary advisor to Thomas Ince and other producers. Also, he is co-author with Walter Woods of the screen story for the filming of the historic epic of "Old Ironsides," the exploits of the American frigate, "Constitution," which James Cruze will make for Paramount.

"Managing editor of production is a new department in motion pictures," said Mr. Schulberg in telling of the new position, "and is designed to provide a critical viewpoint on continuities of screen plays. The reviewer's viewpoint in the past has been obtainable only on a completed production. Hereafter the attitude and reaction of the critic—acting as the voice of the public—will be given us before a picture is made instead of after."

Both Turnbull and Schulberg believe that Carr's incisive ability in analysing and interpreting the public pulse will prove invaluable to the Paramount organization. He will be in charge of previews of Paramount Pictures, and will aid in titling productions.

"Mr. Carr will be virtually the critical voice in behalf of the public on the merits and appeal of new productions," said Schulberg.

Laemmle Starts Acting School

Students Given Practical Training With Opportunity of Five Year Contract

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, has established at Universal City a Photoplay University which will be run on a strictly business basis, entrants receiving the regular stock salary and used in pictures as often as possible. The University at present is housed in the Administration building, but it is planned to extend the curriculum to other arts in addition to acting if the courses warrant it. At present there are about thirty-five in the school.

There are entrance examinations, Paul Kohner, casting supervisor, acting as the entrance board, and a set course of training with examinations and promotions on the basis of merit and achievement. George Summerville, Dick Smith, Cliff Smith, Al Rogell, Wilham Seiter, Harry Pollard, Herbert Blache, King Baggott, Lynn Reynolds, Edward Sedgwick, Svend Gade and Edward Laemmle act as professors of motion picture art.

If the students make good they receive five year contracts and if they fail they are either let out or put back to their old standing in case promotion was premature.

Among the best prospects at present are Raymond Keane, a 19-year old Denver boy, who appears in "The Midnight Sun"; George Lewis, who is 21, played a juvenile lead in "His People" with such sincerity that he has been given a five year contract. Blanche Mehaffy, too, has been awarded a five year contract as a result of her work in the same picture.

Barbara Kent, Kohner's "discovery," has been signed under contract, but as yet has not appeared in pictures. Fay Wray, chosen by the Wampas this year, has been at Universal several months, and Clarence Thompson, a Harvard graduate, is being trained for Universal Westerns, recently playing a role in "A Fool for Luck," in which Art Accord is starred.

First National Studios Active

Many Productions Are Under Way at Both West Coast and East Coast Plants

FIRST NATIONAL is rushing production at both the eastern and western studios with the advent of the new year, an exceptionally heavy winter and spring program having been mapped.

At the eastern plant, A. L. Rockett, recently elevated to the rank of production manager, has selected "Puppets," a stage-play by Frances Lightner, as his first picture to be made under the First National banner. Milton Sills will have the starring role and consequently production will not be started until Sills has completed "Men of Steel," a First National special.

Within the next few days "The Savage," an original story for the screen by Ernest Pascal, will get under way under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Ben Lyon will have the featured male role and Fred Newmeyer will direct.

Among other scripts ready for production are "Mismates" and "The Boss of Little Arcady." Scenarists are working on "The Crystal Cup" and another not yet announced.

Two new pictures went into production on the same day on the west coast lot. Edwin Carewe started filming "Twentieth Century Unlimited" with a cast including Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes, Dolores del Rio, Rita Carewe, John T. Murray, Alec Francis, Edwards Davis, Clarissa Selwyn and Charles Sellon.

Lambert Hillyer started work on "The Second Chance" with Anna Q. Nilsson in the leading feminine role and Huntly Gordon and Charles Murray in featured parts.

MARIE PREVOST IN STAR SERIES

Signed by Metropolitan Pictures

METROPOLITAN Pictures Corporation scored a winning move for their line-up of productions for the 1926-27 season, this week, in signing Marie Prevost under a long term contract.

Under the provisions of the contract Miss Prevost will be starred in a series of Metropolitan Productions to be released in next season's group of pictures and plans are being perfected for a Marie Prevost production unit to film a number of popular books and plays which the company has had under consideration.

John C. Flinn, president of Metropolitan Pictures, and vice president of Producers Distributing Corporation through which the new Prevost pictures will be released, says regarding the contract:

"We regard Marie Prevost as one of the brightest personalities among all the reigning stars on the screen. Her rise to popularity has been pronounced and decisive following her work in such pictures as "Tarnish" and the two Lubitsch pictures, "The Marriage Circle" and "Kiss Me Again." In every criticism the work of Miss Prevost has been commented on in terms of highest praise.

"That the public makes the stars was never more clearly demonstrated than in the case of Marie Prevost whose advancement to a stellar position in a few years from a beginning as a bathing girl in comedies, is due to the approval of the picture going public."

Monument Theatres Buys Rochester Site

The Monument Theatre Corporation of Buffalo, which owns and operates the Lafayette Square theatre in the Queen City of the Lakes, has purchased a site at the corner of Court street and Clinton avenue in Rochester, on which it is planned to erect a 3500 seat theatre. The contracts for the real estate, involving a consideration of $1,150,000, have been closed.

Three parcels of property have been acquired which will give the house a frontage in Clinton avenue of 207 feet and 200 feet in Court street, extending to Cortland. The contract provides that the deal is to be consummated this spring and the construction of the theatre will start soon afterward. The theatre will be operated along lines which have made the Lafayette Square successful in Buffalo—high class vaudeville and good motion pictures. Morris Slotkin is general manager of the Monument Theatre Corporation. It is understood that A. H. Fennyvessy of Rochester also is interested in the project.

Naked Truth Dinner Big Affair

A. M. P. A. is Assured Attendance of Twelve Immortals of Film Industry

THAT the annual Naked Truth Dinner will be the industry's biggest affair is assured by the presence of the 12 Immortals chosen some months ago by the members of the A. M. P. A.

The 12 as they stand are as follows:—Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky, Will Hays, Roxy Rothafel, D. W. Griffith, Joe Schenck, Marcus Loew, William Fox, Sam Katz, Sidney Kent, Dick Rowland and Carl Laemmle.

Each of those 12 immortals with the possible exception of Laemmle who is now in Europe will be present at the affair. Special boxes have been set aside for the occupation by those famous men.

A series of surprises has been planned by the committees now at work to put this dinner over in a manner that will set new high records of entertainment and class in motion picture events.

One hundred stars gathered from every part of the nation will be present. One hundred tables is the limit. Nat Rothstein also promises a few "nifties" and surprises that should help to make the evening a most brilliant one.

The class of New York in music has been already secured. Two of Gotham's finest jazz orchestras will dispense the snappiest dance music heard in this village for many a day, and the music will be fast, furious and continuous. The largest galaxy of celebrities ever gathered under one roof will give those present a treat not witnessed before at any dinner, Naked Truth or otherwise. "The Eye and Hoof" party is the way the gang describes this party, eye for the nifties of sight and hoof for the thrills of the dancing. For once the motion picture fraternity will actually see "Who's Who" in film circles when the party gets under full swing.

Irrespective of the fact that at the last Naked Truth Dinner more than 300 people had to be refused admission because of the decision of the Committee under no circumstances to allow crowding or discomfort there have been requests received that indicate that more than 500 will have to be refused admission this season.

In order that no one in the industry may be disappointed it is urged that tables and reservations be made immediately, thus avoiding any alibis being forced on the committees who have the seating arrangements in charge.

Charles Einfeld of 1st National at 383 Madison Avenue has charge of all tickets.

Nearly 100 managers and probably twice as many more from the staffs of more than 80 Finkelstein & Ruben theatres in the Northwest attended the annual F. & R. managers' convention at the Radisson hotel, Indianapolis, Jan. 5.

Theatre Films Advocate Church Attendance

IN its cooperation with the churches of Wichita, Kan., the Miller theatre has engendered the good will of the people of that community. Speaking of the Miller plan, the Wichita Beacon says editorially:

"We do not know whether anything like it exists elsewhere in the United States, but the Miller theatre management of Wichita is in the habit of doing distinctive things, so we imagine it is alone in this feature.

"We refer to the practice on Saturday evenings of running a short film pointing out the advantages of church and Sunday school and urging people to go to those places on Sunday.

"There exists in some minds the notion that the theatre and the church are necessarily antagonistic.

"This is a mistake. The two institutions have many things in common. In fact they coincide along some lines.

"The Christmas programs given at the Miller theatre during the holiday each year exemplify this fact. Parts of these programs could be transported bodily to a church and performed with perfect propriety and with great effect.

"And the weekly injunction to go to church is the exemplification of a fine, wholesome spirit on the part of the management. It sort of warms one's heart."

State of Washington Bans Picketing

"Peaceful picketing" of non-union motion picture theatres in the State of Washington was eliminated and was declared punishable by fine last week in the annual session of the Washington Legislature, when Senate Bill No. 135 was defeated by the Washington lawmakers. Greatly involved was the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, which organization stood behind the legislators with the constant claim that no such thing as "peaceful picketing" was possible.

The bill came up as a direct result of the war that has been waged for many months against the theatre operators and projectionists, and the musicians' unions, who have constantly picketed the Seattle houses of John Danz with "Unfair" signs and banners. Danz recently caused the elimination of pickets by an injunction, until such time as the case should come before the legislature, as it just has.

Warner Radio Station Opened

WBPI in New York City Gives Company
Broadcasting Units on Both Coasts

NEW YORK'S newest broadcasting studio, station WBPI, was opened by Warner Bros. on December 29th from Warners Theatre, with a program from 6 p. m. to midnight. A brilliant group of Broadway talent was assembled for the opening, which also included a talk by Irene Rich, Warner star, and talks and telegrams from leaders in the film industry.

Will H. Hays, in a long telegram from Sullivan, Ind., declared "This undertaking is another example of your progressiveness. It is characteristic of your splendid accomplishments." He suggested that "thought be given in 1926 to What's Right With the Movies", and urged that the motion picture be used to bring about lasting peace on earth.

"A few thousand feet of celluloid film in a metal container can be sent to the ends of the earth to speak the language which every one understands," he said. "Under the benign influence of familiarity with each other the world will grow better and that the motion picture shall have an important part in this development is my greatest hope."

Frank Vreeland, dramatic critic of the New York Telegram, who was present in person and discussed the question, "Do Good Movies Pay?" also struck a note of optimism. In general, he answered his own inquiry in the affirmative, and cited the work of a Warner star and a Warner director as evidence.

Irene Rich, featured in "Lady Windermere's Fan," created a favorable impression in her radio talk. In her present role she has found release from the neglected wife type of character and she asked fans everywhere to write in and tell her if they approve the change. She denied indignantly that her hair is bobbed and expressed regret that it isn't naturally red, as in the present picture.

Sam L. Warner explained in his address that WBPI stands for Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and Arthur L. Lee, managing director of the Hotel McAlpin, New York, welcoming the new station to Broadway, declared the letters mean "Working Best for the Public Interest." Christie Bone-sack, in charge of WNYC, the New York municipal station, extended the city's greetings and other welcoming addresses were made by Mayor William J. Dalton of Long Beach, L. I.; Phillip R. Mannis, district deputy grand master of New York Masons, and Major Charles S. Tate, 113th U. S. Infantry.

Telegrams of felicitation—besides that of Will Hays, came from Harry M. and Jack Warner, both in Hollywood; John Barrymore, Ernst Lubitsch, Syd Chaplin, Kenneth Harlan, Matt Moore, Louise Fazenda and Charles Wellman, announcer at KFWB, the station at the Warner West Coast Studios.

Winnipeg Asks Admission Tax Reduction

Representatives of all moving picture theatres in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and officers of the Manitoba Exhibitors Association, recently waited upon Premier Bracken and Hon. B. L. McLeod, municipal commissioner, of the Manitoba Government, to ask that legislation be introduced for a substantial reduction in the Provincial amusement tax on theatre tickets of 50 cents and under. No change was requested in tickets with a face value over that limit.

Premier Bracken replied that the request would mean a loss in revenue to the Government. Last year Manitoba received $44,000 in the tax on tickets valued up to 50 cents. A cut in taxation would mean that the revenue would have to be made up some place else.

The deputation of exhibitors was introduced by Gordon C. Lindsay, secretary of the Manitoba Exhibitors Association, Winnipeg.

"In making plans for the production of Columbia Pictures for the season of 1926-1927, and upon the arrival in London of Vice President Harry Cohn, we entered into an arrangement whereby a separate producing unit would make several Columbia pictures in England using British actors, actresses, technical help, with possibly one or two American stars in the cast to give these productions the necessary international aspect which will make them acceptable throughout the world.

"The British Columbia Picture unit will have its own financing organization, and the profits of these productions will accrue to the benefit of those British capitalists who are fathering this venture.

"It was with a great sense of gratification that I found Columbia pictures being exhibited in about every large city throughout Europe. When I visited Amsterdam I saw several Columbia pictures presented. Also in Berlin, Paris, Milan, Prague, Nice and other cities. Mr. Harry Cohn and myself had the pleasure of seeing our product well received.

Universal's "Poker Faces" Cast Completed

Universal has completed the cast for "Poker Faces," Harry Pollard's new Jewel Picture, which went into production last week. Edward Everett Horton, Los Angeles stage star has the masculine lead, with Laura La Plante playing opposite him. In the supporting cast are Tom O'Brien, Tom Ricketts and Leon Holmes.

Three Added to Richard Dix Cast

Three additions have been made to the cast of "Let's Get Married," Richard Dix's latest picture now being produced at the Paramount, Long Island studio. Gunboat Smith, former heavyweight pugilist, has the role of the detective, while Joe Kilgour and Tom Findlay will also be seen in prominent parts.

First National Insures All Employees

FIRST NATIONAL has completed arrangements with the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company whereby the permanent salaried employees of the picture company are insured against death and permanent total disability. The insurance is graded from $500 for employees who have been with the company less than a year, up to $5,000 for those who have rendered longer service in important capacities.

Arrangements with the life insurance company were completed in time for a general notification to be issued during the holiday season to those covered by the insurance.

Rayart Completes Many Productions

A number of productions for Rayart Pictures Corporation are announced as having been completed in the past week. Among them are "Somebody's Mother," a Gerson Pictures production, starring Mary Carr; "The Fighting Thorobreds," a Harry J. Brown production, starring Billy Sullivan; "Racing Romance," a Brown-Rayart release, starring Reed Howes; "Thrilling Youth," a West Brothers production, starring Billy West, and "Starlight's Revenge," a Harry Webb production, featuring Jack Perrin and his horse, Starlight.

In addition the first episode of a ten episode serial has been completed starring Herbert Rawlinson and Gloria Joy. Frederic Sullivan, another Rayart director, has completed "Wet Paint," a Joybelle comedy starring Eddie Fetherston and Gloria Joy.

Evelyn Ward Cast for "The Light Eternal"

Evelyn Ward, former screen comedian, and who later played a leading role in "The Brand of Lopez" has returned to picture work following a retirement of four years which occurred after her marriage. She has been cast for a small part in "The Light Eternal," the first American production which Benjamin Christianson, the Danish director is making for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The cast for this picture, for which the scenario was written by the director, includes Norma Shearer, Charles Emmett Mack, Claire McDowell, Carmel Myers, John Miljan and the talented dog actor, "Buddy."

Chaney Vehicle Titled "The Black Bird"

Lon Chaney's latest starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, directed by Tod Browning will be released as "The Black Bird." The story of the London underworld is an original by Browning and the continuity by Waldemar Young. Owen Moore, Renee Adoree and Doris Lloyd head the supporting cast.

Warners Theatre Adopts New Policies

WARNER BROTHERS have adopted a number of new policies for Warners Theatre on Broadway, New York. Among them are an increase in the admission prices and but two shows daily. The changes are to become effective with the opening of the world premiere run of John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast" on January 15th. They will continue in effect following that engagement.

Tentatively Warners have decided to start the regular week-day afternoon performances at 2.45 o'clock and the evening program at 8.30. Sunday afternoon showings will start at 3 o'clock. A revised schedule of admission prices calls for an evening top of $2 and an afternoon top of $1. Evening prices for all pictures will be $1, $1.50 and $2. Afternoon prices will be 50 cents and $1.

Elaborate prologues will be arranged for each feature photoplay. The prologue for "The Sea Beast" is to be especially impressive, if all of the plans now under way materialize.

Tacoma Backs Film Premiere

Initial Showing of "Hearts and Fists" Gets Unusual Cooperation From Civic Organizations

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS, INC., are having the active co-operation of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce in their exploitation of "Hearts and Fists," one of the Triumphant Thirty which was a January release. This picture is the initial production of the recently erected H. C. Weaver Production studio at Tacoma, Wash., and every public organization in the State is getting behind the production.

The world premiere of "Hearts and Fists" was held at the Rialto theatre in Tacoma, on January 2nd, and was attended by leading state and civic officials. Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers, Allan Hale and Dan Mason play the leading roles. Numerous scenes in the production were familiar to the audience and convinced many that the natural beauty of the mountainous Northwestern state would result in Washington becoming an active production centre for the outdoors type of picture.

An instance of the manner in which Tacoma is backing up "Hearts and Fists" is seen in its Board of Commerce having purchased 100,000 postcards printed with a facsimile of the title of "Hearts and Fists" for free distribution by Tacoma citizens. These postcards show a view of the famed Mount Tacoma, which appears in the production, and also gives the names of leading members of the cast. On the reverse side a script paragraph states the card contains an important message from Tacoma, Washington and requests the readers to ask their favorite motion picture theatre to book "Hearts and Fists" if they wish to see Tacoma and the wonders of the Northwest. An added sentence gives credit to Associated Exhibitors, Inc., and states the photoplay to be a product of Tacoma, Washington.

Associated Exhibitors, placed their reliance upon the U. S. Air Mail when laboratory trouble held up prints on "Hearts and Fists," and almost made necessary the postponement of the world premiere in Tacoma, announced for January 2nd. The western metropolis had been informed of its opening at the Rialto theatre, by means of a complete advertising campaign.

Despite the fact that recent unfavorable weather has considerably delayed the air-mail service, it was decided to take a chance on "Hearts and Fists" reaching Tacoma in time for the opening. Accordingly the print consigned to the Rialto theatre, Tacoma, Wash., left New York on December 28th and after a 3000 mile journey by air and rail reached its Pacific coast destination just a few hours before the time set for its showing there.

Fox Ready To Start New Season

End of Present Production Schedule in Sight, New Pictures Under Way Soon

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, has wired the home office in New York from the west coast that three additional pictures on this season's schedule have been completed and everything is now in readiness to start actual filming of some of the most important of next season's releases before the end of January.

Since his arrival on the coast four months ago, Sheehan has supplemented the Fox stock company of players with the best talent available and has strengthened the directorial staff by the addition of such directors as Raoul Walsh, Irving Cummings, Howard Hawks and Harry Beaumont.

Hawks and Cummings are responsible for two of the features just completed. Cummings has finished "The Johnstown Flood," a thrilling epic based on that American catastrophe. Hawks' first contribution to the Fox release schedule is "The Road to Glory," based on an original scenario written by himself. The cast is headed by May McAvoy, who is supported by Leslie Fenton, Ford Sterling, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Milla Davenport, John MacSweeney and Hank, the dog.

The third production announced as having been completed is "A Trip to Chinatown," first of the Charles Hoyt comedies to be made by the Fox company. Margaret Livingston and Earle Foxe have the leading roles. In the supporting cast are J. Farrell MacDonald, Anna May Wong, Gladys McConnell, Harry Woods, Marie Astaire, Charles Farrell, Wilson Bangs, George Kuwa and Hazel Howell.

Every stage at the gigantic Fox studio is now being occupied. George E. Marshall, supervisor of Fox comedies, has comedy units scattered all over the place making Imperials, Helen and Warren, O. Henry and Van Bibber two-reelers. Production does not stop at comedies, however, as on the big stages there are six Supreme Attractions in work and four more ready to be started.

Scott Sidney to Retire as Director

When Director Scott Sidney completes "The Million Dollar Handicap" for Metropolitan Pictures and released through Producers Distributing Corporation, he plans to retire from picture direction. Previous to the filming of this Metropolitan he was for eight years with Christie and previously to that was with Thomas H. Ince. He has directed such pictures as "Charley's Aunt," "Madam Behave," "Hold Your Breath" and "Seven Days."

Additions to "Prince of Pilsen" Cast

A. H. Sebastian has made a number of recent additions to the cast of "The Prince of Pilsen," which he is producing for Producers Distributing Corporation release. George Sidney, veteran actor of the stage, and well known on the screen, has been signed for a leading role. Allen Forrest will play the part of the Prince and Myrtle Stedman, the Princess. Rose Tapley, formerly a featured player with the old Vitagraph Company, is another addition to the cast.

"Forbidden Waters" For Priscilla Dean

"Forbidden Waters," a story written especially for the star by Percy Heath, will be Priscilla Dean's second production for Metropolitan Pictures. She was called back to the studio right after the holidays to start work on the production.

In the cast with Miss Dean are Walter McGrail, Casson Ferguson, De Sasia Mooers and Dan Mason. Alan Hale has been borrowed from Cecil B. De Mills to direct the picture.

"Spuds" Will be Next Story for Larry Semon

"Spuds," a comedy written by John A. Moroso for Everybody's Magazine has been purchased by Pathe, as the next vehicle for Larry Semon, from Lois Weber who controlled the screen rights. Semon is now adapting the story, which deals with a boy who earned the sobriquet of "Spuds" due to his expertness in peeling potatoes as an Army K. P., for the screen and will start shooting sometime during January.

Monta Bell Will Direct "Charm" for M-G-M

Monta Bell has been assigned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to direct "Charm," an adaptation of the New York stage play by John Alexander Kirkpatrick. The play was purchased some months ago by M-G-M and adapted to the screen by Alice D. G. Miller. Details as to the cast have not yet been decided.

Harold Shumate Added to M-G-M Staff

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have added Harold Shumate to the editorial staff of the organization. Shumate recently completed the adaptation of "Miss Brewster's Millions," in which Bebe Daniels is the star, for Famous Players-Lasky. He is now at work at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios on an adaptation of a well known stage comedy.

'World of Promise' New Ford Production

JOHN FORD'S production for Fox, which has been in the making for the past fifteen months under the temporary title of "3 Bad Men" will be released as "The World of Promise." General manager Winfield R. Sheehan considered the picture too big to have the impression get abroad that its action centers about three bad men. It is a picturization of the story of the early west and Fox officials declare it is destined for greater popularity than "The Iron Horse," another of the John Ford productions.

A notable cast of players was chosen for the important roles in "The World of Promise." It includes George O'Brien in the leading male role, J. Farrell MacDonald, Tom Santschi, Frank Campeau, Lou Tellegen, Olive Borden, in the leading feminine role, Alec B. Francis, Otis Harlan, George Harris and Priscilla Bonner.

Olive Borden Steps Into Featured Roles

Olive Borden, voted one of the Wampas stars last winter is ready to step into the new season as a Fox featured player, according to the terms of her recent contract. Her first appearance in a featured part of importance is in the Tom Mix starring vehicle, "The Yankee Senor," scheduled for release January 10th. Miss Borden has the leading feminine role.

Because of her work in this picture, Miss Borden was given the leading feminine role in "3 Bad Men," a drama of the west on which production is now nearing completion.

George Walsh Starts "Test of Donald Norton"

George Walsh has started his fifth production of the current season for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. It is titled "The Test of Donald Norton" and is being directed by Reeves Eason under the personal supervision of Jesse J. Goldberg. Joan Meredith, 1925 Wampas Baby Star, has been assigned to a prominent role.

The picture is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Robert E. Pinkerton. Exteriors are to be made at Truckee, California. It is expected the production will be completed in about eleven weeks.

Karl Dane Cast for M-G-M's "Monte Carlo"

Karl Dane, whose role of "Slim" in "The Big Parade" won him many admirers, has been cast for a role in "Monte Carlo," the Carey Wilson novel which was adapted for the screen by Alice D. G. Miller. This comedy feature, with a cast including Lew Cody, Gertrude Olmstead, Roy D'Arcy, Harry Meyers, Cesare Gravina, Trixie Friganza and Zasu Pitts, will be directed by Wm. Christy Cabanne, according to an announcement by Hunt Stromberg, associate executive for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Frances Marion to Work for Samuel Goldwyn

AN agreement has just been entered into between Samuel Goldwyn and Frances Marion, well-known scenario writer whereby the latter will devote her time exclusively to the Samuel Goldwyn productions. Heretofore Miss Marion has been working as a free lance though she wrote the continuities for the eight productions which Goldwyn has produced since entering the independent field.

Miss Marion is now completing a story for another organization but will join the Goldwyn organization this month, thereafter devoting her time to the construction of stories for the Goldwyn stars and directors.

It is interesting to note that the scripts for both George Fitzmaurice's "The Dark Angel" and Henry King's "Stella Dallas," both of which have been recorded on the lists of "the ten best pictures of 1925 were prepared by Miss Marion, and that out of five pictures which have been awarded the Photoplay Magazine gold medal by popular vote, two, "Humoresque" and "Abraham Lincoln" were from her pen.

The production was personally supervised by Daniel Carson Goodman and directed by Harry O. Hoyt. Supporting Miss Rambova are Clive Brook, Sam Hardy, Katherine Martin, Kathryn Hill, Johnnie Gough and Little Russell Griffin.

The Associated Arts production, "Flaming Waters," a melodrama of the oil fields, is another of the completed ones. It was directed by Harmon Weight. Prominent in the cast are Mary Carr, Pauline Garon and Malcolm McGregor.

Final scenes have been shot on "The King of the Turf," a melodrama of the racing world, with Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller in the leading roles. "The Midnight Flyer," a railroad melodrama directed by Tom Forman, has already been previewed and is ready for distribution.

"The Keeper of the Bees" is another finished production that has already been shown in leading theatres. "Parisian Nights," a Gothic production in which Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Tellegen are co-starred in one of the earlier of the current year's Gold Bonds.

Another of the earlier ones is "If Marriage Fails." The cast is headed by Jacqueline Logan and includes Clive Brook, Belle Bennett, Donald MacDonald, Cissy Fitzgerald, Jean Hersholt and Mathilde Comont. John Ince directed. "Drusilla With a Million" is the first Gold Bond of the current season's program and has already had many first-run bookings.

Vogel Back From European Trip

States English Exhibitors are Enthused Over De Mille's "Road to Yesterday"

WILLIAM M. VOGEL, General Manager of Producers International Corporation, which handles Producers Distributing Corporation's product on the Continent, returned last week from Europe after an absence of three months during which time he visited most of the large countries in Europe.

Vogel reported that the eight British exchanges of Producers Distributing Company, Ltd., are lining up play dates at a rate equivalent to that of the older established companies.

Twelve of the first fourteen Producers' productions have now been trade shown, he said, but, owing to the advanced booking system, regular release will not start until March. In discussing the pre-release showing of Cecil B. De Mille's "The Road to Yesterday," which is to start at the Tivoli theatre, London, on January 11, Vogel stated that the trade predicts a successful run for the picture at the West End play house.

"When I arrived in Germany," said Vogel, "I found that the public there was very much interested in the improvements taking place in the theatre field within the past three or four months. Some more new first run theatre construction has been started and a number of leading old fashioned film theatres were modernized along American lines, notably the Ufa Palast, Berlin's largest motion picture theatre. Mr. Rapee is introducing American presentation methods on each program with an orchestra of seventy-five pieces and the public is readily patronizing this theatre in increased numbers and in other ways expressing its approval.

"In Czecho-Slovakia we are opening our own distribution exchange with Jan V. Musil as general manager and M. Z. Chrastil as sales manager. Up to this time Messrs. Musil and Chrastil were co-partners in Famous Films, Prague, where they also handled a number of important Pro-Dis-Co. productions. The new P. D. C., Ltd., of Prague has taken over the Famous Films exchanges.

"I arranged for the opening of our own exchange in Geneva for distribution in Switzerland. There we have appointed as manager, Joe Marius Boimond, who two years ago opened the Fox office in Switzerland.

"We are also opening our own office in Brussels to handle distribution throughout Belgium in association with Georges A. Boucksert, who for the last several years has run his own exchanges in Brussels under the name of Etabl Dumarteau. Our Belgian organization will probably bear the title of Belge Producers Distributing Corporation, S. A., and will take over the Etabl Dumarteau.

"Sweden is another territory where we are operating our own exchange. While in Stockholm, we acquired control of Film Aktiebolaget Tule, our former distributor there. Lars Bjorck is taking charge of the management and will preside over Pro-Dis-Co. distribution in all Scandinavia, Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

"In Holland we closed an extensive contract covering the distribution of our current product with Loet C. Barnstyn of the Hague.

"Outright sales of the Pro-Dis-Co releases have been made in practically each of the remaining countries of Europe, it being our preference to sell direct to native exchanges wherever any market can purchase an adequate quantity at prices that justify our recognized standard of production value.

"In retrospect, this trip proved a very busy and constructive one, as it resulted in establishing Producers International Corporation in many of the most important territories in the European market."

Van Loan to Write Originals for Universal

UNIVERSAL Pictures Corporation has just signed a contract with H. H. Van Loan, well-known screen author, to write seven original stories for the Universal stars, two for Reginald Denny, and one each for Laura La Plante, Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Hoot Gibson and Jean Hersholt.

Under the agreement Van Loan is to start immediately on a story for Reginald Denny to be titled "Wait a Minute," which will be a farce comedy detailing the adventures of a young scion of wealth who is forced to start at the bottom of his father's department store and how he wins success.

Van Loan worked in the publicity department of Universal more than ten years ago leaving to enter the original story field. He has written approximately fifty photoplays.

Record Comedy Month For Fox

Organization Expects to Establish High Sales Mark During Laugh Month

FOX Film Corporation is anticipating a comedy sales record for Laugh Month. According to reports received from branches everywhere exhibitors have adopted the all-comedy program suggested by the Fox short subjects sales department and the innovation has proven an exceptionally popular one with patrons.

Many showmen who were frankly dubious regarding the success of such a project are now said to have satisfied themselves that it really works.

Scheduled for Fox release during the last half of Laugh Month are "A Flaming Affair," an Imperial, in which Sid Smith has the role of a street car conductor, and "The Feud," one of the Van Bibber series.

The first of the East Side, West Side series released November 15th is also available for Laugh Month. It features Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy. The second of this series, "The Fighting Tailor," is scheduled for release January 18th.

In addition to the two-reelers, three feature-length comedies will be ready for showing the last week in January. "The First Year," one of the John Golden adaptations, with Matt Moore, Kathryn Perry, J. Farrell MacDonald and Margaret Livingston, will be released January 24. "A Trip to Chinatown" and "The Cowboy and the Countess" are scheduled for first showings on January 31.

Christies Have Anniversary

Organization is Celebrating Tenth Birthday as Independent Producers

CHRISTIE FILM COMPANY is not only celebrating by contributing generously to Laugh Month, but also the tenth anniversary as an independent producing organization, and the sixth anniversary of its association with Educational Film Exchanges for comedy distribution.

Although Al Christie pioneered into Hollywood in 1911, it was not until January 6, 1916, that he left the Universal Company and organized his own producing concern, taking over the studio at Sunset and Gower which the Christie Company has occupied ever since.

The Christie Company is now in the middle of its sixth year of comedy product released through Educational. It has contributed much to the development of the two-reel comedy business during that time.

The sixth year with Educational marks a program of two-reel comedy production larger than any previous year's output, since it includes ten Christie comedies featuring such stars as Neal Burns, Billy Dooley, Jack Duffy and others, and four star series with six comedies in each, these being the Bobby Vernon, Jimmie Adams and Walter Hiers series.

The latest release in each of these series are "Yes, Yes Babette," with Bobby Vernon; "Weak But Willing," with Walter Hiers; "For Sadie's Sake," with Jimmie Adams, and the two Christie comedies, "A Salty Sap," with Billy Dooley, and "Run Tin Can," with Neal Burns.

Six Added to "Paris At Midnight" Cast

Metropolitan Pictures has added six players to the cast of "Paris After Midnight," Frances Marion's screen version of the Balzac classic, "Pere Goriot." The new additions are Brandon Hurst, Jocelyn Lee, Mathilde Comont, Carrie Daumery, Jean De Briac and Fannie Yantis.

Jetta Goudal, Lionel Barrymore, Mary Brian, Edmund Burns and Emile Chautard portray the leading roles under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Five Additions Made to Phil Rosen Cast

Phil Rosen has made five additions to the cast of his first picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is as yet untitled. They are Gwen Lee, Antonio D'Algy, Julia Swayne Gordon, Marcia Mannon and Bernard Siegal. Renee Adoree and Conrad Nagel have the featured roles. The story is an original laid in France during the war and was adapted by Marion Orth and Harvey Gates.

Gotham Acquires "Money to Burn" Rights

Gotham Productions has purchased screen rights to the Reginald Wright Kaufman novel, "Money to Burn," which has been printed in several editions. It will be produced early in 1926 as a Greater Gotham Production with such stories as "The Golden Web," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, and "The Woman Who Did Not Care," by Rida Johnson Young.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair," the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Exploiting "Ancient Mariner"

Noteworthy Campaigns Developed In Pittsburgh, Toledo And Other Cities—Essays Leading Feature

A NUMBER of big exploitation campaigns for "The Ancient Mariner," among them noteworthy drives by the Temple Theatre, Toledo, and the Blackstone in Pittsburgh, appear to indicate that one of the most successful stunts for stirring general interest in this production is the essay contest run in conjunction with newspapers for school children. The fact that the Coleridge poem is included in English courses at schools makes the essay contest an especially apt exploitation device for "The Ancient Mariner."

The idea, developed by the Fox exploitation department, has been used on a large scale of operation, and a complete working plan was submitted to exponents of the company. The contest has been tied up with about a hundred newspapers so far, such cooperative drives being arranged in connection with the presentation of "The Ancient Mariner" at first run theatres.

The plan calls for the award of prizes totalling fifty dollars, divided into eight prizes, ranging from twenty-five dollars to two dollars, for essays on the topic "The Ancient Mariner and its Lesson to Humanity." In addition to the cash awards, prizes of theatre tickets have been added for essays which fall short of the money prize class. The contests have been conducted by the newspapers, with the result that theatres have received a great amount of free publicity, in the form of readers on the contest, notes about the production, photographs, and publication of the best essays. Added dignity is given the stunt by having prominent men and women of the cities and towns, act as judges of the essays.

As the picture played the Blackstone before the holidays, there was an extensive tieup for "The Ancient Mariner" with the post offices of Pittsburgh. This was arranged by having posters, of window card and one-sheet size, with appeals for "early mailing." There was a direct tieup between the picture and the appeal introducing a line to the effect that the humanitarian spirit of "The Ancient Mariner" would, were he alive today, prompt him to mail his Christmas packages early.

Large space is being given now in the Baltimore American to a Mariner Essay Contest for Baltimore schoolboys and schoolgirls. The tie-up was arranged with the Baltimore American by William M. Whitehurst, assistant to the president of the Combined Whitehurst Theatrical Interests, in connection with the showing of "The Ancient Mariner," at the Parkway Theatre during the week beginning Monday January 4. The essays requested are to be 250 words in length and the subject should be "The Ancient Mariner and its lesson to humanity." The prizes include $50 in cash and ten pairs of tickets to see the picture.

Something new in throwaways was achieved when the engagement of "The Ancient Mariner" at the Temple Theatre was heralded about Toledo, through the medium of a booklet with pages the same size as the regulation newspaper cartoon strip, and carrying cartoon illustrations of all the picture's big scenes.

The outside cover of this herald explained that the book is an "Illustrated Version of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's 'The Rime of the Ancient Mariner' as visualized in the William Fox masterpiece production of modern frivolity 'The Ancient Mariner,' with play date, etc.

School Matinee in Colorado Springs for "Phantom"

A "Deaf and Dumb" matinee was the high spot of the exploitation campaign for "The Phantom of the Opera" at the Regent Theatre in Colorado Springs.

The matinee was attended by 200 students of the famous Colorado school for deaf mutes, where "Chaney's parents attended when he was a child," and their attention was called to Chaney's hand and gesture acting. The children marched from the school to the theatre two by two, traversing the main streets of town, and attracting no small amount of attention.

All Comedy Circus Scores at Parsons, Kan.

The All Comedy Circus program, made up entirely of short features, has scored again, this time converting the Best Theatre, Parsons, Kan., to the use of the idea as a regular occasional feature in the policy of the house. The All Comedy day was staged by Manager Walter Fenney, who presented a program of Pathe short subjects.

Fenney's stunt was probably the first attempt of its kind in that territory. A wire to Pathe from Manager Fenney says: "All comedy circus a great success here, in fact, the biggest day's business we have done in months. If laughing means they liked it, they didn't miss."

A circus dodger advertised the program as "One big day for kids from 8 to 80—one day in Parsons when laughs will come faster than cinders from switch engines in the Katy yards. Be sure and get your share of laughs, not cinders."

Another paragraph says "No all-comedy show could be complete without 'Our Gang,' so here they are in their newest." The circus dodger was illustrated with three two-column cornerblock ads which are furnished free to exhibitors with all Pathe short comedies. Two of these covered Harry Langdon in "Feet of Mud" and Charley Chase in "The Caretaker's Daughter."

Prizes For Best Story Sell "The Pony Express"

A newspaper tie-up in which prizes were offered for the most interesting story of an actual experience "away back in 1860" at a meeting of Old Timers, was the means of creating a fund of good publicity for the engagement of "The Pony Express" at the New Central Theatre, Hot Springs, Ark. The stunt was finely supported by the newspaper which was induced to sponsor it.

Other items of a lively campaign in Hot Springs included a tie-up in which eight taxi cabs carried these signs in the discs of their spare tires: "The Pony Express in 1860. Now Call a Yellow Cab."

To children in the seventh and higher grades 13 prizes were awarded for 50 word essay on the old trail drivers.

As an ad in the local daily, Sidney M. Nutt, manager of the New Central, published his personal endorsement of the picture.

The revival of the pony express attracted a great crowd as it has in every city in which this stunt has been used.

"Lightnin' Bill" Feat is Duplicated by Farmer

When "Lightnin'" played at the American Theatre, Walla Walla, Washington, recently, among the advance publicity stories appearing in the local press on the engagement was the oft-repeated one of "Lightnin'" Bill driving a herd of bees across the desert in midwinter without losing a single bee. A few days after Bill's biggest whopper appeared in the Walla Walla Union, there appeared also in the same paper, and in all papers thereabouts, an account of Glen Merchant of Forks, Washington, driving a herd of fifty-eight turkeys, that he had brought thirty miles over a puncheon trail from the Huelsdunk ranch in the Hoh Valley. The gobblers were wanted for a turkey shoot and Merchant on a wager drove his birds all the way on foot, losing only two en route.

Hot Dog Stand Lobby Set for Menjou Feature

Taking a suggestion from the Coney Island scenes in "The King on Main Street," Manager D. Roscoe Faunce of the Strand, Birmingham, erected a mechanical hot dog stand in his lobby as an attractor for the picture. The display visualized Adolphe Menjou eating a hot dog, while a man in white apron looked on from behind the counter. Realism was supplied by a grill, similar to those used in rotisseries.

The effect was obtained by cutting an opening in front of chimney to represent a gate, across which were placed ornamental iron bars. An excellent fire effect was obtained by using pieces of half inch mesh screen wire, covered with strips of red paper. Two fans in base of chimney and several red lamps at bottom of wire screen, produced a very realistic fire. On a rod running across front of gate, was a canvass ham. By means of a motor attachment at upper part of chimney, this rod turned constantly, giving the effect of ham being roasted. Mechanism was so controlled as to give 20 revolutions to the minute. Red baby spot enhanced the warm glow of the fire, which attracted attention because of the exceptionally cool weather during picture's run.

Issues Standing Invitation to Poor Children

Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., through its managing director, Russell A. Bovim, has issued a standing invitation to children who are unable to pay the price of admittance, to attend the theatre during any week, without charge.

The invitation, printed in the theatre's weekly "Newsette," says: "If you know any kiddies who are so unfortunate as not to be able to afford a movie, call Loew's Regent. We will be only too happy to have these little ones as our guests at any matinee. Let us help to make the little unfortunates happy. If they are crippled we will call for them as well as take them home. * * * If you know any poor kiddies let us know, for we want them to be our guests Christmas week and any other week."

The Christmas week attraction to which the youngsters were especially invited was the Jackie Coogan film play, "Old Clothes."

'Don't Fold' Warning Stirs Interest in Serial Herald

A variation of the don't-Fold-this-card stunt was recently used by F. Raoul Cleaver, exploitation man in Universal's Detroit exchange, to start the "Ace of Spades," a new Adventure Picture, on its way at the Idle-hour Theatre in Alma, Mich. Through a tie-up with the Alma Record, 3-column ads, twelve and a half inches deep, announced a free matinee for children at four o'clock Friday. They were told that they would be the guests of their "favorite paper" if they cut out the advertisement and carried it unfolded to the theatre's box office.

One thousand and one hundred kids turned out for the first episode and five hundred came back for the second which means a smashing follow-up business for this serial.

Figures cut from stock paper used effectively as marquee decorations for the showing of Pathe's "The Freshman" at the U. C. theatre, Berkely, Calif.

Errol Feature Well Exploited

"Clothes Make the Pirate" Tied Up With Big Social Event in Pittsburgh—Other Drives

THE Charity Ball for the Harmarville Convalescent Home, held annually in Pittsburgh and one of the outstanding social events of the season, this year was allied with exploitation for a motion picture, and prospered by that fact, as did the Harry Davis' Million Dollar Grand Theatre and Rowland and Clark's Liberty Theatre, where "Clothes Make the Pirate" was the featured attraction. The Charity Ball was called "The Pirate's Ball," an arrangement due to the enterprise of Allan S. Glenn, head of the exploitation department of First National.

The event, which was held at the William Penn Hotel, was heralded by posters which made a direct tie-up between the Ball and "Clothes Make The Pirate." Owing to the prestige of the affair, these posters were on display in hotel lobbies, banks, office buildings and locations of the sort ordinarily closed to advertising of any form. Through the General Chairman of the Ball, the society pages of the newspapers carried stills of the picture, with mention of the theatres at which it was showing.

The night of the ball Rowland and Clark sent a quartette in costume to the affair to sing some of the numbers from "The Pirates of Penzance." They were billed as the "Clothes Make the Pirate" quartette, courtesy Rowland and Clark.

Pittsburgh being the home of the Pittsburgh Pirates Base Ball team was also taken advantage of, windows being fixed up by Spalding's and by Hans Wagner's Sporting Goods store, each devoting windows to stills of favorite ball players and Leon Errol in costume, captioned "Pirates of Yesterday and Today."

During its engagement in Cleveland at the Allen Theatre this Sam Rork comedy was well campaigned. A contest in which the readers were asked to finish the costume of a sketch of Leon Errol who plays the lead in "Clothes Make the Pirate"—the figure being drawn in outline with the most attractive pirate regalia filled in on him winning a prize—was published as feature story by the Plain Dealer.

The Cleveland Times ran a series of six stories offering prizes of tickets for "tongue twisters" based on the mouth filling names of the pictures' characters. Wurlitzer's music store, on one of the most prominent corners in town, turned over one of its windows to the display of an automatic projection machine showing a trailer of "Clothes Make the Pirate."

A special showing for the newsboys of Toledo under the joint auspices of the leading newspapers inaugurated the campaign of "Clothes Make the Pirate" at the Pantheon theatre.

The Toledo newsboys saw the picture at a preview especially arranged for them on Christmas morning, as the guests of the theatre and the newspapers. The newspapers reciprocated the courtesy of the theatre by liberal allotment of stories and stills in their news columns.

Liberty Ad Gives Short An Even Break With Feature

Both in newspaper ads and publicity readers the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, Wash., gave the short feature of a recent program equal prominence. The short was "Wild Beasts of Borneo," a three-reel Educational release. The picture played the same bill with the new Buster Keaton vehicle "Go West."

The Seattle Daily Times carried on the front page of its Motion Picture section a four column—page length display "ad" of which more than twenty eight column inches were devoted to a large cut on "Wild Beasts of Borneo" the largest cut of those offered for exhibitor's use in the Educational press sheet.

On the same day the Seattle Post-Intelligencer carried on page two of its Screen Section, a display "ad" measuring three columns by fifteen inches of which one-third, or fully double the space allotted the long feature, was given to "Wild Beasts of Borneo" copy. In this instance a press sheet cut was also used to advantage.

Starts Coogan Club to Exploit "Old Clothes"

A chapter of the Jackie Coogan Play Pals of America, was started in Toledo to launch a campaign for the presentation at Loew's Valentine Theatre of "Old Clothes."

The Toledo News Bee conducted the Play Pals movement by inviting all the boys and girls to see the Jackie Coogan movie. All the announcements were carried on the front page playing up the special performance on Saturday morning for the Play Pals. The free tickets were sent to children who had cut out and sent the coupon printed on the second page of the News Bee to the Chief Friend. The ticket was accompanied by a certificate of membership and a badge. More than twelve hundred children were given tickets during the run without any cost to the theatre.

Additional interest was gained by giving a Toledo fountain pen to children who were able to gain the distinction of being a Real Pal, the second order in the organization of Play Pals. To win this degree a child must do certain things to get a hundred points, which was all explained to the Play Pals in the News Bee.

At the special performance for the "kids," a letter written by Jackie Coogan for the Play Pals, and sent by air mail to the editor of the Toledo News Bee, was read to the youngsters before the showing.

'Miss Paramount' Advance for Fond du Lac Opening

The "Miss Paramount" visitor to the city, a stunt which has been used successfully in several parts of the country, figured as an important feature of the advance campaign for the opening of the new Fischer Fond du Lac theatre in Fond du Lac, Wis. The campaign, handled by Len S. Brown, manager of the house, with the assistance of E. F. Corcoran, Paramount Exploiteer, followed an ambitious program and succeeded in creating widespread publicity for the new theatre.

The nucleus of the campaign was the announcement that Miss Paramount would be in the city for the opening of the festivities. In this stunt the two local dailies gave fullest cooperation, playing front page stories every day. In most instances these stories were played under five column streamers.

More than 50 stores, banks and cafes participated in the campaign through advertising, outfitting Miss Paramount and in many other practical ways.

Another attraction was the popularity contest to select a girl to be crowned Miss Fond du Lac. This aroused interest throughout the county in which Fond du Lac is located for the contest was open to all young women of the county and scores were entered. One newspaper and the merchants cooperated in this stunt.

Express Riders Deliver Packages for Store

Emmett Sorg, manager of the Paramount theatre, Ogden, Utah, gave a new twist to the revival of the pony express as exploitation on Paramount's "The Pony Express." Three riders, during the five days of the engagement, delivered packages for the local stores.

FIRST NATIONAL'S SECRET SPECIAL

Exhibitor's Idea Exchange

According to
William Woodin

Manager of the Keystone Theatre, Towanda, Pa., rigid adherence to the motto "He profits most who serves best" has worked out admirably in his case. Woodin has built up a large following and much good will by application of methods of fair dealing and community service—a work in which he has put a lot of hard labor and much thought.

The respect and reputation he enjoys in Towanda for his efforts in behalf of the community, was recently expressed by the columnist of the Towanda Daily Review. In the "Zip Column" of that paper Bill Woodin receives a compliment that any theatre manager would be proud to have written of him. "Zip," who writes in a straightforward manner and in the slang of the day, is widely read and the prominence given to Woodin in this column added its share to the popular esteem in which he is held by the people of his city.

As an indication of what they think of Woodin in Towanda, glance at the following lines taken from the "Zip review":

"Right here in Towanda, Bradford County folks has got a movie picture place what is run and run right. Bill Woodin, the manager is a Progressive, with every letter in the word a capital. He kept at it until he got the Keystone all dolled up, like he wanted it, and then he got busy on gittin good shows. Not all of 'em, cause he couldn't do that. Nobody could, but as good as can be got, them he gits. Take a look at the big city programs and figure out how many of the "Latest" shows they is havin, is comin right along, almost at the same time, right here to Towanda."

According to
R. E. Sutton

Manager of the Strand, Provo, Utah, results exceeded expectations when he took over the responsibilities of distributing the toys which the firemen of the city, according to a regular custom, each year collect for the poor children. Formerly, Mr. Sutton, writes, "these repaired old toys were distributed by municipal organizations. This year, in order to help and incidentally for a little extra publicity, we ran a Fireman's Toy Matinee,—a toy for admission.

"The results were very satisfactory. This theatre seats 400, we had about 600 children, and received probably 1,800 toys, of every description, some worthless but the majority in very good condition.

According to
J. S. O'Connell

Managing director of the Temple theatre, Toledo, the fund of good will toward that theatre was greatly swelled by the offer he made to entertain as guests of the management every crippled boy or girl in Toledo and the inmates of institutions at performances of "The Ancient Mariner." In addition, the means he took of acquainting the people with this desire on the part of the Temple management—a letter addressed to a large mailing list, was instrumental in building up a large patronage for the engagement of the picture.

O'Connell's letter highly recommended "The Ancient Mariner" as the type of picture which deserved the support of screen patrons and one which would richly reward those who witnessed it as a work of photoplay art and entertainment. He went on to say that it was his desire to have every man, woman and child in Toledo to see the film and asked that the recipient of the letter recommend institutions whose inmates they thought should be entertained as free guests and crippled boys and girls whom they knew. The offer included the proffer of transportation, to and from the theatre, for all such children. The letter therefore, circularized prospective patrons with good propaganda for the production and as well made a humanitarian appeal which is certain to react to the benefit of the Temple theatre and its management.

W. B. Ascough

Of the Victoria Theatre, Mahanoy City, Pa., the exhibitor who lends his support to movements sponsored by local organizations, increases not only his own prestige, but advances the interests of his theatre as well. Mr. Ascough is prominent in the affairs of the Mahanoy City American Legion Post, and at a recent meeting took the platform with a prominent clergyman of the city in urging the need of a public rest room for the town. Mr. Ascough's remarks were headlined in a newspaper report of the meeting and any further publicity connected with the movement is certain to find his name associated with it.

As a special Christmas day celebration, Ascough obtained the services of 200 school children to appear in a "Jack and the Beanstalk" stage number. A feature of the celebration was the distribution of Christmas presents by a Santa Claus at the special Children's matinee given on Saturday December 19. The event was widely publicized in the newspapers. Interest in the Victoria Theatre was greatly increased through this performance, which proved a most profitable expedient for a theatre in a district which is now suffering bad business as a result of the strike of the hard coal miners.

Clyde Klinger

Manager of the Refowich Theatre, Freeland, Pa., his "free suspension admission tickets," offered in co-operation with several local merchants, provide a good way out of a bad situation caused by the strike of the hard coal miners of his district. Every Wednesday evening is "free suspension night" at the Refowich. Tickets are distributed by merchants who tie up with the theatre on the stunt, and are given to adults as well as children. The portion of the expense is borne by the merchants, who carry announcements in a co-operative ad in the local newspaper. The movement is one that will have its beneficial after effects.

According to Irving Green

Manager of the Fellsway Theatre, Medford, Mass., his bi-monthly program, sent through the mails, is proving its worth as a consistent business-getter for this neighborhood theatre. The program is gotten up in rather novel form. It is an economical method from the standpoint of printing and mailing costs.

The program, which lists the attractions for two weeks in advance, is printed in the form of a folder—about 22 inches long and 8 inches wide. The top of the folder has triangle corners to form a flap like an envelope. The sheet is folded in five sections from bottom to top, and the flap is held in place by a small paper seal. The two upper folds on the reverse side bear the lines: "Important, see inside," printed on the side for the address, and on the rear is the institutional copy, usually the regular house slogan "At the Fellsway—Always the best show in town." The programs are printed on colored stock—green, blue, pink, etc. As printed matter it is mailed under the cent and a half rate per program. A large mailing list is maintained by the Fellsway, and in each program there is a notice requesting people to leave their names and addresses at the box office of the Fellsway if they are not receiving the "Fellsway Flicker," the name which Green has given his house organ.

Lift and Give a Lift

THE ideas which your fellow exhibitors offer on this page are here to be "lifted" in toto or in principle. So help yourself freely to any advice, suggestion or stunt which you think may be useful to you.

At the same time, consider the other fellow; and give a "lift" by sending your own ideas on exploitation, good-will building, lobby decorations, newspaper ads or any other phase of showmanship, so that they may be passed on to other exhibitors through the medium of this "open house" for the free and open discussion of Exhibitor's Ideas.

Short Subjects and Serials

Tennek to Increase Short Subject Output

Tennek Film Corporation has planned a marked increase in short subjects program. With that end in view Kenneth J. Bishop, president of the concern has departed for Los Angeles. Several of the Tennek west coast units are working on the Selig lot, where a series of two-reelers are also being made with the Selig wild animals featured.

In New York City the Fatty Laymon and Charlie Dorety unit is making two-reel comedies at the Estee studio. They have just started on a new story entitled "Hard to Hold," third of their present series. Another New York unit has been organized to start on an additional set of twelve two-reel novelty comedies.

Malcolm MacGregor Signs for Serial

Nat Levine, associated with Sam Bischoff Pictures has signed Malcolm MacGregor for the latter's first serial role. He will appear in the ten episode picture entitled, "The Sky Skidder," which is being produced by Levine. The ten episodes are written around the loves and hates of a police dog. In support of MacGregor will be Louise Lorraine and Thur Fairfax. William J. Craft is directing.

Educational Makes Big Tieup

Completes Arrangements for Harmonica Playing Contests With All Theatres

WITH the increased popularity of short features, Educational Film Exchanges is doing everything possible to aid the exhibitors booking their product. Many national tieups have been effected in the past but their latest one gives promise of eclipsing all others in popularity and effectiveness.

The Educational advertising and publicity department has just completed an arrangement with M. Hohner, Inc., manufacturers of ninety-five percent of the world output of harmonicas providing for a series of harmonica playing contests, which all theatres booking Educational-Juvenile comedies can take advantage of.

Through the arrangement theatres everywhere are assured cooperation of local musical instrument dealers, schools and newspapers. Hohners are said to have outlets for their product through 250,000 retail stores.

The harmonica contest idea can be carried out on as large a scale as desired, with preliminary contests culminating in a big contest on the stage of the theatre, with street ballyhoos and a parade of the youngsters entered in the contest. All the exhibitor has to do is to notify M. Hohner, 114 East Fourteenth Street, New York City, or his nearest Educational exchange, that he is interested, and the harmonica manufacturers will send along immediately all necessary instructions, material and even worth-while prizes at absolutely no cost to the exhibitor.

Educational is distributing through all its exchanges a broadside giving contest particulars in detail and showing illustrations of the prizes from which selections may be made.

Womanhandled

(Paramount—6765 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS vivacious comedy, based on the contrast between what the West really is and what many admirers of blood-and-thunder Western pictures fondly suppose it to be, registers a laughing triumph for Richard Dix and his director, Gregory La Cava, with much credit also due the star's associate players for excellent support by all hands. One naturally sympathizes under cover of a grin with hero Bill Dana when he pushes for Texas filled with stern determination to do great deeds of daring in the traditional "wide open spaces," only to find gunplay a thing of the past, cowboys riding in flivvers, tennis courts and golf courses in view, houses equipped with modern improvements and nary a red-skin or "bad man" in sight. Bill's endeavors to fake all this stuff for his Eastern sweetheart's edification, and the complications that follow are continuous food for mirth, with a real thrill climax of stampeding cattle and a rescue of Molly to wind up matters nicely.

THEME. Western comedy. Bill Dana goes to Texas, finds country tame, fakes Wild West atmosphere to please visiting sweetheart, deception fails, but he wins her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Smooth fast action, good continuity, clever acting by principals and support.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Richard Dix's best comedy up-to-date. Feature chorus girls' visit to ranch, play up contrast between real and imaginary West.

DRAWING POWER. Sure-fire comedy hit, good for any house.

SUMMARY. Unique comedy, showing actual western ranch atmosphere as opposed to fanciful ideas of Wild West as some suppose it to be. Snappy, bright, amusing.

SYNOPSIS. Spurred by sweetheart Molly's admiration for Western heroes, Bill Dana goes to Texas. He finds the West tamed, the cowboys preferring flivvers to horses and gunplay abolished. Learning that Molly is coming, he provides fake Indians, teaches the cowboys to ride, but she sees through the phoney Bad Lands' settings. They quarrel, Molly is caught in a cattle stampede and rescued by Bill, who thus proves his courage and wins her.

Richard Dix, star of the Paramount production "Womanhandled."

Womanhandled (Paramount) PRESS NOTICE

RICHARD DIX in his latest screen success, "Womanhandled," will be the big film attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____. This is a screamingly funny comedy in which Dix plays the part of Bill Dana, who goes West hoping to become a hero of the open spaces, such as his sweetheart Molly admires. But he finds the ranch full of modern improvements, the cowboys riding in flivvers, no gunplay, everything tame. Anticipating Molly's arrival he frames a Wild West setting with phoney Indians, etc., but Molly detects the imposition.

However, as he really saves her life in a genuine cattle stampede, she accepts him after all.

CATCH LINES

A speedy story of love, laughs and ladies, a comedy of New York and the great open spaces where men are womanhandled, with Richard Dix a squire of dames whom the girls couldn't forget!

Hands Up

(Paramount—5883 Feet)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

THAT much sought after "something new under the screen sun," is again supplied by his high-hat highness, Raymond Griffith, who comes forward with a 100 percent. silly, but nevertheless laughable, concoction built especially for him by Reginald Morris. Yes, this is hokum, but the Griffith fans will like it. The plot deals with efforts of the Union and the Confederate forces to grab a gold mine discovered for Lincoln by Pinkerton. Griffith is the Southern spy who tries to get the gold for his side and his efforts to do so furnish many amusing situations. Some of the highlights include Griffith's love-making to his two future wives as his stage coach is shot full of arrow holes, and which he believes to be stings of a bee; the sequence in which he plays African golf with the Indian chief; the blowing up of the mine disclosing a richer vein of gold; the attempt of the Union soldiers to shoot Griffith, and his escape, the near hanging and the efforts of Raymond to get away with the load of gold.

THEME. Comedy. Struggle for gold mine by North and South in Civil War. Hero about to get it when the war ends, but it continues for him as he weds two girls.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Raymond Griffith and Mack Swain. Put over high hat and evening dress store window display with photos of Griffith.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any house, because it will make 'em laugh.

SUMMARY. Pure nonsense—but it's the kind your patrons like. A novel plot, many laughs, a good cast. Well mounted, fairly well directed and something different.

Ben-Hur

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—12000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AT LAST the long-looked-for "Ben Hur," whose regal magnificence, poetic touches, compelling atmosphere and marvelously executed thrill episodes testify eloquently to the rare ability of Director Fred Niblo. A stupendous spectacle! Wonderfully impressive the Nativity opening sequence, the symbolism of the guiding star, Betty Bronson as a spiritually beautiful Madonna! And how describe the crashing melodramatic surge of the great sea-fight, the galley slaves' tragedy; the furious chariot race, madly dashing steeds, hurtling human bodies, flashing steel, sweeping to a nerve-shaking climax? Perfect camera technique, uniformly fine acting by the gigantic cast, with outstanding performances by Ramon Novarro, Francis X. Bushman, Miss Bronson, May McAvoy, Carmel Myers, Nigel de Brulier, Winter Hall. The poignant romance between the heroic Hebrew youth and Esther is partially overshadowed by the film's tremendous spectacular appeal, but no doubt can exist as to its triumphant entertaining value.

THEME. A tale of the Nativity, scriptural and historical atmosphere, romance between Jewish hero and maiden, and former's victory over conspiring Roman foe.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Feature's photographic beauty, wonderful settings, superb direction and atmosphere, spectacular lure, love interest, splendid acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as one of greatest screen spectacles. Tie-up with book stores on the novel. Feature principals, sea-fight, chariot race.

DRAWING POWER. Should do big business anywhere.

SUMMARY. A picture of awe-inspiring spectacular appeal. Unsurpassed for beauty of settings, atmosphere, breathless suspense. Leaves original stage production hopelessly behind in point of thrilling detail and gorgeous coloring.

Infatuation

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

"CAESAR'S Wife," W. Somerset Maugham's play, from which this offering is adapted, may have been a success behind the footlights, but in its screen form, we have a very tame affair, in short a picture lacking punch. The plot is a rather hackneyed one. Perhaps you have heard of the girl who marries the well known busy man with the result that the young wife looks elsewhere for attentions. That's what you have here, only the locale is switched from London to Cairo. The settings are beautiful, Corinne Griffith wears some stunning gowns and the supporting cast does fairly well with the material at hand. But the picture by no means is up to the standard of Miss Griffith's recent releases. There is some drama in the scene in which the young wife confesses to her husband that she loves another and a bit more where she saves his life from an assassin's bullet. Percy Marmont is convincing as the busy diplomat, while Malcolm MacGregor is acceptable as "the other man."

THEME. Society romantic drama, young wife, neglected by husband seeks secretary's attentions, finds in the end she loves husband.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost Corinne Griffith. Put over window display with photos of star. Book tie-up. Dress lobby in Oriental style. Have prologue featuring Egyptian dancing.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of star makes this suitable for larger houses, community theatres, towns.

SUMMARY. This starring vehicle of the charming Corinne is a let down from former releases, but you have the popularity of the star with which to sell it to the public. Plot is hackneyed but picture has been well mounted.

THE CAST

Violet Bancroft.....	Corinne Griffith
Sir Arthur Little.....	Percy Marmont
Ronald Parry.....	Malcolm MacGregor
Osman Pasha.....	Warner Oland
Mrs. Pritchard.....	Martha Mattox
Lady Beatrice.....	Clarissa Selwynne
Kheive.....	Howard Davies

Infatuation (First National)

PRESS NOTICE

CORINNE GRIFFITH, one of the screen's most beautiful stars, comes to the ——— commencing in her newest production, "Infatuation," adapted from the widely read novel, "Caesar's Wife," by W. Somerset Maugham, and which in its stage form enjoyed a long run on Broadway. The locale of the story is London and Egypt and deals with the romance of a young wife, wed to the British commissioner in Cairo and who neglects her with the result that she accepts the attentions of her husband's secretary. In the end there is a reconciliation. Miss Griffith is at her best in the lead and she is given excellent support by Percy Marmont.

Soul Mates

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—6000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE fact that this film is derived from an Elinor Glyn novel naturally leads one to expect a preponderance of lurid sex appeal, but it happens that the fervid passion element is completely "out" in the present instance. Instead we are presented with a distinctly high-class comedy balanced by a few dramatic moments, English society backgrounds and a love romance wherein the heroine first thinks she loves young Lord Tancred, experiences a change of mind in that respect, marries him under compulsion with a bull-doing uncle's demand, gives hubby an awful razzing, but is finally tamed to a point where she admits she loves the chap after all. Taken on the whole it's an entertaining picture handsomely mounted, well directed and likely to prove a good box office asset. Edmund Lowe is nattily-alluring as the immaculately dressed Lord Tancred, Aileen Pringle bangs the emotional chords a bit too heavily for such a light role, but is attractive, the support is adequate and photography pleasing.

THEME. Comedy. British society atmosphere. Millionnaire forces niece to wed nobleman whom she imagines merely wants money, discovers her error, is content.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Elaborate settings, good direction. Scene where Velma first meets lover. Wedding and complications. The lively finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Aileen Pringle, Edmund Lowe, and author; don't boost as a typical Glyn yarn. Tell 'em it's a merry comedy with high society polish.

DRAWING POWER. Author's name and cast have pull. Should win in average house.

SUMMARY. English society comedy, offers amusing love story, although an Elinor Glyn tale, there is no sex stuff in evidence. Good atmosphere, fine settings, acting and direction O. K. Will please fans in general.

THE CAST

Markrute	Phillips Smalley
Velma's Brother.....	Antonio D'Algy

Tancred raises money, pays Markrute and tells Velma he wants a divorce. She realizes her mistake and they are reconciled.

Soul Mates (Metro-Goldwyn) PRESS NOTICE

CHARMING Aileen Pringle and that sterling actor, Edmund Lowe, are the leading players in the latest adaptation of an Elinor Glyn novel to reach the screen; the attraction being "Soul Mates," listed to make its initial local debut at the Theatre on _____. This is a bright, snappy comedy drama of British society life, sumptuously staged, beautifully photographed; in which the heroine first falls in love with, then repulses a nobleman, weds him under protest, and finally discovers that she loves him after all.

A picture alive with heart interest and sparkling humor, offering a brilliant supporting cast, Phillips Smalley, Edythe Chapman, and Lucien Littlefield.

CATCH LINES

She first loved, then despised, then married him. But the wedding was a mockery, for she intended to be his wife in name only, and told him so. Guess what happened to these "Soul Mates?"

The Gilded Butterfly

(Fox—6200 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD audience picture, has well sustained suspense, no small degree of heart interest, is elaborately mounted, well directed and presented by a thoroughly capable cast. Some critical souls may point out that a girl as smart as the heroine seems to be in other respects, would earlier have tumbled to the fact that her esteemed papa lived by his wits and was a sponger par excellence; also that she could have detected the designs of the debonair Mr. Converse right off the jump. But Linda just had to be that way or there wouldn't have been any story. A somewhat unusual twist is given matters by having the chap who is dogging Linda with evil intent, relent at the last and resign her to the man she loves. The heroine gets a lot of sympathy in her varied troubles, Alma Rubens looking very alluring and helpless in the role, while Bert Lytell makes a good impression as the frank young American officer. Huntly Gordon scores as the villain, who isn't so hopelessly villainous after all. Photography is O. K.

THEME. Drama, society atmosphere. Left penniless, girl is advanced money by designing suitor, goes abroad, gets broke, weds American officer.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as heart appeal drama with society backgrounds and butterfly type of heroine. Stress human interest touches. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for neighborhood theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. Has audience pull, heroine's troubles win her spectators' pity. Society atmosphere and good acting by Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell will please fan majority. Puts over some telling dramatic punches, is well directed.

THE CAST

Linda Haverhill.....	Alma Rubens
Brian Anestry.....	Bert Lytell
John Converse.....	Huntly Gordon
Jim Haverhill.....	Frank Keenan
Courtney Roth.....	Herbert Rawlinson
Mrs. Ralston.....	Vera Lewis
Mr. Ralston.....	Arthur Hoyt
Colored Maid.....	Carolynne Snowden

Author, Evelyn Campbell. Director, John Griffith Wray.

SYNOPSIS. Linda Haverhill, left penniless, is advanced money by Converse, who desires her. She goes broke, falls in love with Captain Brian Anestry of the U. S. army. Converse arouses Brian's suspicions. Linda burns her gowns to obtain insurance and is arrested. Enroute to prison with a detective, their taxi is wrecked by colliding with a patrol wagon. The detective, fatally injured, identifies a dead woman as his prisoner. Linda escapes. Converse relents. Brian and Linda are united.

Bert Lytell, appearing in "The Gilded Butterfly," a Fox production.

The Gilded Butterfly (Fox) PRESS NOTICE

"THE GILDED BUTTERFLY," a fascinating society drama, replete with heart interest and suspense, will be the main screen attraction at the _____ Theatre on _____.

Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell fill the leading roles. Miss Rubens gives a fine performance in the role of Linda, a penniless girl, who engages in a losing fight with the world after her father's death, is hounded by an unworthy suitor, but saved at the last by the love of a young American Army officer.

The supporting cast includes Huntly Gordon, Frank Keenan, Herbert Rawlinson, Vera Lewis, Carolynne Snowden and Arthur Hoyt, and other favorites.

CATCH LINES

An expose of social parasites and their methods, a loving, trustful light-hearted girl turned into a cynical grasping woman; a gripping drama of society which teaches the folly of following the crowd in life's game!

The American Venus

(Paramount—7931 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

FOLLOWING in the trail of an avalanche of publicity on the famous Atlantic City beauty tournament, comes this feature built around this annual event that glorifies the American girl. Paramount has gone the limit as far as lavish scenic investiture, gorgeous costuming and Technicolor photography is concerned. There is evidence in every scene that the money bags were turned upside down in staging this phantasmagorical review of bathing beauties and mannequins. There is a story, of course, but the least said about it the better. It is just a light, airy plot used as an excuse for introducing the various events of the beauty contest and there is little footage wasted in getting the observer to Atlantic City. Here in beautiful natural color the beauties of the nation pass in review, take part in divers parades a la bathing suit, pose in gorgeous fashions and line up for the verdict of the judges. Miss Fay Lanphier, winner of the 1925 event, is seen in a minor role, but to Esther Ralston goes the beauty honors.

THEME. Comedy melodrama. Shows efforts of small town publicity man to boost sweetheart as American Venus.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The technicolor scenes of the various events of the Atlantic City beauty pageant. The style tableaux. The auto-motorcycle race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put over local beauty contest in co-operation with newspaper and merchants. Play up Fay Lanphier, "Miss America" of 1925. Take advantage of the six national tie-ups arranged by Paramount.

DRAWING POWER. With exploitation should do business in any house.

SUMMARY. One of the novelties of the new year, has unlimited exploitation possibilities. Lavishly staged with many scenes in natural color and with much to appeal to both sexes, this one should be a box office winner.

THE CAST

Mary Gray.....	Esther Ralston
Chip Armstrong.....	Lawrence Gray
Hugo Niles.....	Ford Sterling
Miss California.....	Fay Lanphier
Miss Bayport.....	Louise Brooks
Mrs. Niles.....	Edna May Oliver
King Neptune.....	Ernest Torrence
Neptune's Son.....	Doug Fairbanks, Jr.

Author, Townsend Martin. Scenario by Frederick Stowers. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Photographed by J. Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Rebuked for attending a dance with Chip Armstrong, publicity director, Mary Gray breaks her engagement to Horace Niles. When New York artists urge towns to hold beauty contests and to send winners to Atlantic City, Chip urges Mary to enter. Niles tries to ruin Mary's chances by wiring her to return because her father is injured. She does, but Chip gets her back. They are too late, but the winner indorses Gray cream and Chip wins Mary.

The Yankee Senor

(Fox—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

TECHNICOLOR shots of a Mexican fiesta, the tying of the hero on the back of a wild horse and his rescue by Tony, and an honest-to-goodness fight between the star and three burly bandits, are the highlights of this newest Tom Mix offering. The picture, however, is a decided let-down for the star, who has a very tame role in this instance and a hackneyed plot in addition. However, Tom Mix has a large following and they may overlook the weaknesses of this vehicle as long as Tom gets an opportunity to display his horsemanship now and then and to use his fists with machine gun effectiveness in the climax. Tom is supported by a very good cast, Olive Borden being especially charming as Manuelita. Francis McDonald is an adequate heavy and Margaret Livingston does her stuff to perfection as the vamp. The natural color scheme in the fiesta sequence in which Tom and Miss Livingston as well as the others dance, is really beautiful.

THEME. A romantic drama in which an American civil engineer rids Mexico of a bandit gang and wins an estate and a senorita for himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Holdup of the railroad shack by bandits and Tony's escape after hiding the payroll. Sequence in which Tom is tied to back of a horse and given a wild ride. The rescue by Tony. Fiesta scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost Tom Mix. Put on Spanish dance prologue. Book-store window display on the novel.

DRAWING POWER. Star's popularity may bring them in at houses catering to Mix fans.

SUMMARY. Not the best thing Mix has done, but may get by because of its natural color feature, good fights and acting by Tony, the wonder horse. Plot follows the usual Mexican formula.

THE CAST

Paul Wharton.....	Tom Mix
Manuelita.....	Olive Borden
Luke Martin.....	Tom Kennedy
Juan Gutierrez.....	Francis McDonald
Flora.....	Margaret Livingston
Don Fernando.....	Alec B. Francis
Doris Mayne.....	Kathryn Hill

TOM MIX and his wonder horse, Tony, will grace the ——— screen, commencing ——— in "The Yankee Senor," a colorful story of Old Mexico which gives the star ample opportunity to put over some of his inimitable stunts, real fights and wonderful horsemanship.

An excellent supporting cast is seen, including Olive Borden, Margaret Livingston, Alec B. Francis, Tom Kennedy, Francis McDonald Kathryn Hill and others. The story moves swiftly from beginning to end. The scene in which Tom is rescued from the back of a wild horse by Tony, the fight between Tom and a trio of bandits and sequence in which Flora attempts to compromise the hero are a few of the attention-compelling moments.

Accused

(Independent Films—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE plot of this picture resembles that of a serial of the old-time brand, consisting as it does of a medley of loosely-strung but undeniably sensational episodes, with thugs, lovers, police, spurious and real fathers swinging around the underworld circle at a feverishly fast gait. The resultant complications are bewildering and the continuity is joyously tangled, but the melodramatic bombs explode furiously enough to satisfy the most ardent searchers after exciting film seances and patrons of the daily change and smaller houses will no doubt pronounce it all bully entertainment. Dorothy Drew and Charles Delaney figure in the leading roles of Helen and Steve Randall, both giving high-speed, gingery performances, with Sheldon Lewis, Miss DuPont, Spottiswood Aitken, Charles Gerrard and Eric Mayne rendering adequate support. The scene where the lovers are trapped in the flooded underground crook den puts over the big punch thrill in realistic style and the photography throughout is pleasing.

THEME. Melodrama. Cyrus Braidwood's supposed daughter finds real father is a crook, goes safely through underworld adventures, weds wealthy lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Meeting of lovers, where each imagines other is a crook. Escape from flooded underground den. Sustained fast action, melo punches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as melodrama crammed with sensational scenes, play up love romance. Feature Dorothy Drew, Sheldon Lewis, Charles Delaney.

DRAWING POWER. Not for critical audiences. O.K. for smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Melodrama with plenty of hectic action and numerous exciting complications. Has underworld atmosphere, confused plot, but shoots thrills across in slam-bang fashion. Should please fans who want highly-spiced sensational stuff.

North Star

(Associated-Exhibitors—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

STRONGHEART, canine star extraordinary, comes to the front once more with a filmplay in which he demonstrates his almost human ability as an actor. As the picture opens we see Strongheart in the role of "North Star," being honored at a banquet. The plot deals with an unscrupulous fellow who tries to drain the family coffers of the dog's master by making him believe he has killed a friend. The master, a weakling youth, flees to the wilderness, but eventually is found by the parasite. In a terrific flight, the dog comes to the rescue, attacks the villain and chases him to the edge of a steep cliff and forces him to loosen his hold on the rocks and plunge hundreds of feet to his death. The climax will register big with the children. Stuart Holmes is a convincing heavy, while Virginia Lee Corbin is attractive in the leading feminine role. Harold Austin and Ken Maynard have the other principal parts. Some good comedy is furnished by Syd Crossley and Jerry Mandi as tramps.

THEME. Melodrama. Dog causes downfall of black-mailer who makes youth believe he has murdered a friend.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The banquet in honor of North Star. The sequence in which the dog escapes when car plunges into lake. The dog's fight with the villain.

The Still Alarm

(Universal Jewel—7207 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FOR swift action, melodramatic punch and keen-edged suspense this film registers way ahead of anything yet screened in the fire-fighting line. It starts off in the days when the thunder of flying hoofs beat accompaniment to the rush of the blue-shirted brigade to the flaming scene of action, switching later to the present era, with snorting motors taking the place of prancing steeds, and showing in detail the improved apparatus now in use. Great stuff in both instances, chockful of vibrant thrills, splendidly photographed and warranted to stir up the most blasé spectator. A scene showing the trapping of the battalion chief hero and his men in a burning building and their escape along a narrow cornice, pressing flat against the wall in single file is the very acme of realism and one that nobody witnessing it is likely to forget. But the picture is a whiz all through, as strong in sentimental as it is in sensational allure. William Russell is immense in the hero role, Helene Chadwick excellent as the erring wife and the support faultless.

THEME. Melodrama of the fire brigade. Hero's wife deserts him, years later he regains her, after first thrashing and then rescuing villain from fire.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Speedy action, development of suspense, romance and melo phases. Scenes where firemen are trapped, Dick's fight with Dunn and rescue.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up as a fire brigade melodrama of the finest. Stress the breathless suspense, rescue scenes, love interest, tremendous thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house, large or small.

SUMMARY. A bully fire film. Has powerful melodramatic and sentimental appeal. Rescue scenes wonderfully well done and effective. Will please fans everywhere.

Her Big Adventure

(Kerman Films—4800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

COMEDY melodrama with society atmosphere. Its dramatic phases stretching the probability string considerably, but nicely balanced by humorous flashes that prevent the spectators from taking the whole thing too seriously, with the result that it classes as good entertainment of the program brand. Director John Ince didn't waste time or material trying to be subtle, his intention was evidently to turn out an amusing picture with mass appeal, and in this he has succeeded. You may not believe that an average Yankee girl stenographer could pose successfully as a foreign Countess at a summer hotel, but you can't help being interested in heroine Betty's masquerade just the same, or fail to be gratified when bellhop hero, Ralph, foils the jewel-hunting crooks, and the big climax gathers in all the principal characters with everything made smooth for the lovers. Herbert Rawlinson and Grace Darmond are O. K. in the leading roles, the support is excellent and photography first-class.

THEME. Society comedy drama. Hero quarrels with wealthy father, becomes bellhop, wins stenographer posing as Countess at hotel, is reconciled to dad.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Meeting of hero and heroine at summer hotel. Ralph's scrap with crooks. Comedy relief. Arrival of Count and Countess. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Frame ballyhoo with man in bell-hop uniform. Tie up with modiste stores on style show, boosting heroine's gowns. Bill as bright comedy drama, stress society atmosphere. Feature Herbert Rawlinson, Grace Darmond.

DRAWING POWER. Good card for neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Amusing comedy drama, has suspense, thrill shots, gets the laughs and holds interest throughout. Develops and maintains audience appeal.

Man Rustlin'

(F. B. O.—4666 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

BOB CUSTER has a novel role in this picture, that of a cowboy who turns reporter to please his school-teacher sweetheart and goes after news items in a peculiarly vigorous fashion, aided by a gun and fixed resolution to let nothing get by him. It's five reels of lively, amusing material, quite different from the regulation Westerner, which indeed it burlesques frequently and with entertaining effect. The comedy angle is the strongest in the story, yet thrills are not lacking and the star is given plenty of opportunities to demonstrate his scrapping abilities and cold nerve. Take it all around, "Man Rustlin'" may be said to strike a new Western note and worthy of being listed as a cracking good program attraction. There are some capital outdoor views and the photography throughout is of extremely high grade. Custer is well supported, with Florence Lee showing to advantage in the heroine role, Jules Cowles offering a clever character sketch as Jim Tucker, and fast action all the way.

THEME. Western comedy melodrama. Hero cowboy turns reporter to please girl, succeeds by digging up sensational stories, becomes syndicate writer and weds her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good direction, resulting in neat weaving together of comic and serious situations, Buck's news-getting ventures, romantic lure.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can promise as many laughs as thrills in this one, and there are plenty of both. Bill as "different" Westerner. Boost Custer's stunts.

DRAWING POWER. Should win as program attraction anywhere.

SUMMARY. An out-of-the-ordinary Westerner, especially strong in comedy line, puts over thrills, but manages to burlesque open-air adventure stuff successfully. Lots of zippy action, should please average fan.

Braveheart

(Producers Distributing Corp.—7256 Feet)

ADAPTED from the well-known stage play, "Strongheart," one of the earliest productions to glorify the college Indian, this picture looks like a genuine box office winner that will stand the test of any audience, highbrow or low. Rod La Rocque, always a finished artist, never before reached the dramatic heights to which he attains in his portrayal of the heroic Braveheart. Both makeup and acting are perfect, he fairly lives the part, alternating between moods of tenderness, stoical dignity, and the repressed native ferocity of the warrior which leaps forth tigerishly in the scenes where he fights and subdues his redskin traducer. Lillian Rich as Dorothy, and Jean Acker as the Indian maid to whom the self-sacrificing Braveheart turns for comfort when he realizes that his love for the white girl is impossible, are excellent and better support could not be desired. The feature never loses interest, the action is swift, direction splendid, and charming photographic effects are achieved.

THEME. Melodrama dealing with love affair between white girl and college-bred Indian, who makes sacrifice for her sake, but later weds one of his own race.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The well maintained suspense and human interest appeal. Football sequence. War dances. Braveheart's battle with Ki-yote. Fine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Rod La Rocque, mention other notable cast names. Bill as melodrama, with tremendous heart appeal and thrilling situations.

DRAWING POWER. Has unfailing audience appeal, should suit all theatres.

SUMMARY. Combines melodramatic punch with great emotional and sentimental urge. Spectacular and colorful, splendidly acted and directed. Photography of first-class grade. Will please all sorts and conditions of movie-goers.

THE Mission and Pearl theatres, well-known suburban amusement houses of Denver, have been taken over by the Midwest Theatres Company. Such was the announcement made by Max Schubach, president of the Midwest organization. The new owners will take possession of the new additions to their chain on January 1st, 1926. The Mission theatre is considered one of the finest of Denver's suburban theatres. It was sold to the Midwest Theatres Company by Fred P. Brown, who for the past year has been the manager of both the Mission and the Pearl. It is located at 1435 South Pearl in the heart of a densely populated section of the city. Up to this time the only theatre controlled by the Midwest company on the south side is the Cameron on Santa Fe Boulevard.

Seth Perkins, assistant to Dave Bushon, District Manager for Metro-Goldwyn, was a visitor in Denver last week-end. He arrived in Denver from Salt Lake City and left for the southern territory.

Another new theatre for Denver was opened by Frank Culp, an old-timer in the theatre business here. He has named it the Granada and opened it Christmas day in the afternoon. It is located at 2925 West 25th Avenue, over on the North Side. It has a capacity of 600 seats and is furnished with new equipment throughout. A real suburban theatre and an improvement to the neighborhood in which it is located.

G. E. Rosenwald, the new Universal manager, spent Christmas with his family in Kansas City, returning to Denver the following Monday. He expects his family to move to Denver shortly to take up their residence here.

W. E. "Bill" Matthews, local manager for Film Booking Offices, went to San Francisco to spend the holidays with his family.

Dave Frazer, assistant district manager for Producers, spent the holidays in Denver with his family, who reside here. Les Weir, district manager for Producers, is expected in Denver sometime in January.

Robert J. Garland, local Metro-Goldwyn manager, announces two new salesmen for this territory. Sam Henley, formerly of Salt Lake City, has been retained to cover the New Mexico territory. Jack Byrne has arrived from New York City to represent Metro in the northern part of the Denver territory.

Ralph Brashier, traveling auditor for Famous Players and Thomas Kilfoil, special representative for Famous spent a few days in Denver visiting with Hugh Braly, local manager for Paramount.

The annual meeting for salesmen, managers, assistant managers, and bookers, was held by the Denver Film Board of Trade on the afternoon and evening of December 28th. The old timers who attended former meetings pronounced Monday's sessions the best ever. The entire afternoon was devoted to discussions pertaining to the selling of motion pictures, operations of the Film Board of Trade, Arbitration Board and various other activities with which a salesman should be familiar. In the evening a banquet was held for the employees. Chief John Healy of the Denver Fire Department was the guest of honor. His address dwelt largely on fire hazards in the industry.

Buffalo

A HAPPY throng crowded the Capitol theatre, Newark, N. Y., the newest link in the Schine chain, for the opening show, which started at midnight, December 31. The house, which has a seating capacity of 1300, was built at a cost of $150,000. The theatre replaces the opera house, which was destroyed by fire last April. George A. Bouchard, formerly organist at the old Mark-Strand, Shea's Hippodrome and the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, played the opening program on the $20,000 organ.

An audience which filled the Academy theatre in lower Main street, Buffalo, the other evening, hardly batted an eyelash, when smoke, filtering in thru the south side of the house, plus the screech of fire apparatus sirens outside, told of a fire nearby. Had it not been for the action of Al Sherry, many of the crowd might have seen the picture and departed without even learning that the blaze, starting from a gasoline explosion in the barber shop next door, had afforded firemen a brief but stubborn fight. Sherry, however, was taking no chances, and his prompt action nipped any possibility of a panic. Al told the folk that there was no danger, but that those who cared to leave would find plenty of exits. A few went out, but most of them remained for the show.

Eighty-four guests attended the banquet and Christmas party held by employees of the new Palace theatre in Lockport in the Del Ray restaurant at 11:30 P. M. on Christmas day in the Lock City. "Bobby" Demming, organist, and chairman of the arrangement committee, acting as toastmaster. A party followed on the Palace stage, including the distribution of presents and dancing. Mayor-elect Frank J. Moyer was the guest of honor. George T. Cruzen, manager of the house, was congratulated for the manner in which he has put the Palace on the map.

Michael Shea, president of the new Shea Operating company, which organization now is associated with Publix in the operation of Shea Buffalo houses, gave his annual Christmas party for employees on the stage of the Court street house immediately after the final performance on New Year's eve. Negotiations in the Publix deal forced postponement of the event this year until New Year's instead of Christmas day.

After being dark for several weeks, the Lyceum theatre, Ithaca, re-opened Tuesday, January 5. The booth equipment has been modernized and it is planned to run pictures throughout the winter season.

The annual Movie Ball held Monday evening, January 4 in the Hotel Statler by the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo was a huge success. Everybody connected with local exchanges and theatre circles was there with bells on. A fine program of entertainment was staged and dancing continued until sunrise. Much credit is due the members of the committee, all of whom worked hard to put the ball over.

J. B. Whitney, former Metro-Goldwyn salesman out of the Buffalo office, and recently associated with the Schine corporation as manager of theatres in Lockport and Medina, N. Y., has been appointed manager of the Olympic theatre, the Buffalo link in the Schine chain, succeeding Ray S. Averill, who, it is reported is to become associated with the Comberford interests in Pennsylvania.

George Ross, formerly cashier at the Fox exchange, has succeeded Louis Schindler as cashier at Pathe. Mr. Schindler now is booker in the Pathe office.

F. A. Maxwell, a newcomer in the exchange end of the business, has been engaged as a salesman for Associated Exhibitors, in the Buffalo territory. E. J. Smith, general sales manager, was in town this week for a brief conference with John Sitterly, local representative.

Bob Murphy, recently with Universal, and one of the best known exchange men in this neck of the woods, said au revoir to Film Row last week when he left "U" to assume his new duties as manager of Shea's North Park.

Harry T. Dixon, F. B. O. manager got a swell Christmas present. The office force sent him a golf bag, clubs, etc., in fact everything but golf stockings. But the funny part of it is that Harry doesn't play golf. However, he will try and learn now, he declares. • Fore!

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

How The 'Charleston' Set New Box Office Records

Amateur Contest Cost Metropolitan In Atlanta $500 to Stage

THE capacity of the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., was strained to the utmost while the management groaned for lack of room to take care of the steady tide of patronage drawn by the lure of the Charleston contest staged in that house last week in conjunction with the Atlanta Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American.

The first appearance of the young contenders at the Monday matinee found the house packed to the last seat with fully two hundred standing in the lobby and foyer and another hundred craning their necks from points of vantage on the mezzanine. Monday night brought not only capacity but turn-away business; Tuesday surpassed Monday; and Wednesday outstripped Tuesday's record.

But that was only because an extra performance of the dance contest was sandwiched into the program. Originally planned for two performances a day—one at the second afternoon show and another at the second night show—the attendance reached such proportions that the only solution was an extra performance. That third performance was instituted Wednesday, coming at the first evening show—7:30. And it solved the problem that had the management in a fever Tuesday night when the house refused to clear at nine o'clock and insisted on remaining until the Charleston amateurs performed.

After Wednesday the schedule was changed to three appearances a day for the contestants. And each performance brought an entirely new group of Charleston exponents. Therein lies the secret of its pulling power. Each entrant has a group of boosters—family, relatives and friends—and the aforesaid boosters turn out en masse to applaud their favorite.

It is the only time on record when any special attraction has overshadowed the picture at this theatre.

Three weeks of advance publicity that held front page space in the Atlanta Georgian every day. After the first preliminary winner in the "qualifying round" was announced Monday afternoon the Georgian began to feature the daily winners—photographing first, second and third prize contestants. More front page space than a presidential candidate could appropriate!

What is particularly interesting to showmen is the fact that this Charleston Contest was an inexpensive feature. The entire cost ran within $500.00, which included the salary of Miss Olive Hill, premiere danseuse who spent ten weeks at the Howard Theatre in Atlanta during the summer staging ballets, and Miss Hill's four assistants in her special dance number.

These girls form a miniature chorus. It likewise included the performance prizes of $5.00 each to the winner in each "qualifying round"—a total of three five dollar prizes a day; six tickets to the Metropolitan go to the second in line, with four tickets to the winner of third place.

The grand winner in the Saturday night final received a silver loving cup from the Atlanta Georgian and will be given a week's engagement at the Metropolitan Theater to exploit her version of the Charleston professionally. The second grand prize was $25.00 in gold; the third a season ticket to the theatre.

The act opened with Miss Hill's singing of "Charleston Back to Charleston"; the Hill Girls strutting in after the opening measures, and continuing until the song concluded. Then the quintet went directly into the most approved interpretation of this dance and snaps it out to a spirited finish. Miss Hill then presented the contestants, one by one, each entrant making her bid by her dance.

Each contestant had the stage to herself (or himself, for many boys participated) while on. When the last entrant finished the entire group was brought on and each in turn was led forward by Miss Hill while the audience declared the measure of its approval by applause. Not only first place, but second and third places were determined by the applause of the audience.

With the Charleston craze at its height the stunt which caught the fancy of youthful amateur dancers, was backed by the Atlanta Georgian with a clever and telling sponsorship, ably engineered by Managing Editor W. M. Baskervill, who was equally ably abetted by Manager Willard Patterson on behalf of the Metropolitan Theatre, the event scored a tremendous success and set a new record for special attractions at the Metropolitan.

The contest proved not only the biggest attraction ever presented at the Metropolitan but it easily surpassed in the amount of popular interest it created anything of the kind ever attempted in Atlanta.

MISSING AN OPPORTUNITY

LATELY we have become convinced that many exhibitors do not know their audiences as well as they should. If they did, certain practices that are now prevalent—more among the smaller town and neighborhood houses—would be done away with.

For example, in the town where we live which, with its immediately surrounding territory, has a population of approximately 5,000, are two theatres. One is new and up-to-date, while the other house is the original theatre recently remodelled. It appears that many of the prospective patrons of these theatres who previously were not in the habit of attending local shows decided that these better theatres warranted their patronage.

Quite incidentally, we have gathered a consensus of opinion regarding these theatres from several of the local town's folks who were in a way of becoming steady customers for these better theatres. It was practically unanimously unfavorable.

There seemed to be definite reasons for their attitude, but among them was not included the quality of pictures, for in the main those shown were above the average. The complaints were of a comparing nature—that is, the projection, music and added attractions, such as vaudeville, stacked unfavorably against these same features of theatres in a somewhat larger town six miles away.

We pose as no judge of the various classes of vaudeville and their relative value, though we question whether some vaudeville is not a detriment in itself. But we do maintain that poorly played musical accompaniments along with projection that tends to ruin the entertaining value of pictures, are inexcusable. Perhaps some picture fans become so engrossed in the pictures themselves that they will stand anything—but those fans are now in the minority.

So these two houses in our community have missed a cue. They were in a position to attract a larger and better class of patronage but the management miscalculated the importance of good projection and music.

Cost and Method of Operating A News Reel Camera

Many Theatres Capitalizing Box-Office Value of "Locals"

THERE appears to be a growing tendency on the part of exhibitors to produce their own local news pictures for incorporation into the topical reels of world events supplied by the big news reel companies. The box office value of such local views is put at a high figure by many theatres. The State theatre, Uniontown, Pa., for example has three cameras and maintains a complete laboratory equipment, for the production of the State News, one of the regularly featured offerings in that house.

Earl L. Crabb, now managing director of the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston, and that city's finest playhouse and one of the finest cinema palaces in the world, was one of the pioneers in making local news pictures when he operated theatres in Syracuse and Utica, N. Y. In the latter city his theatre was a six hundred seat house, charged ten cents admission, and yet included its own news views in the topical reel each week. An instance is related of a 500 seat theatre in a town of about 5000 population, which showed to packed houses for three days running, matinee and 2 evening performances, views of a local event. The capacity business was credited to the local views because the exhibitor considered his feature far below the standard of his usual feature offerings.

IN considering the box office potentialities of local news views and the possibilities of making such pictures as a regular attraction for his house, the question which will arise in the mind of the exhibitor is—"How, what expense, and what revenue?" The first question is readily answered. There are a number of cameras on the market which are made for news and topical work. Some of the better known ones are the DeBrie, Universal, Akeley, Newman Sinclair, Williamson. These range in price from about $500 to $3000 each. The price of a motion picture camera is fixed by the production costs and the profit taken by the manufacturer. Small production and high profits means a camera costing thousands, but huge scale production and small profits makes the lower selling price. For this reason, price alone is no criterion of quality.

How then may the exhibitor choose his camera?

The camera must have a good intermittent. The Geneva movement common in projectors is the least desirable movement for a camera. The intermittent movement should be of the harmonic cam type such as is used by Bell & Howell, Pathe, Mitchell, Universal and others. This is the most important point to be observed. This movement gives the most satisfactory screen quality. The camera should be compact. It should have outside magazines with the spring belt take-up which is simple, positive and always visible. The lens should of course be a good, sharp cutting cine anastigmat. The camera should have a capacity of at least 200 feet of standard gauge film.

Herbert C. McKay, of the New York Institute of Photography, operating a new low-cost camera soon to be introduced on the market.

These features are usually found on only the best cameras. Recently a camera known as the Institute Standard was introduced by a large school of photography in New York city.

This model is one of several which are being developed for the use of the exhibitor in making local reels and as well for the "free lance" camera man who makes pictures of sensational events with a hope of selling them to the large news reel companies. The machine incorporates the features which are essential to work of this kind, and is made to sell at a price which will bring it within the range of the consumers for whom it is designed. It has the harmonic intermittent cam movement, a capacity of 200 feet of standard gauge film, outside magazines, spring belt take-up and is built to carry the accessories necessary for "trick" work.

THE cameras which are suitable for this work range in price from one hundred and ninety dollars for the Institute Standard to some $2500 for the Akeley. (All prices are for camera, lens, tripod and case). The other topical cameras range in price from $500 to $1500. Any of these cameras will make film of good quality. The difference in price is a question of production methods, profits, refinements and accessories. The film will cost approximately 4½ to 5 cents per foot for negative stock. Total film, and laboratory charges will run approximately 10 to 12 cents per foot for one print. This includes both negative and positive film and all laboratory charges. An average of $115 to $135 per full reel will cover most news reels including titles.

One reel should mean from three to fifteen full houses. Figure your own profits. If you can arrange a local circuit, say county wide, or even embracing five or six counties, you can get one camera, one cameraman, and make each reel play to the whole string. These reels by forcing can be made to play thirty houses. Thus after getting the starting equipment a thirty house string can get a daily news reel service at a film cost of less than $5 per reel.

The next question is the difficulties involved. The first thing to be learned is cranking. Either the exhibitor or the chief operator of any theatre will find that a few moments practice will enable him to crank the camera in a passable manner. It must be remembered that the local film can fall down hard in quality, but it will get by if at all screenable. Cranking and exposure is about all there is to straight work. The exposure is regulated by the size of the lens stop. This is regulated by turning a collar which has eight stops in the usual cine lens. Due to the photographic properties of the film used, these eight stops will enable the photographer to secure the correct exposure under any lighting conditions. The proper stop to use is indicated by any of the better grade exposure meters for sale by all dealers.

THE camera is focused either by a scale upon the lens jacket or by visual means. Until the camera operator becomes familiar with the visual focussing arrangement, it is better to set the focus by scale.

It is not unusual for the beginner to have his first 200 foot roll of film quite good enough for projection, with the exception of the rough ends and the waste

Working parts of new model camera with intermittent movement of harmonic cam type and outside magazines, one of several new styles of camera being developed for the use of theatres and free-lance camera men.

How to Make Movies of Local Events

which occurs in even the best professional work.

As for the events which form good subjects. Any exhibitor who uses news reels will know this. It is only a question of adapting the national idea to a local area.

In the camera, the most important parts are: the intermittent; the shutter; the lens and the magazines. In operating the camera there are but a few points to be observed. The camera must be kept level. It must be mounted upon a tripod which will hold it absolutely rigid without any movement of any kind, this will give a steady picture upon the screen; the crank must be turned with a smooth uniform movement or the movement will be jerky and the exposure irregular. Finally the proper lens opening must be used to properly expose the film at the normal shutter speed used.

The first two points are easily observed. Cranking is a matter of practice, while there are several excellent little devices upon the market which will indicate the proper exposure to be given any subject under any conditions which permit photography.

THE actual making of the film is a simple matter when a good camera has been secured. There are a few points which will help, but which are not really vital. In the first place at the end of each scene have a boy hold up a slate bearing your name, the theatre name and the scene number. Then when about two feet of this has been taken, open the camera door and cut a generous notch from the edge of the film.

When the film has been exposed, the magazine must be taken into the dark room before the film is removed. Here the film is removed from the magazine, wrapped in the original black paper and placed in the film can. The lid of the can is put on and the adhesive tape wrapped around it before the can is taken into the light. The film is now ready for development.

In case a rush positive print is desired, it is possible to do your own finishing with portable equipment which may be kept in any convenient closet. These small tank printers are very good, and with care can be made to turn out first class work. With such outfits, prints can be shown within three to five hours after the picture is taken. However, when there is no rush, it is, perhaps, best to send the film to the commercial laboratory for both titles and finishing.

Publix Presentations At Capitol in Detroit

JOHN H. KUNSKY this week announced that his Capitol Theatre, Detroit, Mich., as one unit in a national chain, will present the special features staged by John Murray Anderson, noted revue producer of New York, for Publix Theatres Corporation.

The policy will be inaugurated at the Capitol with the showing of Anderson's "The Melting Pot," which played at the Rivoli, New York, last week and initiated the new regime now in force at that theatre.

G.B. Odum Praises

"Theatre Management"

SINCE its inauguration in the December 12th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, this department has received the warmest praise from exhibitors everywhere. Theatre Management, however, is particularly proud of the commendation which has been extended to it by G. B. Odum, manager of the Majestic Theatre of Hornell, N. Y., and a veteran exhibitor. Of this department Mr. Odum, in a letter dated January 1, 1926, says:

"It just so happened that as the Bells rang in the New Year I was reading your Theatre Management department and was impressed with the progress of your paper in its helpfulness. Each and every manager has an individuality and your intermixing of ideas on theatre management should be of vast help to many."

As a showman of wide experience, Mr. Odum has many definite and well tested ideas on theatre management, and this department takes pride in announcing the publication in an early issue of an article setting forth his opinions on Lobby Displays—the first of a group of articles in which he and other exhibitors will discuss various phases of theatre management.

Buy Site for Auto Park for Malden Theatres

With an eye to the future congestion about their theatres, Ramsdell Brothers of the Orpheum Theatre, Malden, Mass., have purchased a large tract of land between their new theatre now under construction, at the head of Dartmouth street and Mountain avenue, as a parking space for autos for their patrons. This tract will hold between 200 and 250 autos. Both the Orpheum and the new Middlesex Theatres are located in a densely settled business section and the new parking space will be easily available from both theatres. The walls are up to the first floor on the new Middlesex Theatre and work is being pushed forward rapidly to enclose the playhouse before heavy snow sets in. It is expected to have the theatre ready for opening late in the Spring.

Dawe to Manage the Empire Theatre in Bridgeport

Peter Dawe, former proprietor of Dawe's Theatre on State street, Bridgeport, Conn., will manage the Empire Theatre, that city, under its recently changed policy of substituting screen production in place of a stock company. Mr. Dawe has been identified for years with several of the leading motion picture houses in that city and has been prominent in the industry throughout the southern New England field.

TO ENLARGE STAGE OF MARK STRAND

Presentations To Be More Elaborate

The stage of the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., is to be enlarged and improved to permit more elaborate presentations, according to an announcement last week by Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the house.

Plans have been drawn which will effect many changes. These plans call for the remodeling of the entire stage which now takes in the orchestra stage and the presentation stage. The latter is to be made larger so that it may accommodate presentations twice the size of those given in the past. The orchestra stage is to be improved upon in many respects and additional facilities for the most approved and up-to-date type of lighting equipment are to be installed. P. Dodd Ackermann, well known scenic designer, is drawing up the plans for the new arrangement.

Pantomime Prologue For "His People" at Duchess

The Duchess Theatre, Cleveland, started Monday, January 4th, with an indefinite run of "His People." Prices for the engagement have been set at 50c and $1.10. Special music has been provided to score the picture and an elaborate prologue has been arranged. This prologue consists of scenes taken from the picture. Several scenes have been lifted from the picture and have been produced in pantomime. No word is spoken. The characters are dressed exactly as they are in the picture. The atmosphere is created so that there is almost no transition from the prologue to the picture. The Duchess has been the home of Yiddish drama heretofore.

Regent at Rochester to Add Feature Stage Act

A. L. Morris of Regent Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., launched a new policy for that house after eleven years of motion pictures only, on December 27. The Regent now presents a feature act with the film feature and short subjects. Stage changes were necessary to offer the proper facilities for the acts. An entire new setting has been designed for the stage. Prices in the balcony and orchestra at the evening performances have been boosted five cents.

Sees Further Advance In Presentations This Year

A STILL further advancement in the caliber of presentations offered at first run picture theatres during 1926 is seen by Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America as one of the important developments of the industry this year.

Artists of international reputation are gradually being weaned away from the legitimate and concert stages into the folds of the motion picture, he points out. This was especially noticeable during 1925 and Mr. Mastbaum believes that the number entering motion pictures for the first time in the capacity of entertainers will be trebled during the current year.

Saxe's Retlaw, Fond du Lac, Wis. Holds Premiere

One of the most brilliant up-state theatre openings in the history of Wisconsin was celebrated at Fond du Lac, Saturday, when Saxe's beautiful new Retlaw Theater was formally opened to the public. Never before was such a lavish opening bill presented in any city of similar size in the state. The presentation was engineered by Ed. J. Weisfeldt, production manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theater at Milwaukee, assisted by members of his staff. A "big time" overture was rendered by the eighteen piece orchestra conducted by Rudolph Kopp, also of the Wisconsin Theater. In addition to the Saxe executive staff, the audience on the opening night included such well known personalities of Wisconsin film circles as Max Stahl, manager of the Milwaukee branch of Educational; Sam Shurman, Milwaukee manager for Metro-Goldwyn; George Levine, director of Universal's theater operating activities in the Northwest territory; George Smith, manager for Paramount; Sam Abrams, F. B. O. branch manager; Ed. Weisner, First National sales manager in Wisconsin; Art Schmitz of F. B. O.; Max Weisner, general manager of the Badger Theaters, Inc.; and others of equal prominence. The new Retlaw Theater was erected for the Saxe circuit by Walter Schroeder, hotel magnate of Milwaukee. It is a 1,200 seat house, designed by Rapp & Rapp, architects, and represents one of their best efforts in the field of smaller theaters. "Happy" Meiniger, one time manager of the Merrill Theater at Milwaukee, is house manager of the new addition to the Saxe chain.

Novogrod Plans Playhouse for Westerly, R. I.

Westerly, R. I., is to have another new theatre, according to assurance given yesterday by David Novogrod, proprietor of the Central and Lyric theatres of Pawcatuck. The show house is to be erected on the site at 43 High street purchased by Mr. Novogrod last February. The property now includes the former home of Dr. J. Howard Morgan, which up to recently was occupied by the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The new structure will be of Colonial design, have a seating capacity of 1,400, and will house two stores on the ground floor and four smaller stores on the second floor, according to Mr. Novogrod.

Plans for the removal of the Morgan property have been completed and the new theatre, it is reported, will be erected and ready for occupancy by next fall.

A syndicate of theatre owners of which Mr. Novogrod is a member, controlling a circuit of 81 show houses, has sponsored the project.

The Metropolitan Wrecking Company of New Haven has been engaged to start within a short time the work of tearing down the Morgan house preparatory to beginning the erection of the theatre.

Robson's Rialto, Albion, N. Y. Opened Dec. 2nd.

The Rialto, Albion's new motion picture theatre, one of the finest in any town of its size in western New York, was opened on the evening of December 2. William H. Robson, the owner and manager, personally supervised the erection of the building, which is on the site of the former home of Sheret Post, American Legion. The Rialto is fireproof with a modern ventilating system and large fire escape doors on each side of the auditorium on the ground floor. The mezzanine seats 70 and wicker chairs are used here. These may be reserved in advance. Two new Powers projection machines have been installed in the booth. The Main street front contains three stores in front of the theatre.

Frank Houston To Build At Omaha, Neb.

Construction is about to begin on the new Minne Lusa theatre which will be opened in the northern suburb of Omaha about March 1. Frank W. Houston, who recently sold the Lyric theatre at Tekamah, Nebr., is the owner. Mr. Houston has been a theatre man for sixteen years, eight of them in Indiana.

The new theatre will seat 600, will have all latest conveniences and equipment, and will have a large pipe organ. George L. Fischer is the architect.

Buffalo, N. Y. Has Two New Theatre Openings

Niagara Falls' newest picture theatre, the Falls, which replaces the old Eugenia, has opened at East Falls street and Portage road. The new theatre has a seating capacity of 1,250. There is a spacious ground floor, a large balcony and a roomy mezzanine floor. The building is 60 by 114 feet. The stage is 52 by 20 feet. The equipment throughout is thoroughly modern. The seats are unusually comfortable and the rows rather farther apart than in the average theatre, thus adding to the comfort of patrons. There is a woman's rest room on the mezzanine floor and another on the main floor. A comfortable smoking room for men is located in the basement. The interior decorations are not yet complete. The theatre will be closed this summer for the completion of this work. The present plain and simple decorations then will give way to an elaborate decorative scheme. There is a large orchestra pit. The building has eleven exits. The Ohio fan ventilating system is used. The exterior of the building is yellow brick and white stone. Above the attractive marquee is a large electric sign. The theatre is owned and will be operated by Sam Trapasso and company. Mr. Trapasso and Frank De Fozio will be active in its management. Albert Elia, 1703 Whitney avenue, was the architect and builder. Motion pictures and vaudeville will be the policy. Sam Battaglia is conductor of the five piece orchestra.

George Biehler announces that his handsome new motion picture theatre will open in Hamburg, N. Y., on the evening of Thursday, January 14. Mr. Biehler has spent much time and taken great care to assure this thriving western New York town one of the most attractive and cosy theatres of its size in the state and his efforts have been successful. When the house opens patrons are due for some very pleasant surprises. Mr. Biehler now is busy lining up the biggest attractions obtainable for the entertainment of Hamburg folk. Mr. Biehler has been operating the Palace theatre in Hamburg for many years and his new theatre is really an appreciation of the excellent patronage of residents over a long period.

The Design of Theatre Projection Rooms

J. H. Kurlander, Edison Lamp Works

IF this article had been written four or five years ago, it would have been essentially one of criticism—not altogether of the constructive sort. Coming as it does at this time, it must be tempered with mildness and strike merely a cautionary note.

A motion picture theatre consists primarily of three things; an auditorium, a screen and a projection room. All other equipment, however necessary and useful, can be considered as being merely accessory to these three things. From the standpoint of presenting a show, the projection room or "booth" as it is sometimes inelegantly referred to, is undoubtedly of the greatest importance. The auditorium, however elaborate, is merely a comfortable viewing place for the patrons. The screen is only a medium for rendering the picture visible to the assemblage and serves as a register for the skill of the projectionist when presenting the show.

The projection room, however, is equivalent to the back stage area of the legitimate theatre with its various "props" and equipment for putting the show across. Lack of equipment or poor design will unfailingly reveal itself in the form of reduced box office receipts. In the formative years of the "Picture Parlor," the "booth" consisted merely of a cloth covered structure housing the lone projector, which spilled the film on the floor or into a waste paper basket. Considerations of safety and efficiency made necessary marked changes in such practices by progressive stages, and recent years have witnessed a decided change of attitude toward projection room design on the part of both architects and exhibitors. That the lesson has not been fully learned, however, is evidenced by the fact that here and there projection rooms are encountered which all too plainly point to either gross ignorance or gross negligence on the part of the architect. The blame for such blunders rests squarely upon his shoulders.

At first thought it would appear as though most mistakes would occur most frequently in the smaller theatres, designed by men having only limited experience in this field. This is far from being the case, since only recently one of Washington's largest and newest theatres experienced difficulty when the architects unwittingly attempted to project the picture to the screen through several large crystal chandeliers! Meeting no success along these lines and being un-

How Many Freaks for 1926

A RECENT issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS carried the promise that 1926 would see another record volume of theatre construction in this country. A survey of this field, made by one of the nation's leading architectural magazines, revealed that no fewer than 1645 new theatres are projected for the present year.

We cannot help but wonder how many of these theatres, when completed, will present freaks in projection room design, and so, with the hope of preventing, if possible, some of the more pronounced blunders in this important item of theatre construction, we are reprinting an article which originally appeared in a special theatre number of "Architectural Forum" and which aptly describes some of the salient features of projection room design.

Incidentally, this article also carries an argument against the use of extremely long projection distances which seem, more and more, to be becoming the vogue. Such long projection distances have proved to be one of the principal obstacles to the standardization of screen brightness in the theatres of the country.

able to move the chandeliers without destroying the symmetry of the interior, the services of a projection engineer were obtained, with the result that a periscopic arrangement was used to shunt the projector beams down and around the offending luminaries! The periscope, by the way, consisted of two large plane mirrors tilted at such an angle as to deflect the beams sufficiently to clear the obstructions. Needless to say such an arrangement is at best a makeshift, and the projection in this theatre will never give complete satisfaction.

It is sometimes possible to avoid such an expensive solution by lowering the projectors, where sufficient clearance under the obstruction can be obtained. This was done in a large new high school building in a Long Island town about one hour's ride from New York. Here the architects tried in vain to shoot the light beam through a 20-inch concrete ceiling beam near the "booth." Since chipping out the beam would obviously weaken the structure, it was decided to saw off the projector's legs which would give the required clearance. The fact that the projectors were so low as to force the projectionist to assume a camel-like posture beside them evidently received no consideration, and in the minds of most of the persons concerned, it deserved none. The light was on the screen—what more could one reasonably ask?

Going from one extreme to the other a certain theatre in Orange, N. J., was recently renovated, and new trappings, organ, fixtures and projection room were included on the program. By some freak of plan, the portholes on the front wall of the projection room were misplaced, with the result that standard projectors could not be used. Special long legs were required to raise the projectors level with the port holes. The lamp-houses were then on a level with one's head and since the projectionist would obviously be required to possess a rubber neck if things were left this way, a concession was made by constructing a platform 18 inches high beside each projector. And so it goes with careless architects.

Projection Room Location

The first thing to do when designing a projection room is to choose its location. By this is meant not so much its location at the rear of the theatre, but rather its location with regard to the entire auditorium. Motion picture theatres today fall into these three separate and well defined classes:

1. Combination vaudeville and picture houses possessing two or more balconies each.
2. Main floor theatres, usually of small size possessing no balconies.
3. Large theatres possessing but one balcony each.

In Class 2 theatres the projection room is placed at the rear and the requirements are fairly simple. Class 1 theatres do not offer much leeway in the choice of a location, since the picture is more or less incidental to the program. The principal consideration here is to place the projection room where it will require the removal of as few seats as possible. In Class 3 theatres, however, there are two locations from which a selection can be made. One is obviously at the rear of the auditorium, using a plan such as is now common practice, and the other is at the front and center of the balcony. The latter location is much to be preferred for a number of good reasons. In the first place the tendency in this class of theatre is to go to extreme depths (200 to 300 Feet) which make the projection of satisfactory pictures quite a problem when the projectors are located at the rear of the auditorium.

The light intensity in the projector beam, contrary to recently held popular opinion, varies inversely as the square of the "throw" or projection distance. Hence on extremely long "throws," such as those just mentioned, it becomes necessary to use the high-intensity arc. The high-intensity arc is more expensive both in first cost and maintenance than the other forms of projection devices. It was only the recent commercial manufacture of fused quartz which solved the condenser breakage problem of this outfit. At such long projection distances it is practically impossible for the projectionist to determine with the naked eye whether the picture is in focus on the screen.

With the projection room located in the central front part of the balcony, however, the projection problems become relatively simple. Less expensive and more efficient types of projection systems can be used. It is often possible to use the special incandescent motion picture lamp, where conditions are favorable, thus securing the benefit of maximum efficiency at lowest cost. The conditions in this case approach those of the ordinary theatre of medium capacity, and consequently are satisfactorily handled.

Avoid Heavy Projection Angles

Aside from the distance of the projection room from the screen the most favorable location is that on a level with, and exactly on the center line of the screen. It is not often possible to meet this condition except in the case of Class 2 theatres, so that some projection angle is generally unavoidable.

The old vaudeville houses, later equipped for motion picture projection, are the worst offenders in this respect. With the projectors located up in "nigger heaven" to use the parlance of the streets, the projection angle has often become so great that intolerable distortion of the picture has resulted. An excellent, or rather bad example of this is in a large vaudeville house in Newark, N. J., where it becomes positively annoying to watch the pictures. The effect of a heavy projection angle is easily understood. Since the projector beam is of a diverging wedge shape it will be seen that the top of the beam, striking the screen first, will be narrower than the bottom of the beam which travels farther, so to speak. The result is a "Keystone effect." This naturally distorts the picture, and a screen actor under such conditions would have a small head and enormous feet. The Society of Motion Picture Engineers recommends that the projection angle should not exceed 12 degrees, in order to insure satisfactory projection.

Aside from the distortion of screen objects, which occurs when the projection angle is excessive, it is also impossible to focus all parts of the picture simultaneously on the screen, since the projection lens can only focus one plane at a time. Hence if the center of the picture is "in focus" the top and bottom screen areas will be "out of focus." Focussing any one particular area is therefore accomplished at the sacrifice of definition in the remaining areas.

Unique House of 350 Seats Built on Plot 19 ft. by 90 ft.

ON December 15th, one of the most novel motion picture theatres probably that has yet built on the Pacific Coast opened its doors to the public at Santa Cruz, Calif.

The Cameo, a 350 seat band box of a theatre, was conceived, designed and built under the personal supervision of J. A. Harvey, Jr. Harvey has original ideas and does things differently. As he has said, "allotted but 19x90 ft. by a cruel landlord," he has put into his unique little theatre all the features that are the latest and up-to-the-minute devices in the big theatre palaces.

For the comfort, convenience and hygienic safety of his patrons, Harvey has caused to be installed, a smoking section in his auditorium; a woman's "primp room," having all the powder puff boxes, electrical curling irons and toilet facilities that would be found in a modern beauty shop; a "cry room" for fretting babies; a four-way ventilation system to carry the smoke away so that the air will be kept constantly pure and fresh. Electric heat is used throughout the house. A special organ was constructed to fit the miniature requirements of the building.

Harvey's policy will be 10 and 20 cents admission prices, first run picture product, a dollar's worth of show and courtesy for a dime.

The Cameo marks the third theatre in Santa Cruz. The Santa Cruz of the Greenfield circuit and the Unique operated by Frank McCauley.

The resort strength of Santa Cruz and its rapidly growing population no doubt will satisfactorily support the three theatres and everybody will be happy. The character, contract and policies of the competing houses are so widely different that confliction will not obtain.

Harvey was formerly in the motion picture theatre business in Vacaville and Dixon. Later he remodeled an empty building in Merced into a theatre and finally sold to the T. & D. Enterprises, who conducted the Merced theatre.

Warner's Egyptian Theatre, Seattle, Wash., Holds Successful Opening

Warner's Egyptian Theatre, reputed to be the finest neighborhood playhouse in the Pacific Northwest, opened its doors to the public of Seattle on Christmas Day, 1925, under management of Leonard K. Brin, Northwest representative of the Warner Brothers Company. The house is located at Fourteenth Avenue Northeast and Forty-Fifth, in the heart of the University district, and is within easy reach of all principle residential and business districts of the city. It has a seating capacity of approximately 1,400 including lower floor and balcony, and represents an investment of close to $500,000.

The new house is Egyptian style throughout. The exterior is an adaptation of the Egyptian temples, and is finished in a mat glaze terra cotta. A ticket booth in typical Egyptian style is located near the center of the lobby, and a large marquee, with changeable letters on all three sides, extends to the street line. A mammoth electric sign surmounts the front of the building. Small stores occupy the remaining portion of the building, extending its entire length on Fourteenth Avenue. Huge electrically lighted tripods, with a steam effect, surmount the corners of the theatre on the roof.

The interior of the auditorium is designed as an open court, entrance to which is gained through a long foyer handsomely furnished with chairs and settees of Egyptian design. The auditorium is enclosed by masonry walls, with twinkling stars above. The painting and decorations are of extreme beauty, and are truly authentic in Egyptian design. A winged sun, over the stage, is a symbol of the Egyptian deity watching and caring for life on earth, and huge columns on either side of the auditorium and proscenium are replicas of the pillars at the entrance to the temple of Karnak.

A full stage, the only one in any picture house in the city of Seattle, is provided for stage productions of any type. A beautiful velvet traveler curtain extends over the entire length of the stage, and complete equipment, including a handsome cloth of gold curtain, is included in the stage accoutrements. Flood lights from either side of the stage furnish the lighting for presentations, and flood and footlights of newest design offer additional lighting facilities. Stage lights are on a double control from both the projectionist's booth and the stage itself.

Luxury is the keynote of all the furnishings, from the luxurious rugs throughout the entire house to the draperies and curtains of the stage. Entering the foyer, the beauty of the rich burnt-orange hangings bordered with blue-patterned silk, is at once strikingly apparent. Orange-tan rugs are used throughout the house. The upholstery adheres to the same idea of Egyptian designs, the same hangings being used in the balcony loge section, rest rooms, smoking rooms and ladies' parlors, all located on the mezzanine floor. A smoking room is provided, enclosed in glass and equipped with latest atmosphere machines, and a typical "crying room" for babies is also provided on the same glass-enclosed plan.

The projectionist's booth is located at the rear of the mezzanine, and is reported to be practically the replica of the modern booth of the Piccadilly Theatre in New York, now known as Warner's Theatre. Two new Simplex projectors, rewind table, spotlights, curtain and light control, and house lighting system are contained in the booth.

The B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle and Portland are responsible for the equipping and furnishings of the house.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Bluebeard's Seven Wives"—First National Strand, New York.

Times: "This picture is a good natured, wholesome and humorous travesty on life in the motion picture world. The audience forgot all about the biting wind outside in the constant merriment over this picture. It is a most engaging effort, which is so humorous that one does not want to turn one's head for an instant for fear of missing a single laugh, which mirth is helped along by witty captions."

Morning World: "A bright, laughable and sophisticated comedy. A large crowd at the Strand yesterday clapped its hands and bellowed over the depiction of various episodes of studio business and threw itself into gales of merriment."

Herald-Tribune: "It's a merry tale from start to finish. This is the best thing Ben Lyon has ever done. Lois Wilson is delightful and Sam Hardy is irresistible. Al Santell is a great director and the titles are perfect."

Morning Telegraph: "Excellent satire runs like a gold thread through the story. The spirit of 'Bluebeard's Seven Wives' is one of happy-go-lucky burlesque and will afford audiences many a hearty chuckle and satisfying guffaw."

Daily Mirror: "'Bluebeard's Seven Wives,' at the Strand this week, is a merry travesty on the inside workings of the movies, and unreels amid chuckles, laughs and shrieks from hilarious audiences. It is expertly titled and neatly directed by Al Santell. It's crackjack entertainment, shooting laughs from beginning to end with the rapidity of a machine gun in action."

American: "We were very much amused by 'Bluebeard's Seven Wives.' Ben Lyon is very entertaining, as are Lois Wilson and Sam Hardy."

Daily News: "'Bluebeard's Seven Wives' is a novel and thoroughly enjoyable thing to watch."

Evening Post: "The moving picture industry is thoroughly and hilariously burlesqued at the Strand this week in 'Bluebeard's Seven Wives.' Mr. Lyon seems entirely at home in comedy of this sort, Lois Wilson is pleasant and Sam Hardy plays Gindenheim with considerable gusto. Alfred Santell has made the most of his opportunities in this picture."

Evening Telegram: "'Bluebeard's Seven Wives' will enjoy plenty of popularity for it is calculated to tickle the fancy of every movie mad male."

Evening Graphic: "This picture is a knockout! Last night's audience fairly rocked with laughter. Ben Lyon does the best work of his career. His is a perfect characterization. 'Bluebeard's Seven Wives' is a corking good story. The sub-titles are clever, the cast more than capable, and the direction by Al Santell excellent. Don't let this picture go by without seeing it."

Mae Tineé picks the new screen idol

WILLIAM BOYD

Mae Tinee in the "Chicago Tribune"---says:

"If this picture doesn't 'make' William Boyd, so far as the movies are concerned, I miss my guess. It shows him up as having just about everything that goes to insure the popularity of the male screen idol. Good looks, bonhomie, pep, humor, appeal, the winsomest smile that ever won a woman's heart, and a clean-cut, two-fisted manliness sure to put him over with the men—all these things are his, AND he can act! "I ask you—is that filling the bill?"

Gentlemen:

Knowing you to be very much interested in how all F.B.O. pictures go over at my house, believe it will interest you to know that Tom Tyler and his gang again broke my Saturday records. You will recall that I did the best Saturday business to date when I played "Let's Go Gallagher" and the kids (or grown-ups too for that matter) did not forget what a wonderful picture he made so they all come back again to see "The Wyoming Wildcat" and believe me they sure ate it up as it is sure fire and contains plenty of comedy, hard-riding and several good scraps to say nothing of the big climax where Tom and his horse plunge into the river from a high cliff to rescue the heroine. Little Frankie Darro sure pleases the kids as he is a very finished little performer and as I previously stated I hope F.B.O. keeps him in the cast.

Yours sincerely,
Royal Theatre.

Wall Street

A MAN said to me, the other day: "I can see what's going to happen to this industry. Wall Street has come in; and, now, Wall Street will run it. They'll play checkers with the various concerns, move them around to suit themselves, and their own objectives, etc."

And this talk is quite common these days within the business.

Well, let us see.

To begin with, Wall Street is one of the least understood institutions on the face of the earth. Wall Street has always been more maligned than maligning. So has the industry of motion pictures. The two should have charity for each other.

Wall Street, let us explain for those who may not know, is made up of two classes of firms. There are brokerage houses who buy and sell securities on order of their clients and for a commission. Then there are investment bankers who underwrite financial structures and merchandize the securities to the public.

It is only with the latter class of firms that this industry is concerned. When we speak of "Wall Street" in connection with this industry we refer to, and only to, these underwriters and merchandizers of securities.

And to get a true perspective of them we must view these merchandizers of stocks and bonds just as we regard the wholesalers of cotton, wheat, sugar, manufactured articles—or films. That's just what they are, security wholesalers—and that's where their profit is.

When we say that once they are in the business they will want to stay in it and run it, we are pretty far from the truth and the facts. When Wall Street launches a financial structure there is a brief period of banker control. That is natural. But once the bonds and stocks are distributed—sold and placed in other hands, the bankers are anxious to pass on to something else. That, we repeat, is their business. That is where their profits are. The business then goes into the hands of trained experts, executives who represent the owners, the industry and the public. It would be too much, much too much, to expect bankers to run a varied lot of businesses and run them well.

If the underwriting is not successful and the securities don't move from the bankers' shelves, they will naturally remain in control till the securities do sell; and they may attempt mergers, or reorganizations to this end. Again, if a banking firm is successful in one underwriting it may go on to other underwritings within that industry. The experience acquired equips them to be further successful. But in no event do they want to get in an industry and stay in it and be of it. That isn't their business. In fact, the last thing in the world they do want is to get caught by an enterprise and have to stay and learn all about it and go to work in it while their own and lucrative business—the one they are trained for—suffers in consequence.

So there won't be any Wall Street control in this business, nor any more Wall Street interference than Wall Street can possibly avoid. Thousands and thousands of concerns in this country have passed through their period of underwriting and gone back into their own executives' hands. Today they are scot-free from banker control. When they need additional capital they get it from their own stockholders.

And so it will be in this business—with the strong and successful concerns. It is only the weak and needy that get an overdose of Wall Street.

W. A. Johnston

OUR congratulations to Bob Welsh, Oscar Price, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, "The Skyrocket" and the Leviathan for the very successful premiere last week of the former picture on the latter ship. We don't hesitate to say that it was about the best of all the remarkable premieres in this business.

And we might also remark that few pictures have ever been handled throughout as cleverly. If anyone ever doubts that exploitation is half the battle, let them remember "The Skyrocket." We make the prediction that it will go down in history.

If one of the big companies releasing upwards of fifty pictures a year could exploit all of them as "The Skyrocket" has been handled, there wouldn't be much question about the success of most of them. But then, it does take concentration and concentration takes time. And not every picture has exploitation material.

By the way, the advertising didn't do the Leviathan any harm, either. It was a mighty good job all around, and mighty well done.

THAT was a remarkable speech which D. W. Griffith made to the A. M. P. A. the other day. He stated his intention of retiring in two years to a quiet place on Chesapeake Bay, where, surrounded by friends, books and peace, he would be far from the storm and stress of picture production.

A certain philosophical irony ran through his remarks. He pictured himself as being worth millions—but only in his imagination, and asked his listeners to pray that his dream would be realized.

Speaking of his work as a pioneer, he pointed out that he had made a determined effort to give the public ideas on the screen. In "Intolerance," for example. He thought, perhaps, he had tried to crowd too much into one production. At any rate, he said, it was only last September that he had finished paying what the picture had cost him personally.

AN EDITOR

Nevertheless, Mr. Griffith may, and should, take comfort in the fact that upon "Intolerance," which the public would not have in a large way at the box-office, rests much of the fame that always will be associated with his name.

Then he went on to speak of the tremendous power of the motion picture. He summed this up in a very striking manner by saying: "I believe no nation can now be great unless it has a great motion picture industry." The chancelleries of Europe are finding that out; have found it out, some of them, within very recent days.

The picture industry in America is great—there can be no question about that; great, especially in the sense used by Mr. Griffith—in bringing to all peoples the American commercial message—American customs and clothes and machinery and products with direct and vital bearing on world trade.

Certainly, Mr. Griffith himself has had a big part in bringing the American motion picture to its present commanding position—through the additions he has made to its technique; the great number of players he trained; the pictures he has created; and, particularly, the big shove forward given the whole business of picture-making and exhibition by "The Birth of A Nation."

FIRST NATIONAL comes forward with its announcement of pictures for the next six months January to June, this year, and comprising twenty-six features and two specials.

Of these, the highlights, looked at from the showman's angle, seem to us to be about like this: "Men of Steel" and "The Viennese Medley," quite different, of course, in theme and locale, but both promising to be unusually interesting and "big" from the audience viewpoint—one the epic of steel and the other a powerful theme, too, centering about the post-war havoc in Vienna.

Also, "Kiki," starring Norma Talmadge—this should prove perhaps her strongest role. At any rate, it is eagerly awaited, as all her pictures are. High up on the schedule should be placed Colleen Moore in "Irene" and "Miss Nobody," while Constance Talmadge essays another scintillating Hans Kraely role in "Silky Ann."

Corinne Griffith is represented by "Mlle. Modiste," from the famous comic opera by Herbert and Blossom, and "Ashes," the latter affording her a strong dramatic role.

Four first rate comedy features of unusual promise are likewise included: Leon Errol in "The Lunatic at Large," Harry Langdon in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp!" and Johnny Hines in "Rainbow Riley" and "The Brown Derby."

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

Richard Barthelmess has two in the list, both of which would seem to be well worth waiting for, "Just Suppose" and "The Kid From Montana," the latter presenting him in an altogether new role.

Milton Sills, in addition to "Men of Steel," will be seen in "His Partner's Wife," another of the many Liberty stories to reach the screen.

Some strong box-office titles are listed among the all-star group. Earl Hudson is scheduled to do "Too Much Money" and "The Savage." Robert T. Kane is to make "The Reckless Lady" and "The Dancer of Paris." June Mathis is producing "The Far Cry" and "The Second Chance." Sam Rork and Marion Fairfax contribute "The Desert Healer." Sawyer and Lubin are represented by "The Girl From Montmartre." Edwin Carewe has "Twentieth Century Unlimited" and "Pals First." M. C. Levee with "Mollasses," E. M. Asher with "Good Luck," and Louis B. Mayer and John M. Stahl with "Memory Lane" round out the list.

It is a showman's group of pictures, abounding in saleable titles, brilliantly studded with stars and featured players of tried and tested box-office and appeal, and it is, as well, a balanced group of pictures which should satisfy all without surfeiting patrons with any particular type of production.

Something deserves to be said, too, of the insert itself which announces the First National January to June group. It is a complete departure, in appearance and make-up, from previous First National announcements, and vividly reflects the showmanship inherent in the productions. C. F. Chandler and "Bob" Dexter should receive many words of praise on this insert—neither should the art department be ignored in handing out the compliments.

This year is going to be a race for good pictures—great pictures—and if this announcement is any criterion First National should be well up front in the race.

LOUISE DRESSER, it will be recalled, won first rank for the best individual performance by an actress during 1925 in the poll of leading photograph critics, recently conducted by MOTION PICTURE NEWS. This was for her work in "The Goose Woman."

Miss Dresser has written us a letter of appreciation, which is as charming as she is herself. We quote it:

"A great many fine and wonderful things have come my way during the twenty-five years I have spent in the theatre, but nothing has surprised or pleased me more than when I read in your Christmas issue that 'The Goose Woman' had been so highly thought of by so many splendid critics. I wish I might convey to each one of them through you how truly grateful I am, how thoroughly I appreciate the great tribute they have paid me.

"I have been in pictures such a little while—just three years, to be exact—they are still a great mystery to me, but I am trying to find my niche in them the same as I did in the theatre.

With my kindest thoughts to your organization, my heartfelt thanks to all concerned."

THERE have been indications, in recent years, of the stability of the motion picture industry but none has impressed us quite so much as Pathe's announcement that twenty-seven per cent of its employees have been with the company five years or more.

There are approximately 1600 employees; of these 434 are on the five-years-or-more list; 353 have from five to nine years to their credit; 64 from ten to fourteen years; and 17 have fifteen years or more continuous service with Pathe.

Long service with a single concern shows a very high morale in the organization. The Pathe situation is decidedly unusual and quite the reverse of the customary condition, as regards changes in personnel, in this industry.

It is indicative of stability of a very definite sort, and reflects credit on the whole film world.

SELLING pictures with pictures! A sound principle of motion picture advertising—and the means employed by Universal to carry to exhibitors their message of a forthcoming Dimitri Buchowetzki production, "The Midnight Sun." There is nothing new about using a number of stills in an advertisement but the way a first page and three spreads were used in this instance, certainly deserves a mention. In the lay-outs are over fifty scenes of this picture with attractive, snappy captions which are unusually descriptive. One other reason as to why we praise this form of advertising is due to the fact that in the past few months a number of exhibitors have written in to MOTION PICTURE NEWS on this very same subject. "Give us more stills of new pictures so we can tell what they're all about," they say—and we take this occasion to compliment the advertising department for giving them just what they want.

FOX gave us an opportunity to preview "The First Year," and in addition to what our review may say, we cheerfully go on record as to its wide audience appeal and to the multitude of laughs in this first rate, well made comedy. Every girl and woman in this country is looking forward to, or backward on, or down upon the first year of matrimony, and they'll want to see this well advertised picture and drag the men folks along. It will please them all. Matt Moore is at his best and Frank Borzage does a creditable piece of direction based upon Frances Marion's script.

Speaking Editorially

FLORIDA is proving to be quite a mecca for film folk, as the theatre situation in the boom State is a very live topic. William Fox and James R. Grainger have departed for Miami, and it is reported a Fox theatre chain is in contemplation. Harold B. Franklin, of Famous Players, also went to Florida this week, and it would not be surprising to hear of some important developments soon.

BOOKING combines, proposed and actual, come to the fore again this week. There is a movement in St. Louis to get the independent houses together in a combination, though the plan is still in a formative stage. In Southwest Washington and Oregon a company has been formed which seeks the booking and buying union of all the smaller theatres in that region. New York City exhibitors are discussing a booking pool, according to reports.

ELSEWHERE in this issue are detailed descriptions of Laugh Month Campaigns put on by exhibitors, among them R. F. Woodhull, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; and Roy Tillson, manager of the Fuller Theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich. They merit careful reading; and should prove added incentives to other exhibitors who have not yet joined in the campaign.

THE DENVER POST, in a recent issue, devoted a liberal amount of space to an attack on the proposed Federal Censorship Bill, introduced by Congressman Swope. There is a strong appeal to the public to protest to their representatives in Washington—a plan that should be followed, not only by the public, but by exhibitors everywhere.

HIGHLIGHTS in the production news of the week show carefully considered plans for pictures of value. Joseph M. Schenck announced that Norma Talmadge and Ronald Colman will appear in an elaborate production of "The Garden of Allah;" Norman Trevor, well-known stage figure, has been signed by F.P.-L.; Jimmy Cruze came back from Europe, where he did preliminary work for "Old Ironsides," one of Paramount's future historical specials, the other being "The Rough Riders." John Barrymore, whose "Sea Beast" for Warners came into view on Broadway this week, having completed "Don Juan," will start work shortly in Saba-tini's "Tavern Knight;" and there are others of equal importance planned or in the making.

It is, of course, imperative that quality on the screen keep pace with exhibition quality. The bigger and more pretentious the theatre the more necessary it is that the main attraction—the picture—be equally as good—or even better. In no other way can the motion picture's hold upon the public be fully maintained.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Hope Hampton, screen star, displaying one of the gowns which she wears in "Colorful Fashions from Paris," done in color, which Educational is releasing.

Irene Butler, three and one-half years old, of New York City, winner of the first prize in the Child Movie Star contest conducted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A piquant portrait of Edna Marian, Century comedienne, selected by the Wampus as one of its latest roster of most promising Baby Stars.

A RISING YOUNG MAN

FRED THOMSON, F. B. O. Western star, is rising so rapidly in the film firmament and has been meeting with such favor on the part of exhibitors and the public that his future productions are to be made on a greatly increased scale, according to advices from J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O. in charge of production, now in Los Angeles. No expense is to be spared in making each picture starring Fred Thomson along with his famous horse, Silver King, better and bigger.

Under the supervision of Milton Gardner, production manager for Thomson, a corps of writers is at work fashioning future stories of unusual merit and novel treatment. Thomson himself takes a deep personal interest in this end of production, and insists on suitable showman ship angles in each story.

Thomson has an unusual record as an athlete, having been all-around world's champion for three different years. Silver King, too, is remarkably popular. Where most of the movie horses are mustangs, Thomson's steed is a thoroughbred Irish hunter, insured for $100,000 by his master.

"PAN" DUBS GOTHAMITES RUBES

ALEXANDER PANTAGES, head of Pantages circuit, is reported to have remarked the other day in Minneapolis: "The real showmen are west of Chicago. New York's exhibitors are 'rubes.' I've been a dumbell all my life for not going into the East instead of fighting the long jump in the West."

He announced at the same time that he was about to enter Manhattan. The Pantages circuit, while primarily vaudeville, features pictures prominently.

RIESENFELD HONORED

UPON the eve of his retirement as managing director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, New York City, Hugo Riesenfeld was presented by the employees of the three houses with a bronze bust of himself, executed by Emil Fuchs, the sculptor, as an earnest of their esteem and affection for him. Many of the employees had been with him during all the ten years of his regime. He was deeply affected by the tribute, and the occasion was a memorable one.

A FOX LAUGH MONTH SCHEDULE

AN unusual bit of co-operation with the spirit of Laugh Month comes to light this week with the announcement that Fox Films has readjusted production and release schedules to permit of showing three of its most important productions, all with a comedy angle, during this month. The three are "The First Year," "A Trip to Chinatown" and "The Cowboy and the Countess."

SIX LITTLE ASTERISKS

FAIRLY generous use was made this week of the asterisk stamp by the National Board of Review. The recommended productions include "The Sea Beast," starring John Barrymore, "The Great Love," "The Yankee Senor," Tom Mix, "Mike," with Sally O'Neill, Pathe Review No. 3 and "Time Flies," a Lupino Lane comedy.

John C. Flinn, the energetic vice-president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, all set for a clean sweep in 1926.

One of the newest and fairest of the Educational leading ladies is Helen Foster, who will do her bit during Laugh month in Tuxedo comedies.

This is one of the most charming camera studies we have seen recently of Pola Negri, and was taken during the filming of "A Woman of the World" (Paramount).

Artists, historians and archaeologists have tried for years to decide what the arms of the Venus de Milo were doing before they were broken off. Esther Ralston, who has the title role of "The American Venus" (Paramount) shows Larry Gray, the male lead, her idea of the classic lady's pose.

J LLOYD AS AN EVANGELIST

JUDGING from the advance reports on "For Heaven's Sake," his first comedy for Paramount, Harold Lloyd has struck out once more along an altogether new vein. In this picture he combines a very human, worth while theme—that happiness is to be found in helping others—with his usual sure-fire comedy situations. He becomes interested in a mission in the slums, and becomes a go-getter of the evangelist fraternity, going out and bringing in the converts by force, if necessary. Jobyna Ralston is again his leading lady, with Sam Taylor directing and the reliable Lloyd staff around him.

H LITTLE COLONEL'S ANNIVERSARY

HENRY B. WALTHALL, who has just finished in "Three Faces East," has just celebrated his twelfth screen anniversary. During that time his pictures have shown all over the globe, in great theatres and in lowly. As the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation," he was generally credited with the most sympathetic piece of acting ever seen on the screen, but Renaud Hoffman, who will produce "The Unknown Soldier," claims that in this production he will have an even finer role in popular appeal.

George O'Brien leaves the Indians and miners on his set to come over to pay homage to Frank Borzage, acknowledged "Squash King of the Hollywood Athletic Club," aided by Earle Foxe, who is playing under Borzage's direction in "Wages for Wives" (Fox).

W TWO-THIRTY-THREE CLUB ACTIVE

WITH newly elected officers, a total membership of 1,265 of the most representative film men in Hollywood, and plans for a holding company to erect a 12-story $1,500,000 building of unusual nature, the Two-Thirty-Three club enters on its sixteenth month in healthy shape.

The officers for the year of 1926 will be: President, Edwards Davis (re-elected); Vice Presidents, Frank Lloyd, John McCormick and Wallace Beery; Corresponding Secretary, Bryant Washburn; Recording Secretary, Raymond McKee (re-elected); Executive Clerk, Fred Douglas; Treasurer, Samuel Kress (re-elected); Board of Directors, George Sargent, Chairman; John Ince, Perry Vekroff, James W. Horne, Lewis W. Gill, George Fawcett, Edward V. Rowland, John E. Elliott, David H. Thompson, Louis Physioc, Joseph Goldsmith, Jr., and John LeRoy Johnston. The Membership Committee is Winifred North, Lewis W. Gill, Mitchell Lewis, Herbert Prior, William H. Turner, David H. Thompson. During the year the Hilarity Degree will be given by a committee headed by Harry O. Dull, Charles Stevens, George Marshall, Paul Hurst and Scotty Beal.

On Christmas Day the club presented President Edwards Davis with a Chrysler coupe and appropriated $1,000 for the purpose of bringing Christmas cheer to various members and to inmates of public institutions.

Among prominent film men initiated recently into the club are: Douglas Fairbanks, Monte Blue, Edwin Carewe, Walter Long and Del Lord.

J A MILLION DOLLAR SMILE

JUST how much is a smile worth? To Mrs. Douglas MacLean, wife of the Paramount comedy star, his smile is now potentially worth $250,000 under the terms of a novel Christmas gift which she received from him. Through a Los Angeles insurance broker, MacLean recently applied for a policy protecting himself to the extent of a quarter million against illness or accident which might terminate his screen career, with his wife as beneficiary.

A clause in the policy provides that any injury or illness which prevents the comedian from smiling the smile that audiences know so well is to be considered sufficient grounds for a settlement. A photograph of the MacLean smile in its present state of preservation is to be filed with the policy.

Violinists' fingers, dancers' legs, and such professional assets have been insured on numerous occasions, and Mr. Ziegfeld once took out policies to protect himself against his leading show girls marrying, but this is declared to be the first instance in which a definite value has been placed on anything so intangible as a smile.

M GEORGIA

MORE than a little human interest attaches to the announcement that Georgia Hale has been placed under long-term contract by Paramount. Little more than a year ago, Georgia was an unknown extra girl; bathing beauty now and then; hanging on precariously in the hazardous task of struggling for film fame.

Then came "The Salvation Hunters," the 'successful failure' that brought her fame and a position as Chaplin's leading woman, after utter ruin seemed in sight when the public refused to grow enthusiastic over the picture. Realizing that comedies could be no more than a stepping stone for this gifted miss, Chaplin released her from her contract when Paramount beckoned. Now a suitable vehicle is being prepared for her there—and we may hope that genuine achievement and its rewards may come to the girl so deftly and fittingly "subtitled" in "The Gold Rush" at various points as just "Georgia."

O TO AID TONSIL HOSPITAL

ON Wednesday evening, January 20th, at 9 o'clock, a special performance of "Just Suppose" will be given at the Plaza Hotel ballroom for the benefit of the Babies Ward of the Tonsil Hospital. A supper dance and cabaret will follow. Personal appearances will be made by Richard Barthelmess, the star, and his leading lady, Lois Moran.

Government Seeks to Re-open Famous Players Hearing

Correction of Errors in Record is Desired By Govt.

IN tacit acknowledgment that the refusal of the examiner in the Famous Players-Lasky case to permit the admission of relative evidence would constitute a prejudicial error on which the court of appeals would remand the case to the Federal Trade Commission for rehearing, counsel for the commission on January 7 made an earnest argument for the reopening of the case in order that such testimony might be admitted and also that information regarding the acquisition of theatre interests by Famous Players since September 1, 1924, the date arbitrarily set by the examiner as the limit of the testimony to be admitted, might be brought into the record.

Failure by an examiner to admit relevant testimony is a reversible error, it developed during the argument, as is also any attempt to limit the dates to which evidence can apply. Failure by the commission, therefore, to have all material facts in the record and to permit the introduction of evidence applying to any date up to the conclusion of the trial, might result in the courts throwing the case back to the commission.

Reopening of the case is opposed by Famous Players, the commission was told, because the respondents feel that, on the basis of the record even as it now stands, the commission must absolve them of the charges made. Furthermore, it was declared, the case so far has cost the respondents $200,000, exclusive of counsel's fees, has spread over a number of years, and to reopen it would mean much additional expense and still more time before a conclusion of the proceedings.

Argument on the motion to reopen was made by A. F. Busick, assistant chief counsel of the commission. He declared that it was proposed to insert in the record information as to the theatres in which the respondents have acquired interests since September 1, 1924, and as an inducement to the respondents to consent to the reopening he offered them the privilege of introducing similar information regarding the theatre-owning activities of their competitors, which information, barred by the examiner, has been held consistently by the respondents to be relevant to the case and constituting one of the prejudicial errors of which undoubtedly they would take advantage should the case be carried to the courts.

Busick declared that Famous Players acquired very few houses during the taking of testimony but that, after the close of the hearings, they acquired a substantial number of theatres including, he said, the Gordon chain of 38 in New England which also had a 50 per cent interest in the New Hampshire company owning 40 houses, giving Famous Players more than 100 New England theatres, and also that it was reported they had or would acquire the Balaban and Katz interests in "something like 500 theatres."

"We were under investigation at least two years before the case began to be tried," Robert T. Swaine, counsel for Famous Players, pointed out to the commission in opposing the reopening. "The trial of the case began nearly three years ago. It seems to use that we are entitled to a decision of this case upon the record as it stands, before we are asked to make another trip all around the country to find the literally hundreds of witnesses for whose production we went to a great expense and who are now scattered to the four winds."

More than $400,000,000 worth of theatres have been built since 1924, he declared, and asked "Can it be that the commission would take the position that all the rest of the industry should be growing at that great rate and that this respondent, admittedly the leader of the industry, should have to stand still in the construction of new and fine modern theaters?"

Swaine laid before the commission a stipulation showing all of the information regarding theatre ownership which the counsel seeks and asked that it be used, after checking up, in lieu of new testimony. This statistical abstract, he said, shows that Famous Players have acquired interests in 107 houses since September 1, 1924, while competitors have acquired 562, including 114 by Universal, 162 by Fox, 132 by First National, 128 by De Mille, 16 by Warner Vitagraph and 10 by Loew-Metro.

Much exaggeration has accompanied the case, Swaine commented, even to the argument of the counsel for the commission. Instead of 78 theatres being involved in the New England deal, there were actually 54, he said; instead of Balaban and Katz having 500 houses, they had nearer five, and, as a matter of concrete fact, "Famous Players has no interest in that concern and that concern has no stock in Famous Players, the truth being that Balaban and Katz have inaugurated a method of presentation which has proven very successful and, Famous Players desiring to try out the same method, had given Balaban and Katz a management contract under which they manage certain Famous Players theatres.

Discussing the evidence barred out by the examiner, Swaine declared that while the respondents' counsel made 175 objections which were overruled, the commission's counsel made 2,871 which were sustained,

Jannings Signed by Famous for Three Years

EMIL JANNINGS, famous German stage and screen star, has been signed by Famous Players-Lasky to a three-year contract, according to a cablegram received from Berlin on Thursday. Under its terms he will be permitted to return to Germany each winter to make one picture for Famous-Metro-Ufa, and to appear on the legitimate stage for two months.

It is reported that his first picture will be under the direction of D. W. Griffith.

and 217 witnesses called by the respondents were not permitted to testify.

Decision will be announced by the commission in a short time.

Attorney Bromley, of counsel for Famous Players, summed up the new developments as follows in a statement to the NEWS:

"The government made a motion returnable in January, embodying these two points:

"1. To reopen case and bring facts down to January, 1926, because they understood that we had acquired over 600 theatres.

"2. To reopen the case for the purpose of correcting the examiner's errors and excluding Famous Players-Lasky testimony.

"Their new chief counsel in argument admitted that the record was so full of errors that no court of appeals would sustain any order the commission might make against us, and that the examiner had committed so many errors that he wouldn't appear before the court to argue in support of any order.

"Famous made a motion to dismiss the complaint on the record as it stands, or in the alternative, if that were denied, for the commission to designate what errors it wanted corrected before taking of new testimony.

"On the first point of the government motion we presented a stipulation which showed the percentage of pictures we had made in 1924 and 1925, and the number of theatres we had really acquired since September, 1924, together with the number of theatres that our competitors had acquired, and we compared those totals to a new count of theatres made by the Hays office showing that there are now twenty thousand theatres."

While the precise contents of the stipulation have not been divulged, it is understood that it seeks to show that the theatre acquisition of Famous since September, 1924, has been only commensurate with the general growth of the industry, while that of other companies has been proportionately greater.

The various deals involved in the acquisition of all these houses are also enumerated, it is believed. For instance, under Fox would presumably be included the acquisition by that firm of a 40 per cent. interest in West Coast Theatres, Inc., at that time consisting of 104 houses.

PARAMOUNT PROMISES NOVELTY

"Ship That Sailed to Mars"

HECTOR TURNBULL, associate Paramount producer, announces a radical departure in motion picture production with a picture that will be known as "The Ship That Sailed to Mars," a fantastic comedy starring Raymond Griffith. Secret preparations for the filming of this production have been underway for sixteen months, according to Turnbull, and it will be at least three months more before actual work can begin.

Roy J. Pomeroy, master of magic, who achieved the opening and closing of the Red Sea in "The Ten Commandments" and many of the mystifying effects in "Peter Pan" will be active in the making of "The Ship That Sailed to Mars," which will be directed by Clarence G. Badger.

Turnbull is authority for the statement that the picture will contain nothing that the screen has seen before.

"It will be absolutely different from any picture ever produced," he said. "It will not be an experiment either. That part of it is chiefly a thing of the past. For more than a year Roy Pomeroy and his assistants have been working day and night evolving ideas and ways of making them practical. When he first told us some of the things he planned to achieve, we hardly could believe him. So he went ahead and proved his arguments."

Oppose Cleveland Zone System

Exhibitors Dissatisfied With Method of Apportioning First Runs—Ask Fewer Zones

THE present system of zoning operated by the Film Board of Trade in Cleveland, is the object of growing criticism on the part of several exhibitors in that territory. Complaint is made that the present plan, under which there are 39 zones, causes many theatres to play day and date which under natural conditions would not be in competition with one another. They advance the theory that a better balance of competition could be maintained under a system based on twenty zones for the city.

The uncertainty of release dates for first runs is one of the main objections lodged against the present system by the exhibitors. Changes in the first run release dates necessitates all subsequent runs pushing their dates back or forward as the case may be, for the reason that each exchange has an average of not more than four or five prints and there are many more theatres in line for the pictures under the system as presently operated, the exhibitors say.

J. J. Harwood, president of the Cleveland exhibitor organization, declared that the zoning plan was never adopted by his association, but that it was put into operation after its endorsement by the New York headquarters of distributing companies. Conditions have led to charges of favoritism on the part of distributors, exhibitors claiming that circuit owners are being favored before individual owners.

In describing the conditions arising from the plan now in operation, Mr. Harwood said: "After the first and second runs a picture becomes available to all the first run houses that have bought it for their respective zones, and where a distributor has sold say 20 of these first-runs from ten to fourteen of them are disappointed. The zones are so small that in a number of instances the first-run houses in connecting zones are really competitors, so you can imagine how the exhibitor that does not get the picture will feel.

"The situation becomes keener in the case of the so-called big specials, such as 'The Ten Commandments' and 'Don Q,' where the exhibitor has been compelled to pay a big guarantee and then an overage. It would aid the situation somewhat if a distributor had a sufficient number of prints to serve every house sold when the picture is declared available, or to withhold selling the subsequent runs until the houses he can furnish are through with the picture. Then if the other houses feel that the run has hurt them they can buy at a lower figure so that he can see a possible profit."

Bill Would Raise St. Louis Inspection Cost

A bill raising the inspection fee for theatres from $2 flat to a sliding scale with a $5 minimum has been presented to the St. Louis Board of Aldermen at the request of Director of Public Safety Brod.

Under the new scale houses with 1,000 or less seats would pay $5 for each inspection. The larger houses would pay $5 extra for each additional 1,000 seats. Brod said that the building inspectors are virtually doing the work for nothing at the present rate.

Benton Acquires Glens Falls Company

In taking over the Rialto and Park theatres in Glens Falls, William E. Benton of Saratoga Springs, has acquired the entire capital stock of the Glens Falls Operating company. Benton will continue a program of pictures for the first three days of the week at the Rialto, and pictures and vaudeville the last three days. The Park will continue as a straight picture house.

Child Movie Star Contest Winners Named

Prize winners have been announced in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and New York American contest to select a child who could be developed into a screen star. First prize of $1,000 and a $200 a week contract goes to Irene Butler, three years old of 425 Riverside Drive, New York City.

Others who were prize winners included Elmer Lowrey of Roosevelt, L. I., who won a thousand dollars; Helen Brady of Brooklyn, Dorothy Jane Hodge of New York City, David Clark of Harlem who each received a check for five hundred dollars; Barbara Fox of New York City, Sol Switzer of Brooklyn, Phyllis Walker of New York City and Baby Rea Blonde of Brooklyn, each of whom were presented with a check for two hundred and fifty dollars.

Kittanning Theatre Is Damaged by Fire

The Columbia Theatre Building in Kittanning, Pa., was damaged by fire to the extent of $75,000 on the morning of January 8th. The first floor of the building has been used as a theatre and the rest of the structure consisted of apartments and offices. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Fire Destroys Theatre in South Dakota

The Rex theatre of Midland, S. D., operated by Roberson and Welch, was destroyed in a $10,000 fire covered by $6,000 insurance recently. An employee, lighting the lights, tossed a match onto a floor that had become soaked with gasoline. Two dwellings were destroyed in the blaze.

Brooklyn Exhibitor Will Have Large Circuit

FROM present indications, A. H. Schwartz, prominent Brooklyn Exhibitor, is successfully carrying out his plans to establish a circuit of theatres throughout Brooklyn and Long Island, N. Y.

The first two theatres of the new chain are located at Avenue U and Coney Island Avenues and at Kings Highway and Flatbush Ave., both in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. Construction on these is progressing rapidly and their openings are scheduled for Labor Day, 1926. Foundation work on two more houses in the towns of Flushing and Freeport on Long Island is almost complete and steel construction will follow sometime this month. In Huntington Port Washington and Corona—three more Long Island towns—excavating will start before February 1st and all of these houses will be ready for their openings by the first of next year. In addition to the above mentioned theatres, Mr. Schwartz will have at least six more playhouses under construction at different points on Long Island, which in conjunction with his present chain in Brooklyn and Queens, will bring the circuit up to about twenty-five theatres.

The following theatres in Brooklyn are now being operated by the Schwartz Circuit: The Albemarle, Farragut, Kingsway, Rialto, Century, and Linden. In Jamaica: The Merrick and Rialto.

Kent, Williams, Thomson and Others Here on "Majestic"

Ufa Deal Discussed: F. P. L. Signs Jannings

By L. C. Moen

IMAGINE a film company with S. R. Kent, J. D. Williams, Major H. C. S. Thomson, George T. Eaton and Leopold Friedman as executives; Harry Rapf, Herbert Wilcox and Harry Cohn as producers, James Cruze as director, Betty Compson, Mae Murray and Dorothy Sebastian as feminine stars, Georges Carpentier as male lead, E. Bruce Johnson and F. Wynne-Jones as directors of the foreign department, Howard Strickland as publicity representative, Sam Rachmann in charge of exhibition—note that we say "imagine" only—and you will have some idea of the all-star aggregation of film notables which arrived from Europe on Wednesday of this week aboard the R. M. S. 'Majestic.'

For four days the great liner was buffeted and beaten by Atlantic gales, and though she did not "limp into port," as the newspaper writers are wont to say, the NEWS representative, upon boarding it at quarantine from the coast guard cutter, found the film celebrities more than happy that the voyage was at an end. Although it was impossible, in the short space of time available, to do full justice to all of the news available in this gathering, some of the highlights follow:

Further details of the Famous Players-Metro-Goldwyn-Ufa deal announced by Kent, Friedman and Wynne-Jones.

Emil Jannings, Germany's famous American-born actor, has been signed by Famous Players and will be brought here.

General optimism over foreign conditions expressed by all.

Williams announces excellent progress in production plans of British National Pictures.

S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players, threw further light on the Ufa deal which took him to Germany recently, and which has been widely discussed in the trade and daily press.

"The deal is simply a big commercial alliance," he said. "We have formed in Germany what is in effect a new distributing company, which will release a program including Paramount, Metro Goldwyn Mayer and Ufa pictures. These pictures will also be shown in the Ufa chain of theatres and the houses for which Ufa books. Since Ufa is in a more dominant position in Germany than any other company is in any other country, this will give splendid representation to our product.

"Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn, in turn, will each distribute five Ufa productions in the United States, provided always that they are suitable for release here. If less than that number of pictures meet that standard, then a fewer number will be released.

"Otherwise, the details are substantially as already printed in the various press accounts. What the Universal arrangement is I do not know. That is entirely between Ufa and Universal.

"It is not true that there has been any coercion or threats toward any company, German or American. It was a purely business conference, along business lines, and such matters did not even enter into the situation. No one has been 'frozen out' or 'beaten.' To that extent, some of the newspaper accounts have given a wrong impression.

"The deal is an important move for the industry, and is so flexible that any co-operation deemed desirable among the companies involved is provided for, in any department."

Leopold Friedman of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who represented that firm at the negotiations in Berlin, also expressed himself as highly pleased at the outcome of the conference.

"It has been strenuous business," he said, "ironing out the thousand and one details which necessarily had to be taken into consideration, but we feel that it has been well worth it. As a big step toward international relations, it should benefit the whole industry."

F. Wynne-Jones, the Ufa representative in New York, was likewise pleased with the turn events have taken. He said:

"Everything is finally settled, and everyone is happy. Under our arrangement with Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn, we have available to the fullest extent the entire resources and brains of their production departments. The possibilities which that opens up are obvious.

"We are happy, too, to have obtained a channel of distribution in America for our best pictures. Although, under the arrangement, their obligation to release our pictures is subject to screen acceptance, that is as we wish it, because no one is more anxious than Ufa to avoid the distribution in America of Ufa pictures which will be 'flops.' We are confident, however, that with the facilities and assistance made available to us we can produce pictures which will be a real factor here.

"Famous and Metro-Goldwyn are well satisfied, too, with the splendid distribution which they will obtain in Germany. Carl Laemmle, also, is thoroughly satisfied with the outcome of the deal, since Universal will not only obtain increased representation in Germany for a period of three years, at least, but will gain play dates on Broadway as well."

Sam Rachmann, well known in Europe and America, and who also figured largely in the recent deal, reports eye-bert theatre prospects in Germany. He has been applying American exhibition methods to Ufa houses, notably the Ufa Palast-am-Zoo, which has been extensively remodeled and is being run along American lines, with a large orchestra, modern equipment and many innovations in policy. As a result, he says, business at this house has been unparalleled.

J. D. Williams and George T. Eaton of British National Pictures, Ltd., and Herbert Wilcox, English producer, brought with them a print of "Nell Gwynn," which Wilcox has just finished and which Williams and Eaton hope to place here.

Williams reported steady progress in the plan of British National to stimulate interest in British production, and expressed optimism regarding the future.

"We have a studio site thirty minutes from London and outside of the fog belt," he said, "and with the facilities which we shall provide there we hope to accomplish worth while things. We have plans right now for several pictures which will set an altogether new standard in British production."

"I have full confidence in the future of the British picture. We are going to make pictures that will have box-office value in America—pictures with sales angles. I shall have some interesting things to announce during my stay here."

Major H. C. S. Thomson of Film Booking Offices, who has spent the past two months in London, Paris and Berlin, expressed satisfaction with the foreign situation. When asked what effect the Ufa affiliation might have on other American companies operating in Germany, he said:

"I do not believe that this deal will seriously affect other companies. The Ufa program of releases already included a considerable number of Famous Players and Metro-Goldwyn pictures, and other companies will presumably continue to go through their present channels of release. The only possible effect would be if Ufa should increase its production of moderate cost pictures to obtain more contingent permits for the importation of Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn product, thereby crowding the market. There is nothing to indicate, however, that that will be done."

E. Bruce Johnson, head of the foreign department of First National, likewise expressed satisfaction with the European situation as he found it on this trip.

Harry Rapf, associate production executive at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, was returning from a brief vacation trip with Mrs. Rapf and their son, Maurice.

"This was my first trip abroad," he said, "and I return with a greatly increased respect and appreciation concerning our productions, our theatres and our studio facilities. I found nothing like them in Europe. Despite all talk of contingents and so on European theatres need our pictures and will continue to have them. It has been a great experience."

While at Nice, Rapf visited the Rex Ingram studios, where Ingram is now located.

Howard Strickland, publicity representative of Rex Ingram, brought with him the first print of "Mare Nostrum," which Ingram just completed, as well as glowing reports of the merits of the picture.

Harry Cohn, of Columbia Pictures, when questioned concerning that company's foreign production plans, smiled and said:

"I have been on a vacation—a real one, with no thought of business worries. Joe Brandt arranged all of those details while he was abroad."

James Cruze, the director, returning with Betty Compson, his wife, from a tour of the Continent, during which he made a trip to Tripoli to gather local color for "Old Ironsides," expressed great enthusiasm for the technical methods worked out in the German studios. If it could be arranged, he would enjoy making a picture there, he said, which would utilize some of these mechanical devices and methods.

Miss Compson, Mae Murray and Dorothy Sebastian, returning stars, came in for considerable attention from the ship news photographers, as did Georges Carpentier, the French boxer. According to reports current on board, Carpentier is in this country to appear in a picture, but it was impossible to learn what company would make it.

Fox to Establish Chain in Florida

Said to Have Taken Interest in Wolfson-Meyer Circuit; B & K Midwest Still Expanding; Publix to Build in Knoxville

THE presence of William Fox in Miami was followed by a report from the Florida resort that he has secured an interest in the Wolfson-Meyer circuit, operator of several houses for colored patronage, the Lincoln theatre and the builders of a new first-run house scheduled to open in the Spring. The report also stated that Mr. Fox will be joined by James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the company, and together they will visit several Florida cities for the purpose of establishing a chain of theatres.

Balaban & Katz Midwest Theatres, Inc., are continuing to expand, the latest theatres to become affiliated with this organization being Miller & Spencer's Sterling Theatre at Lincoln, Illinois, and the Highland Park Theatre at Highland Park. Chicago theatres recently taken over by Balaban & Katz Midwest are the Metro, formerly the Terminal on Lawrence Avenue and the Capitol on Kedzie and Lawrence, both of which are owned by Halper & Feder.

George Rosing, managing director of the Erie Amusement company of Buffalo, announces his company will build at least three motion picture theatres in the Queen City of the Lakes, each of which will cost $500,000. All will be community houses. The first will be built at Broadway and Detroit street and Architect Henry Spann has completed plans for this house which will have a seating capacity of 2500. It is planned to open this theatre about October 1, 1926. The present Fillmore theatre which is about 600 feet from the proposed new $10,000,000 Union station will be closed for about two months after the new theatre is opened, for redecorating and remodeling. About $35,000 will be spent on this work, according to Max Rosing, manager.

Immediate construction of a $450,000 theatre in the University Mound district by Ackerman & Harris, San Francisco theatrical firm, was announced from the offices of the company. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1500, and be of Class A construction. The same building will house a general market and eighty stores. Dimensions of the property are 250 by 150 feet. The transaction is being handled by the realty firm of Hyman Brothers. On account of the name of the district the new theatre will be called the University.

Announcement was made December 31 by Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser of West Coast Theatres, Inc., that construction work will start in Los Angeles about January 15, on what they claim to be the finest neighborhood house in America, "The La Brea," to be erected at a total cost of $850,000 at the North East corner of Wilshire and Sycamore boulevards. The building permit calls for a $400,000 theatre, office and store building and twelve luxuriously furnished bachelor apartments. The cost of the lot was $300,000. The equipment for the interior will run about $150,000.

Five peninsula playhouses have been acquired by West Coast Theatres, Inc., and will be added to the string now under their control. The houses incorporated in the new merger are the Garden in Burlingame, the Regent in San Mateo, the Sequoia in Redwood City, the New Stanford and the Varsity in Palo Alto. They formerly were under the control of Ellis Arkush. The West Coast Peninsular Theatres, has been capitalized at $1,000,000 to handle the business. E. J. Arkush and Doretta Arkush of Burlingame, May K. Griffin of Redwood City and Jacob Samuels of San Francisco are named directors.

Publix Theatres is planning a new $1,000,000 theatre for Knoxville. R. E. Hall & Co., Inc., of New York, architects and engineers, have prepared the plans of the new house for Tennessee Enterprises, Inc. Razing of the old buildings now occupying the site at the corner of Clinch Avenue and State street will be started at once and contracts for the construction of the new building will be let as speedily as possible. March 15 ought to see building operations well under way. The new theatre, with a seating capacity of approximately 2,300, will be the largest in Tennessee.

Still another theatre for the Butterfield chain. The newest will be the State, costing $500,000, to be built in Kalamazoo, Mich. Work will begin in the spring so the house can be ready by fall. Incidentally, W. S. Butterfield, owner of a great chain of picture and picture-vaudeville houses in Michigan, has incorporated for $5,000,000. The new firm is known as W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Incorporated. It will include the several Butterfield theatres as well as the parent controlling company, heretofore known as the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Company.

$2,500,000 is the estimated amount to be expended in theatre construction in Milwaukee under plans recently announced by several interests there. Of these the Stillman chain will erect a 1,600 seat house on the southeast corner of 37th and Center streets.

Others include a theatre and business building to be erected by M. L. Annenberg at Farwell avenue and Ivanhoe place; a 2,000 seat theatre by Semi & Pessin at North and Fond du Lac avenues, a Saxe Amusement Enterprises theatre at 48th street and Lisbon avenue.

Booking Combines Again in Spotlight

Ten New York City Circuits Planning a Buying Pool—St. Louis Independents Active—Combination Formed in Far West

BOOKING combines in important and widely separated sections of the country were reported this week as already formed or in process of formation.

In New York City, ten local circuits are discussing organizing a holding company to obtain first runs through concentrated buying power.

A booking combination to embrace every independent picture theatre in St. Louis is in a formative stage.

In southwest Washington and Oregon the Inland Theatres Company has been incorporated to band together in a booking and buying circuit all the smaller houses in the territory.

The New York plan, which has been discussed at various times in the past few years in one form or another, contemplates some seventy theatres, representing circuits in every section of the city.

All the theatres would be thrown into one pool, which would be represented by the holding company, and stock in the latter would be distributed according to the numbers of theatres, cost, seating capacity, etc. Each circuit would be represented by one director on the holding company board.

It is reported that a prominent Wall Street financial firm is willing to advance a big loan—stated in some quarters to be $10,000,000—for expansion purposes. Three big circuits—Loew, Keith and Fox—now hold the buying prestige in the city, and the proposed booking pool would be intended as opposition to this supremacy.

The St. Louis booking combination is in the formative stage and details of the arrangement have not been fully decided.

Joseph Mogler, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of St. Louis, and owner of the Mogler, Bremen and Excelsior theatres in North St. Louis, admitted that such a plan was under consideration.

"We have not fully decided what will be done in this direction," Mogler said in discussing the new booking organization. "We are endeavoring to obtain data on similar plans now in operation in other cities."

"We contemplate taking in every independent house in the city and may also invite some of the larger theatre chains to join us. We don't know yet just what we will do, but it is certain that a booking arrangement to serve many of the houses in the city will be put through."

Mogler stated that he had not heard from William Fox the exact date he will be in St. Louis to discuss the local first run situation with members of the exhibitors' league. In a recent telegram to Mogler Mr. Fox said he would be in St. Louis about January 15th, and at that time would meet a number of independent exhibitors who had advised against the construction of a large first run house for Fox pictures in St. Louis.

"We hope to be able to convince Mr. Fox that he will be protected on first runs for his pictures," Mogler said. "We are opposed to any more theatres being constructed in St. Louis in the near future because we feel that the city is now overbuilt. Our move was not directed against Mr. Fox or his organization, but against new theatres here."

Organization of the Inland Theatres Company, comprising motion picture houses in Southeast Washington and Oregon, was announced last week in Seattle by Edwin B. Rivers, a stockholder and manager of the Arcade Theatre at Walla Walla. The purpose of the new organization will be to band together in a buying and booking circuit all the smaller houses in this territory, and future plans entail the purchase and construction of a chain of houses in cities not already covered in the present organization.

The Arcade, which was purchased recently from L. M. and G. E. Terhune, will be the principal house in the circuit. It will be closed shortly for a period of several weeks, during which time it will undergo a thorough remodeling, redecorating, recarpeting and re-equipping. It will be reopened under the name of the Strand Theatre, featuring a first run, 25 cent admission policy that has been used so successfully by Mr. Rivers during his connection with various theatre circuits in Seattle and also with the West Coast Theatres Company in Los Angeles last season.

Pathe Exchange Has Splendid Record

Twenty-Seven Per Cent of Its Employees Have Been in Service With the Concern for Five Years or More

LABOR turnover and proper morale among employees are among the big problems of any huge organization, so Pathe Exchange, Inc., may well be proud of the record it is establishing. No less than twenty-seven percent of its employees have been in the service of the concern for five years or more. The exact number is 434 of approximately 1,600 employees. Of these 353 have seen Pathe service from five to nine years, 64 from ten to fourteen years and 17 over fifteen years.

To celebrate the terms of long service and express appreciation to its employees for their loyalty, Pathe presented diplomas and gold emblems to those in service five years or more in a ceremony unique in motion picture annals. Seventy-five of the Home Office staff were summoned to the office of Vice-President and General Manager Elmer Pearson where each was presented with a gold emblem and a diploma. The presentations were made by Mr. Pearson, who signed each diploma with Paul Fuller, Jr., President of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Following the Home Office ceremonies, the presentations were duplicated in every one of the thirty-four branches throughout the United States and in the Laboratories in Bound Brook and Jersey City.

Leon Franconi, Manager of the Film Editing Department, a seventeen-year man, is the oldest employee at the Home Office.

Others at this office with long-time service records are: Samuel Macknovitch, 15 years; Gaston L. Chanier, 13; Brendan P. Egan, 13; Mario Frejmann, 13; P. Allen Parsons, 12; Manuel Rivera Regalado, 12; John W. Kyke, 11; Sadie Gilde, 11; Arthur Rousseau, 11 and John Humm, 11.

Five, ten and fifteen-year emblems and diplomas have been awarded to those named above in recognition of their respective lengths of service.

Recipients of the ten year awards in the Pathe Branch offices follow: Albert Adatte, Bound Brook, 11; John J. Jennings, Boston, 11; Walter S. Wessling, Los Angeles, 11; Julia Sievers, New Orleans, 11; William Turbett, Philadelphia, 11, and the following all of whom have served ten years as Pathe employees, George E. Maillard, Philadelphia; Raymond Haskell, Los Angeles; James A. Curran, Boston; L. A. Samuelson, Seattle; Gertrude Wilbert, Cleveland; John Leary, Pittsburgh; Erwin Stahl, St. Louis; Thomas F. Holden, Cincinnati; Wade S. Windsor, Cleveland.

Senate Finance Committee Agrees to Raise Admission Exemption to 75 Cents

REFUSING to adopt the minority recommendation to repeal the tax on admissions, the Senate finance committee on January 11 agreed to increase the exemption from 50 cents to 75 cents.

It is believed that if the change is approved by the Senate the House will reach an agreement on this tax without much difficulty.

Entire elimination of the admission tax had been suggested to the Senate finance committee by the minority membership as part of the tax program of the Democrats.

Only three recommendations were made, the first dealing with surtaxes, the second with the capital stock tax, the repeal of which is advocated, and the third being the admission tax. Other matters in the bill, of secondary importance, are included in the minority program, but are to be dealt with as they are reached.

The minority recommend a tax reduction of $500,000,000, instead of $325,000,000 as provided in the House bill, asserting that this can be accomplished without endangering the payment of the national debt in 32 years.

Scott Issues Survey of Trade

Pathe Executive Returning From Tour Sums Up Existing Conditions in Field

RETURNING from a tour of fifteen centers, Harry Scott, general sales manager of Pathe, this week issued a statement in which he sums up conditions existing in the field at the beginning of a new year—a twelve month which, he declares, is filled with promises of prosperity for the motion picture industry in general.

The tour, made in connection with Pathe's new product for the year, was made in the record time of twenty days for visits to 15 cities.

"In my trip to the Middle West and South during the past three weeks I found the Pathe District and Branch Managers and salesmen very optimistic and enthusiastic over our new season's product," Mr. Scott declares. "The newly appointed field men of Pathe's Exploitation Department are accomplishing most satisfactory results in demonstrating to exhibitors the value of advertising their short subjects, serials and two-reel comedies.

"I had the opportunity of interviewing a number of prominent exhibitors who reported that their business during 1925 had greatly exceeded expectations. Most of these exhibitors expressed the conviction that their business in 1926, judging by the present outlook, would exceed that of the past year.

"In the industrial sections I found a temporary lull due in part to the holiday season and to the fact that it was inventory time. Many big factories at this season of the year pursue a practice of laying off some of their force until their inventories have been completed.

"In the mining districts conditions seem to be only slightly affected by the anthracite strike. Farming sections are evidencing prosperity to a notable extent, and the theatres in these agricultural districts are reflecting the healthy trade conditions in most instances by substantial box-office receipts. The farmer is out-stripping the city dweller in the acquisition of up-to-date facilities and even luxuries. We find the farmer investing in radios, newer and better cars, modern home equipment, and the like. In a few of the towns where business is not so good the situation may be attributed to the fact that the local exhibitors are not furnishing their patrons with shows of sufficient merit to entice them away from their radios, bridge, clubs, etc."

Lichtman Plans to Make Series of 12 Features

IT is reported that Al Lichtman will produce a series of twelve features this year. No releasing arrangements have been made as yet, so far as is known. However, it is expected that Lichtman will be actively engaged in the distribution phase of the enterprise as he has had a wide experience in that field.

According to reports the first feature of the series will star George Jessel, stage comedian now appearing in "The Jazz Singer" in New York. This work will probably be filmed in the east though plans for other pictures which Lichtman will make call for the bulk of the production taking place on the west coast.

Laugh Month Gets Much Publicity

Newspapers Throughout Country Devote Many Columns of Space to January Short Subjects Campaign

LAUGH MONTH has swept the country by storm with its publicity campaign reaching newspapers from coast to coast and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes. The clippings reaching the secretary at headquarters, which started as a trickle in December, have become a veritable flood. In addition to the almost daily mention in the New York City papers, have been editorials, cartoons, front page screamer heads and column mentions from all parts of the country.

In Texas where "Ma" Ferguson issued a proclamation naming January as "Laugh Month" the newspapers throughout the state carried both editorial and news comment on the event. The Associated Press and the United Press services carried this news all over the world.

Texas theatres had the proclamation painted on one and three sheet cards and used them for lobby displays.

David Lustig, manager of the Regun Theatre, New York City tied up with the campaign when he played "Hot Feet" a one reel comedy by staging a Charleston and Laugh Month contest. He too used the banner and pennants.

In Kalamazoo, Roy Tillson, who directs the destinies of the Fuller theatre went after the Laugh Month idea strong.

During the third week in January Tillson will again feature a two reel comedy in his advertising and publicity. While not as extensive as his first week's campaign it will nevertheless be thorough.

In Jersey City and Union City, New Jersey, David Schaefer, director of publicity and advertising for the Haring and Blumenthal theatre circuit is concentrating his efforts on the third week and expects to put on a smashing campaign for the Central and Lincoln theatres which are two of the main houses of that circuit.

He is decorating the lobbies of both theatres with clown figures and papier mache heads and cutouts. The ushers and doormen will all be dressed in harlequin suits and the newspaper copy will be in keeping with the spirit of the occasion.

Schaefer is also going to put out a float advertising the comedy feature of the program at both theatres and this will have half dozen clown figures in addition to advertising the features and comedies to be shown during their laugh festival.

Roy Tillson staged one of the greatest Short Feature newspaper advertising, publicity and exploitation campaigns that was ever accorded a two-reeler in the State of Michigan, when the Educational-Lupino Lane Comedy "The Fighting Dude" played the Fuller Theatre which he manages at Kalamazoo, Michigan, January 3rd to 6th.

The Lupino Lane Comedy, which incidentally was pronounced by February "Screenland" and recently in the columns of the New York Telegraph as one of the best of all Laugh Month releases, was booked by Mr. Tillson to serve as the principal feature in a Laugh Month Exploitation campaign.

That he succeeded admirably may best be ascertained by a summary of what was used to exploit the comedy and what the campaign accomplished.

Short Feature and Laugh Month "Ad" space dominated the three column by seventeen inch newspaper layout used in the Kalamazoo Gazette as an opening announcement, and likewise the smaller "ads" that succeeded it.

Laugh Month secured a succession of humorous references from the pen of "Penn. E. Wise," one of the foremost columnists in the middle west. One of the articles in the Kalamazoo Gazette stated:—"In order to enter into the spirit of National Laugh Month, which is now under way, LeRoy Tillson, manager of the Fuller, has booked 'The Fighting Dude' for a showing at the theatre starting Sunday. The Fuller boss in order to carry out the desired effect has instructed Slim Doreman, on the gate, to use a dude make-up during the time this comedy is being shown. Slim was around this mornin' trying to borrow some balloon bottom pants, some polka-dot spats and a little black derby to get the desired effect."

Besides the special Laugh Month accessories including a banner, posters and pennants, Tillson used a trailer on "The Fighting Dude," a slide, 11 x 14 lobby cards, 50 one-sheets, and two three-sheets on this comedy. Several windows displays were arranged for and a shadow-box was used in the lobby in which a cut-out of Lane was placed.

Type-set one-sheets displayed on front of all street-cars passing the theatre, featured the Short Feature and Laugh Month program. Special Laugh Month date strips were used as well, with the Educational-Lupino Lane one-sheets. For a street bally a rough looking man toggled out as a prize fight trainer carried a banner ready "I am the trainer of The Fighting Dude—See me at the Fuller."

Tillson's Laugh Month campaign aroused the greatest enthusiasm in and around Kalamazoo, and he reported most gratifying results at the box-office.

Picture Industry Will Assist Army

Signal Corps Motion Picture Advisory Council Organized to Help Spread Propaganda for Uncle Sam

MOTION pictures are to play an important part in the peace-time activities of the Army.

Realizing that people in the interior sections of the country know little of the functions, composition and activities of the Army, for the support of which they pay taxes, and feeling that they would be pleased to see pictures showing what the Army is and what it does, the War Department has decided to go "direct to the people" in an effort to quell the constant "knocking" which is aimed at our national defense.

The first step toward the successful operation of such a plan was to gain the cooperation of the motion picture industry, and a meeting was recently held between officers of the Army and outstanding figures in the industry at which the plan was thoroughly discussed, and the full cooperation of the industry was promised.

Following that meeting there has been formed a Signal Corps Motion Picture Advisory Council, on which it is proposed to have a representative from each of the important motion picture companies. So far, this council includes: Lt. Col. Will H. Hays, President, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Major Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Major Saul E. Rogers, vice president and general counsel, Fox Film Corporation; Major J. Robert Rubin, vice president and general counsel, Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation; Major Edmund Lynch, chairman of the board of directors, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Major Robert H. Cochrane, vice president, Universal Picture Corporation; Richard A. Rowland, general manager, First National Pictures, Inc.; Albert Warner, vice president and treasurer, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.; Earl W. Hammons, president, Educational Film Exchanges; Cecil B. DeMille, vice president, Producers Distributing Corporation; Hal E. Roach, president, Hal E. Roach Studios; Fred W. Beetsen, secretary, Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc.; E. B. Hatrick, managing editor, International Film Service; Lt. Col. F. L. Herron, manager, foreign department, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; and Lt. Col. Jack S. Connolly, Washington Representative, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Lasky Made Major in Officers' Reserve

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky corporation in charge of production, was sworn in yesterday as a Major of the Officers' Reserve of the United States Signal Corps. The ceremony took place in Mr. Lasky's office at 485 Fifth Avenue.

Those members of the council with official designation are members of the Signal Reserve Corps; the other members will be commissioned in the Reserve and have expressed their willingness to accept such commissions.

The establishment of the advisory council will insure the fullest cooperation between the motion picture industry of the country and the Army, and instructions are being issued to all commanding officers to work in cooperation with the industry as much as possible. Already, it is stated, very gratifying results have been obtained in the flow of still pictures to the press and it is hoped that similar results will be obtained on the screen.

With the commissioning in the Signal Reserve Corps of the outstanding representatives of each of the large motion picture producing companies and news weeklies, and the formation of the advisory council, it is believed that the results achieved will be great and the effects of its policies will be of nation-wide importance.

For its part, the Signal Corps will constantly endeavor to locate events or situations in the corps areas, departments or localities which can be made the subjects of interesting pictures; will maintain contact with the representatives of the picture organizations, notifying them of these events; and, in addition, will make arrangements in advance to insure that local commanders will be agreeable to the taking of the pictures and that they will render such cooperation as is practicable; and will act as liaison officer with any producing company filming Army events or scenes to insure accuracy of detail and to render every assistance possible to the local commanders and to the filming personnel.

Army activities in this connection will be under the administration of Major General C. McK. Saltzman, Chief Signal Officer.

Laugh Month Contest for Exhibitors

EVERY exhibitor has an opportunity for performing real service to his fellow exhibitors as well as a chance to win one of the cash prizes in entering the Laugh Month exploitation contest in which the Laugh Month Committee is offering $850.00 in prizes for the best local campaigns tying up with the national drive.

One of the principal advantages of the Laugh Month campaign from the exhibitor standpoint is the examples it will furnish of one hundred per cent advertising campaigns providing extra profits from the short features as well as the longer features. If you are conducting a local Laugh Month campaign and if you aren't you ought to be—every other exhibitor in the country is vitally interested in what you did and what the results were at the box-office.

There are four opportunities to win one of the cash prizes which run from $100 to $5 for each of the four weeks of the month.

Harry Millarde to Direct "Lovey Mary"

Irving Thalberg has signed Harry Millarde to a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract and he has already been assigned to direct "Lovey Mary," an adaptation by Agnes Christina Johnson from the novel by Alice Hagan Rice. Millarde directed "Over the Hill," "If Winter Comes," and other successes.

$1.50 Tax Exemption Bill Introduced

EXEMPTION from tax of all admissions up to $1.50 is proposed in an amendment to the revenue law which has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Harrell of Oklahoma.

The Senate finance committee this week reached that section of the measure but passed it over in order that matters on which there would be no division could be disposed of before the more difficult tax provisions were taken up. Democratic members are suggesting that the exemption be increased to $1, and there may be some support for this recommendation among one or two of the republican members.

Circus interests were in Washington last week for the purpose of endeavoring to have the exemption raised, claiming that the present 50 cent exemption does not take care of their business.

Safier Resigns Cleveland Board Presidency

Maurice Safier has resigned as president of the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland. His resignation followed his appointment as central division manager for United Artists, a position which will take him away from Cleveland a great part of the time, thus making it impossible to preside at the regular Film Board meeting.

Ward Scott, Fox exchange manager and vice president, automatically moved up into the presidency and Gradwell Sears, First National exchange manager, was elected vice president, in Scott's place.

New Britain Palace Has Heavy Fire Loss

The Palace theatre, oldest playhouse in New Britain, Conn., was damaged by fire to the extent of $75,000 on the morning of January 8th. While the fire was confined largely to the upper part of the building, the loss by smoke and water is reported heavy throughout and will necessitate extensive repairs before the house can be re-opened. The Palace is one of a chain of Southern New England picture houses controlled by Israel J. Hoffman of Ansonia, Conn., and his associates. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Penn. Owners Contribute $2500

Turn Over That Amount to National Body and Pledge Another $2,500

AT a meeting of the Theatre owners of Western Pennsylvania held at the Hotel William Penn in Pittsburgh on January 6th, the treasurer was directed to immediately pay into the treasury of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America the sum of $2,500 and pledged a further payment of $2,500 on its quota on a per capita basis.

The Western Pennsylvania Unit went on record by a resolution to notify the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is President, through the National Organization, that they unqualifiedly endorse the work of the National Contract and Arbitration Committee in its campaign for an equitable contract, and that they will cease to participate in the arbitration of disputes arising out of the present contract. Harry Davis was appointed to cooperate with the National Contract and Arbitration Committee as direct representative for the Western Pennsylvania unit.

Business manager Joe Seider covered the Music Tax situation in detail and showed the aggressive campaign being made by the National Organization in this relation, and presented evidence of cooperation by the various State Units which have brought various favorable responses from legislators. The Pennsylvania Unit voted to inaugurate an intensive campaign with their Congressmen and Senators towards this end.

That the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will call a conference of First National franchise holders, large and small, was disclosed by Joseph M. Seider.

P.D.C. Holds Sales Conference

District Managers Received Individually for Sales Talks in "Progressive Convention"

PPRIVATE, all-day conferences in which district managers were received individually by sales manager W. J. Morgan, is the new type of sales convention held by Producers Distributing Corporation during the past ten days. The convention was divided into two periods of five days each. The first four days in each period were given over to private conferences between Mr. Morgan and an individual manager. On the fourth day an open meeting, attended by the four managers present in each period, was held.

Commenting on the "progressive" sales conference innovation, Mr. Morgan said: "I found this form of sales meeting, the next best thing to a personal visit to every section of the country. In private, uninterrupted, intimate talks with our division managers, facts were brought out that would be overlooked or crowded out in the usual procedure of a general sales conference. By receiving one manager each day, and devoting the whole of that day to a discussion of his problems, the meetings took the form of a personal visit.

Attending the first five day period of the Producers Distributing convention were L. J. Hacking, P. H. Clark, G. F. Lenehan and Robert Cotton, representing sales divisions 1, 2, 3 and 4 covering the eastern and second five day period was attended by C. central sections of the United States. The E. Maberry, C. D. Hill and R. A. Morrow, representing districts 5, 6 and 7; covering the mid-western division, and Tom Brady representing Canada.

T. O. C. C. Plans Dinner Dance

Elaborate Preparations Being Made for Sixth Annual Event at Astor

THE Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce announced this week that it would hold its Annual Dinner and Dance on Lincoln's Birthday, February 12th. This function will be the sixth of its kind held by the organization and the Hotel Astor has been selected by the committee in charge to house the elaborate affair.

There is a particular significance attached to the Dinner and Dance this year as the large membership of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce is desirous of obtaining a new club house, and therefore every effort is being put forth to make the function an unprecedented financial success.

In former years only the Gold Room of the Hotel Astor was utilized by the exhibitors, but so extensive are the plans for the Sixth Annual Dinner and Dance that the entire chain of Ball and Banquet rooms have been acquired.

When the plans for the function were taking form, Vincent Lopez and his Casa Lopez Orchestra were placed under contract to furnish the dance music, and, by special arrangement with Lopez the latter has made provisions to augment his orchestra.

Many celebrated personages will be present both at the dinner and the dance and it is expected that the great array of motion picture stars will find themselves matched in numbers by the equally noted members of the legitimate stage.

Those in charge of the entertainment have promised some unusually interesting features by visiting artists who have been selected for their popularity and skill. With Vincent Lopez will be his famous dance team, Addison Fowler and Florenz Tamara, who have won sufficient recognition to be accurately called the foremost dancers in America today.

The Ball Committee is headed by Lee A. Ochs who has contributed in no little measure to the great success of all Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce activities with which he has been identified. Those serving with him this year are S. I. Berman, Hy Gainsboro, J. Louis Geller, J. Arthur Hirsch, Joe Hornstein, Charles Moses, J. L. Ryan and M. D. Schwartz.

Victor Clark Takes New Post

Resigns From Lasky Studios to Take
New Place With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, that Victor Clark, for a number of years general manager of the Lasky Studios, has resigned to become associated with M-G-M, to take effect in the near future.

He is to occupy the newly created position at the M-G-M plant of Manager of Studio Operations. This is in accordance with the program of increased production activities for the coming season now being prepared by Mayer in association with Irving G. Thalberg.

"Nineteen twenty-six will witness the greatest program of producing in history of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer," said Mr. Mayer, "and our enlarged activities demand an increased personnel and the new position of Manager of Studio Operations will be occupied by Mr. Clark whom we believe to be one of the leading executives in the film production world.

"Victor Clark has been associated with Famous Players-Lasky for the past five years. Following a year at the Long Island studios of that company he went to Hollywood for Lasky and later took over the general management of their Hollywood studios. His achievements have won him an enviable position in the motion picture trade," concluded Mr. Mayer.

Inspiration To Feature Lois Moran

INSPIRATION Pictures is to feature Lois Moran, sixteen year old girl, in "The Kid From Montana," a Sidney Olcott production, in which Richard Barthelmess is starred. Miss Moran gained national recognition following her initial performance in "Stella Dallas" a Samuel Goldwyn production, in which she played the role of Laurel.

The first picture in which Miss Moran appeared with Barthelmess was "Just Suppose," which will open at the Strand Theatre in New York on January 24th. This young Miss is an American girl who was educated in France, where she danced in the Ballet of the Paris Opera House.

Montreal Rejects Eight Per Cent of Posters

The annual report of the poster censor of Montreal, Martin Singher, for the year 1926, just issued, shows that approximately eight per cent of all the theatre posters, cards and still photographs intended for use in Canada's largest city were considered unfit for public view and were condemned.

The official statement shows that 111,047 different pieces of lobby, window and billboard advertising were submitted for examination during the 12 months and 101,477 were approved by the censor and 9,570 were rejected. The civic revenue from the examination of the posters, etc., amounted to $3,241.87.

Atlanta Head Urges Sunday Amusement

WD. HOFFMAN newly elected president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has fired the first shot in a campaign for Sunday amusements in Atlanta. He appeared before the last regular meeting of the Rotary Club and declared one of Atlanta's most vital needs now is a provision for more amusements and recreation for the rapidly increasing number of workers in the industries of the city.

In part, Hoffman told the Rotarians: "I do not know whether you people realize it or not, but to many workers in Atlanta industries Sunday in this city is a mighty long and tedious day. With tremendous increases being made in the number of workers as well as big annual increases in payrolls the necessity of early action on the part of business interests of the city to provide more pleasure for the workers is apparent to all. I don't know what some of you ministers here think about this question, but I know that the great mass of working people are entitled to their sports and pleasures."

The titling of "Just Suppose," Inspiration's latest Barthelmess picture, has been completed by C. Graham Baker, who also prepared the scenario from the stage play. Baker's next assignments are "The Kid From Montana," and Jeffrey Farnol's "The Amateur Gentleman," in which Barthelmess will appear under the direction of Sidney Olcott.

Radio Causes Pictures to Slump in Japan

The motion picture producers and exhibitors in Japan have been for the past three or four months suffering a very distinct drop in their revenue, according to advices reaching the Department of Commerce. Responsible persons connected with the American film industry say that the revenues they are receiving now, as compared with last spring before broadcasting was introduced, are on some leading films only about 10 per cent of what they ought to be, or would be under normal conditions.

This decrease in the theatre attendance on the part of the theatre going public may be partly ascribed to economic depression, but it is undoubtedly due to a very considerable extent, they say, to the growth and popularity of radio in Japan, as the country people especially are economically better off now than at any time in the past few years.

Investigating Ventilating of Wash. D. C. Theatres

As a result of 42 deaths from pneumonia since January 1st, orders have been issued by the health officer of the District of Columbia for an exhaustive investigation of the ventilating systems of all motion picture and other theatres in Washington, with a view to checking any potential spread of the disease through impure air.

It is explained that pneumonia is contagious, and is more likely to be spread in places where the air is not pure. Inspection of the ventilating systems in the theatres is expected to show whether the air is pure, and it is not believed that laboratory tests will be necessary if the ventilating apparatus is in proper working condition.

John Evans Disposes of Two Houses

John S. Evans, former president of the M.P.T.O. of Southern New Jersey and Delaware, who has been seriously ill for several months, recently sold his Drury and Tioga Theatres to James Smithan, a Mauch Chunk attorney for a price said to be close to $225,000. S. Raison is acting as manager of the Tioga, while Pete Marks, who was employed by Mr. Evans, has been retained as manager of the Drury.

Bill Would Close D. C. Houses on Sunday

THE closing on Sunday of all places of amusement in the District of Columbia is provided for in a bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Lankford of Georgia "to secure Sunday as a day of rest."

The measure specifically prohibits the operation of any motion picture theatre or other place of entertainment or public assembly at which an admission fee is directly or indirectly received. Violation of this provision would be punishable by a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50 for the first offense, and by fines of between $25 and $500 and imprisonment for not more than six months for subsequent offenses.

The bill is the same as was introduced by Representative Lankford at the last session of Congress.

Woodhull Boosts Laugh Month

Is Carrying Out All Suggested Ideas at His Own Theatre in New Jersey

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who has made speeches on "January Laugh Month"—broadcasted "January Laugh Month" over ten radio stations—and written "January Laugh Month" for a number of trade papers, newspapers and magazines, when interviewed on the subject of "January Laugh Month" this week stated: "I have nothing further to say."

National President Woodhull admitted that he had said all it was possible to say, and that now he is executing in his own Baker Theatre, at Dover, N. J., 100% of the suggestions he has made to the theatre owners of the country in connection with this movement. A review of President Woodhull's January program at the Baker Theatre, shows that the most serious pictures billed for this month are news reels. From the time one sights the Baker a block away, one is impressed by the hilarity of its announcements. The marquee, the box office, the foyer, even the aisles are bannered and ballyhooed with banners presaging wholesome fun on the screen of this theatre.

President Woodhull has not only given extra time to the comedy short subject, but he has taken particular pains to insure that every one of his January bookings has a real laugh. January for President Woodhull has meant the shelving of all "sob sister" programs. Mr. Woodhull's final declaration on "Laugh Month" was made in the January 1st issue of the official Bulletin of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. At that time he wrote, under his column entitled the "President's Pulpit:"

"In as much as I learned at a very early age the value of laughter, it is a most easy task for me to enter into the 'January Laugh Month' with enthusiasm.

"Leaders in organization work and physicians have at least one thing in common. They spend at least ninety per cent of their time listening to the troubles of other folks. It requires all kinds of will power to maintain a sense of humor, without which I do not believe any human being, whether rich or poor, can exist."

Twelve Immortals for A.M.P.A.

Leaders of Motion Picture Industry to Preside at Naked Truth Dinner

THE twelve immortals of the movies will be on hand for the annual Naked Truth Dinner to be held at the Astor, February 6, 1926. The men whose combined wealth could buy the entire city of New York, whose fame encompasses the face of the globe, to whom the motion picture owes its present secure and prominent position in the eyes of the world. These men will personally be present at what bears every indication of being the greatest social event in the current and past film year.

These gods of the silver sheet are Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, D. W. Griffith, William Fox, Will Hays, Richard A. Rowland, Carl Laemmle, Sidney R. Kent, Joseph M. Schenck, Marcus Loew, S. A. (Roxy) Rothapfel and Sam Katz. It can be said without fear of contradiction that this is the first time that these twelve immortals have been seen under the same roof. It is practically a certainty that each of them will be present, with the possible exception of Carl Laemmle, who may be in Europe at the time and therefore unable to attend.

It is the present purpose of the A.M.P.A. to assign one of the dozen undying ones to a single table at which shall also be seated outstanding stars, directors and other picture notables. These tables are to be scattered over different parts of the grand ballroom so that the function will take on the aspect of a big family affair.

The selection of the twelve immortals was one of the first acts done under the new A.M.P.A. administration of which Glendon Allvine is president. At the second meeting it was decided to have a vote among the membership to determine the outstanding figures in the industry who had done the most to promote the welfare and growth of the moving picture; and who were in a position to preside at a weekly meeting of the organization within a month of each other. Three of the immortals have graced meetings of the association so far. They are Adolph Zukor, S. A. (Roxy) Rothapfel, and last week, D. W. Griffith.

Tickets to the dinner are rapidly being sold and many desirable spots in the room have already been reserved. Address all requests to Charles Einfeld, 365 Madison Avenue, New York City.

A deal was closed January 8th by Fred L. Cornwell, owner of the Delmonte Theatre, Delmar boulevard near Clara avenue, St. Louis, whereby the theatre was leased for a long period to Ray Miller of Mexico, Mo., and Jack Weil of St. Louis, Mo.

Weil is the head of Jack Weil Pictures, an independent distribution organization.

San Mateo House Looted by Cracksmen

The safe door was open and nearby was a "jimmy."

Paramount Appoints Hoffman

Assumes Duties at Once as Executive Manager of West Coast Studios

MILTON E. HOFFMAN, production manager at the Cecil B. De Mille plant in Culver City, has been appointed as executive manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Studio in Hollywood. He will assume his new duties at once and will carry out plans for the installation of the production forces in the newly-purchased quarters, the twenty-six acre United Studios.

In announcing this change in the studio's executive personnel, associate producers Schulberg and Turnbull said:

"We are gratified that we have obtained a man of the calibre of Milton E. Hoffman to fill the responsible position of executive manager. His keen insight into our organization's particular system and problems, gained through years spent as general manager of our West Coast studio and as general manager of our London plant, makes him particularly well fitted for his new post. His experience also in a managerial capacity at other studios has well equipped him for the fulfillment of his first big tasks in connection with the removal of the equipment at the Lasky studio to its new home at the United Studios, and to bring about a smooth running organization to carry out the expanded production plans we are now launching.

"Paramount will take gradual possession of its new home, installing one production at a time as contracts made by United with rental companies are fulfilled. We will take full charge by May 1. Our first unit to move probably will be the company which will make 'Fresh Paint,' a modern comedy starring Raymond Griffith. It is planned to begin filming this picture on January 18.

"The equipment at the Lasky studio, which has been gathered together through the last 12 years and much of which could not be duplicated, will be moved to United when the predominance of production is there. This equipment includes the most elaborate technical scenic effects department in motion pictures."

Friedman in New "U" Position

Is Appointed Contact Executive and Will Make Headquarters at Home Office

Joseph Friedman, long connected with the Universal sales forces, has been appointed as new contact executive, a position created by Arthur Kane, who has since resigned from the Universal staff to enter the production field. Friedman will have his headquarters at the home office of Universal in New York and his duties will be the maintenance of liaison between the studios at Universal City and the "U" sales force.

Universal has found this correlation of studio and sales force a powerful balance wheel to keep the production and sales in step. It has made for better mutual understanding and has resulted in better pictures and more specialized selling. It has particularly enabled Universal to follow the change in the public's picture taste rapidly.

The former Detroit manager already has assumed his new position. He was royally welcomed by the Universal home office staff. He spent several months in an executive capacity at the home office several years ago and made many warm friends.

Friedman's place in Detroit is taken by Ray Moon, formerly the star salesman of that exchange. Detroit is one of Universal's most efficient exchanges. Friedman's record with that exchange had much to do with his selection for the new post.

An explosion in the moving picture films carried in stock by John A. Chantler & Company, 226 Bay Street, Toronto, close to the Toronto Stock Exchange, at 9:30 p.m. on the night of January 5, caused damage to the extent of $60,000 through the fire which followed.

A large quantity of reels evidently intended for use in home projectors and which had been imported from Europe was burning merrily after the explosion. The windows of the four-story building were blown out in the crash but no one was injured. The explosion was heard for several blocks.

SOMETIME ago an attempt was made to open the picture theatres on Sunday, in St. Petersburg, Fla. J. J. Gillooly, owner of the Capitol theatre agreeing to "break the ice" by opening his house on Sunday evening and charging the regular admission charges. He was promptly arrested. His case came up for trial last week and he was acquitted by County Judge, John U. Bird, who ruled that the Supreme Court of the State of Florida had described the legal Sunday as from dawn to sunset.

It is reported that the City Commissioners will at once take steps to pass an ordinance prohibiting the showing of Motion Pictures in the city on the Sabbath and will define the day as from midnight on Saturday until midnight on Sunday.

'Skyrocket' Seen on Leviathan

Premiere of Peggy Hopkins Joyce Special For Associated is Notable Affair

PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE'S Associated Exhibitors special, "The Skyrocket" had its premiere showing in the Grand Ball Room of the Steamship Leviathan the evening of January 7th and it was one of the most brilliant affairs of the kind in the annals of filmdom. Miss Joyce was hostess for the occasion to close to a thousand people prominent in the picture industry, society and newsjaperdom.

Miss Joyce made the trip from Hollywood especially for the event, which was inaugurated with a reception in the Palm Garden of the giant liner. Receiving with Miss Joyce were Captain Hartly, Staff Commander Moore and Purser Summit of the Leviathan.

Following the reception the guests repaired to the Grand Ball Room where Miss Joyce was given an ovation until the picture got under way. Music for the showing was compiled and the orchestra directed by Joseph Hollander.

During the showing of the picture and after it had been projected a radio program was being broadcast from the Palm Garden through station WMCA, the high powered broadcasting unit of the Hotel McAlpin. Harry Hershfield was master of ceremonies for the broadcasting and Miss Joyce, Oscar Price, president of Associated, Captain Hartly and others addressed the radio audience.

After the picture was projected supper was served in the immense dining room of the big ship. Following supper dancing to the music of two orchestras was in order.

Dancing was held both in the Ball Room and the Palm Garden.

During the course of the post-showing festivities a reel of film presenting the affair itself was projected. The making of this reel was in the capable hands of Leonard Mitchell, chief of the United States Lines' Motion Picture Department, to whom credit is also due for the wonderful projection of the picture. It was the general consensus of the hard-boiled film men that the projection was perfect—no small matter when the handicaps were considered. The film showing arriving guests, etc., was projected just exactly one and three quarters hours after the last scene had been shot.

The projection installation was made by the U. S. Lines Motion Picture Department, of which Charles Fierer is Chief. The projectionist of the Leviathan is Thomas McAuley.

Now, in conjunction with Marion Fairfax, he has chosen "The Desert Healer"—the story with 8,000,000 readers. John Francis Dillon, director of "Flaming Youth" and "We Moderns," has given this his finest directorial efforts and brought together Lewis Stone and Anna Q. SOUTH SEAS? Yes. The story starts on a desert island where explorers go to discover a new race of white savages, and think they've found one. They bring him back to New York, exhibit him in a cage; and through his bars he loves the girl who put him there.

Who is he? A savage? No!

That's revealed in an astounding denouement when the picture veers from tropical romance to a thrilling drama of newspaper life — an "inside" unwritten story that makes new, swift, surprising entertainment.

LIFE and men—Sylvia Fleming played against them and SAW them, and around the baize tables of Monte Carlo she was called The Reckless Lady.

Reckless? She was a mother whose first gamble was love. Then for fifteen years she gambled for the money that kept her children; and when the man who had admired her loved her daughter instead, the Reckless Lady made her last great gamble against Fate that enmeshed the girl. And at Fate she cried: "I'll see you!"

Where but in Monte Carlo could such a tale be set? Who but Belle Bennett could enact that role?

MONTHS and months of secret production activity—and such a picture as exhibitors have always hoped for is achieved!

Madness of war—not on the firing line, but in the cities where life is squandered to forget death! Love—blazing, flickering, dwindling in a starved people. Famine and faith; dread, hope, hysteria!

The human emotions of Vienna—the city of pleasure turning to a city of grief—sweep like the Danube between panoramas of palaces and slums!

'The Dancer of Paris'

MEN were as minutes in her life and she was very young

If it were possible to select from the wealth of pictures in First National's January-to-June aggregation one production as the most distinctive, "The Dancer of Paris" would claim long consideration.

By the author of "The Green Hat" and "These Charming People," this story occupies a place of its own. And the picture catches Arlen's spirit in following the steps of the little American dancer of Paris—the toast of the boulevards—until her steps become a frenzied beat of heels, dancing in despair.

Those were the lucky ones. I wish I'd been in the first lot—laid out by a clean little machine gun bullet! . . . There's never been a list of other kinds of casualties—the real victims of war—girls who married the first man that came along because he wore a uniform and looked like a hero, the girls who thought war a glorious lark, made for liberty; the boys who got shell shock, the lads who made a dash for life and got hurt—between the wheels—the men who came back after victory and couldn't get a job, and were numbered among the useless with Comrades of the Great War . . ."

TESTED BOX OFFICE VALUES

By Richard A. Rowland

General Manager of First National Pictures, Inc.

WE are in the show business and you know what that means—fast thinking and snappy action.

We try to think six months or a year ahead of the public and guess what people will want before they know themselves.

What's going to catch on and what isn't—That's the question that takes a lot of guessing.

The unexpected happens. It always will happen in the show business; but that does not mean that there are no definite values on which you can bank. In the long run the lucky breaks will be pretty equally distributed.

The business of a producing organization, as I see it, is to insure the exhibitor by offering him values of proven worth at the box office. Values in stars, values in stories, values in directors, values in a type of production of tested audience appeal—these are tangible assets which an exhibitor has a right to expect fifty-two weeks in the year. They are his assurance of a profit on his investment. Over and above these assured values, there will be an occasional extraordinary production, such as "The Lost World" of last year, "The Sea Hawk" of the year before, "The Viennese Medley" and "Men of Steel" of the coming season.

But exhibitors don't live on occasional super-specials. They are the cream and cake. The bank account grows fat or lean according to the drawing power of the pictures that reach the theatre week after week. The company that consistently, month in and month out, year in and year out, offers sound values is giving stability to the industry as a whole and enriching the individual exhibitor.

First National has grown and prospered through a development of this policy—the building up of picture values. The best evidence that we have succeeded is the testimony of the exhibitor himself offered in box office reports such as those published in the News a few weeks ago. First National came first in the number of pictures selected as money-makers.

This result is not accidental. It is not

THE PRESENT—THE FUTURE

By Robert Lieber

President of First National Pictures, Inc.

I LIKE to remember that the present makes the future.

If we are doing the right thing here and now, the future will take care of itself.

This little bit of common sense philosophy applies to companies as well as to individuals.

Every hour of every day we are making the future for ourselves and for those influenced by our activities. This thought came to me very forcibly when I was in Europe this autumn, travelling and resting and storing up strength for the future.

In theatres of Germany, England, France and Italy I saw First National pictures that we made a number of years ago. Most of them have been well-nigh forgotten in this country, but right now they are very much alive abroad.

While we were doing our best to fulfill the present needs of exhibitors in the United States, we were at the same time building for the future influence of American motion pictures the world over.

From its inception, First National has had one ideal, one purpose—a service to exhibitors of the finest pictures obtainable. These pictures must be supplied at a cost insuring the exhibitor, the producer and the distributor a fair profit on the investment.

In 1918, the founders of First National saw this as a present need and sought to meet it in a way that it never had been met before—through an organization of, by and for the exhibitor.

The basic principle behind First National has never altered. From week to week we have aimed to meet the present need of the exhibitor and in doing so have taken care of a future far beyond the most optimistic dreams of the handful of exhibitors drawn together by a common purpose.

Each year the surface problems of the industry may seem to change; but after all there are only two great needs for the present and the future—good pictures and square dealing. First National is supplying both.

Sam Spring, Secretary-Treasurer and Chairman of the Sales Cabinet, First National Pictures.

Twenty-Six and Two Specials From First Natl.

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES announces twenty-six regular releases from January to June, 1926, and two super-specials.

It is doubtful if at any time since its organization in 1918 has First National faced a new year with such a compelling line-up of productions—the output of studios on the East and West coasts and of independent producers.

Glancing over the list of titles, it is interesting to note that most of the pictures are based on famous plays and best selling novels that already have enlisted the interest of millions of playgoers and readers. Advance advertising already has been given the pictures through the mediums of the stage, books, magazines and newspapers.

All the First National stars are represented in the output of the next six months. Norma Talmadge, Colleen Moore, Corinne Griffith, Constance Talmadge, Richard Barthelmess, Milton Sills, Harry Langdon, Leon Errol and Johnny Hines will be seen in productions.

Following the policy that always has been adhered to by First National the output of independent producers of the first rank will occupy an important place in the new season's program. Producers contributing pictures that promise to be of conspicuous importance are Joseph M. Schenck, Robert T. Kane, Edwin Carewe, Frank Lloyd, M. C. Levee, Sam Rork, E. M. Asher, C. C. Burr, Marion Fairfax, J. Boyce Smith of Inspiration and John M. Stahl.

John E. McCormick will present Colleen Moore and, also on the West Coast, June Mathis will retain an important post as a production executive. At the Eastern Studios, General Manager Richard A. Rowland has carried out his belief in the unit system of production by placing Earl Hudson at the head of one unit and Al Rockett at the head of another with Ray Rockett acting as business manager at the studios.

Much is expected of the two big specials now nearing completion, "The Viennese Medley" made in Hollywood under the supervision of June Mathis and "Men of Steel," an Earl Hudson production starring Milton Sills. First National reports that "The Lost World" and "Abraham Lincoln" are continuing to establish records in large and small theatres throughout the country.

due to lucky breaks. I believe it to be the outcome of a consistent policy. And what we accomplished last year we are certain to surpass this season for the reason that the tested box office values of First National pictures are stronger than ever. New names have been added to an unbeatable list of stars. We have a wonderful line-up of sure-fire stories and the producers and directors contributing to the First National program stand at the top of their profession.

For the season of 1926 First National has a combination of box office values that insure success.

BARTHELMESS PICTURES

THE first of the Richard Barthelmess productions for the new season is "Just Suppose," adapted from the play by A. E. Thomas, produced by Inspiration Pictures and directed by Kenneth Webb. Supporting Mr. Barthelmess are Lois Moran, Geoffrey Kerr, Bijou Fernandez and a number of other well known players.

The story concerns the heir to the throne of a small principality of Southern Europe who shows a lack of dignity that worries his royal parents. Prince Rupert falls in love with a pretty American girl and she with him, whereupon there starts a delightful romance under unfavorable circumstances, for, of course, the royal prince will not be permitted to wed his American sweetheart.

Prince Rupert is rudely shaken from his dream castle when he is ordered to return to his country and prepare for his duties as a ruler. An unexpected happening makes possible the union of the young lovers when a happy culmination of their love seemed impossible.

Following "Just Suppose" Mr. Barthelmess will be seen in "The Kid from Montana" in which he portrays the character of an untutored cowboy who falls in love with an Eastern society girl. In this picture Mr. Barthelmess has a role unlike any he has portrayed during his long career.

"THE DESERT HEALER"

THE first Marion Fairfax production being produced in collaboration with Sam Rork, promises big things at the box office.

The title of the picture is "The Desert Healer," a screen version of the best selling novel by E. M. Hull, author of "The Shiek." In book form the story had a tremendous sale. Also it proved to be one of the most popular serials run in the Cosmopolitan Magazine in a long time. Following the magazine publication came serialization in the Hearst chain of newspapers. All told, it is estimated that the story has had no less than eight million readers.

In the screen version the locale is a picturesque part of India where the dramatic sequences of the tale are unfolded. Mrs. Hull has designed a plot admirably adapted to motion pictures and the producers are giving it a colorful production. Among those prominent in the cast are Lewis Stone, Barbara Bedford, Tully Marshall and Anne Rork. Miss Rork is the daughter of Sam Rork and this marks her debut as a picture actress.

"TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP"

THE first Harry Langdon feature production has been entitled "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp." It was made under the direction of Harry Edwards with Joan Crawford, Edwards Davis, Carlton Griffith and Tom Murray in the cast supporting the famous comedy star.

Jim Burton, a multi-millionaire shoe manufacturer has two hobbies, his daughter and his business. As a publicity stunt to advertise the shoes he manufactures, Burton arranges a foot race across the continent, a great barbecue being prepared to celebrate the start of the race.

Harry Langdon, as Mr. Nobody, chances to attend this barbecue and see the shoe manufacturer's daughter Betty, with whom he immediately falls in love. He enters the race with results of a tragi-comic nature. Betty and her father cross the continent and are among the thousands waiting at the finish line when the pathetic Mr. Nobody steps across, the winner. Naturally he finds favor with the admiring Betty.

Weeks were spent in the preparation of this story, the most successful gag men on the coast being employed on the development of the comedy incidents.

Executives of First National's Sales Cabinet. Ned Depinet, manager of Southern Territory; Ned Marin, manager of Western Territory; A. W. Smith, Jr., manager of Eastern Territory.

Milton Sills to be Starred In "Men of Steel"

MILTON SILLS will be seen in one of First National's big specials, "Men of Steel," a dramatic story of the steel industry, many of the scenes for which were made at the steel mills in Birmingham. First National secured the fullest co-operation of Judge Gary in the making of this picture, an Earl Hudson production under the direction of George Archainbaud.

Jan Bokak, immigrant laborer in the Mesaba iron mines confesses to the murder of Mary Berwick's brother on the night he has become engaged to Mary. He thinks Mary's brother, Alex, is the murderer and wants to save him. He escapes and makes his way to the steel mills owned by Cinder Pitt. There he becomes a leader among the mill workers and is a real power among the men. Labor agitators try to bring him into a plot to wreck the mill but he spurns them when he finds it will cause the death of some of the workers. He rushes through the mill as the plotters overturn a large water tower on to the section which contains the blast furnaces.

Pitt's daughter, Clare, is in the mill at the time but is saved by Jan who is now known as John Brook. Jan invades the quarters of the labor agitators and is wounded so badly he is expected to die. Pitt has him taken to his home where he is nursed back to health. Then when he finds Jan and Clare in each other's arms he announces they are engaged. They are shocked at the announcement but go through with it.

Meanwhile, back at the range Mary Berwick's mother reveals that she is the runaway wife of Pitt and that Mary is Pitt's daughter and sister of Clare. When Mrs. Berwick dies, Mary and her brother, Alex, and a friend, Pete Masarik, come to the mill city. Mary goes to Pitt's home to tell him who she is but meets Jan there with Clare. She accuses Jan of murdering her brother. Jan in dramatic fashion proves his innocence when he takes them to the mill and forces a confession of guilt from Masarik. The day of the wedding comes and Mary is among the crowd of workers who gather in front of the Pitt home to cheer their hero and the mill owner's daughter as they leave for the church.

The crowd is wild with delight for it means one of them will rule the mills. Clare and her father leave the house first. A few minutes later Jan comes out but Mary faints when she sees him and he carries her back into the house. There his old love surges anew and he decides to turn down Clare and marry Mary.

He goes to the church, calls off the wedding and is married to Mary by a Justice of the Peace. The crowd, now a mob, attacks Jan and Mary as they depart from the office. They are about to hang Jan when Pitt rescues him only to learn that Jan has really married his daughter after all, the long lost daughter he never more expected to see. A particularly strong cast has been assembled in support of Mr. Sills, including Doris Kenyon, Victor McLaglen, Mae Allison, Frank Currier, George Fawcett and John Philip Kolb.

"HIS PARTNER'S WIFE"

IN ADDITION to "Men of Steel," Milton Sills will be starred in an adaptation of a story by Henry Holt originally entitled "On the Plinth." The new title is "His Partner's Wife."

One million dollars, owned jointly by the four men in a locked room, has disappeared from their office safe. One of the four must be the thief. It is agreed that if the guilty one gives the combination of his private safe, immunity will be granted to the extent of allowing him to go free if he safely walks the five-inch plinth from the window of the locked room to the window of the next. One man, sensing that the real thief is the woman he loves, the wife of one of the others, decides to confess to save her. He makes the terrifying trip, returns the money which the woman has placed in his private safe, and then persuades her not to elope as she had intended but to return to her husband. He has suffered but feels that he has done well. His friend brokenly thanks him after his returned wife confesses.

"GOOD LUCK"

ADRURY LANE melodrama of the ever popular type has been selected by E. M. Asher as his contribution to the First National list for the new season. It is entitled "Good Luck."

As a play "Good Luck" ran for many months in London and on account of its dramatic qualities was much in demand by motion picture producers. Mr. Asher paid a high figure for the screen rights and is planning to produce the story on a big scale, making the most of the thrilling incidents it contains.

The characters run true to melodramatic form, the plot developments hinging upon the clash between the villain and the hero in their pursuit of the heroine. "Good Luck," however, is a strictly up-to-date melodrama in which all the improvements of modern science are used. The airplane, radio and other modern devices are utilized in the preparation of a genuine thriller.

"THE SAVAGE"

ADAPTED from an original story by Ernest Pascal, "The Savage" will be an Earl Hudson production. The story concerns Dan Terry, a reporter sent to the Mariposa Islands, south of the Equator with instructions to reach the islands in advance of an expedition headed by Professor Atwater. His job is to score a scoop on a rival newspaper. Terry goes by airplane and is wrecked when he reaches the islands. Scarcely has he climbed from the wreckage, when he is knocked unconscious by a falling tree, toppled over in a terrific storm. He is found by Professor Atwater and his daughter, who conclude that he is one of the white savages and take him back to New York where he is exhibited as a curiosity. Terry escapes, and, of course, in the end marries the girl with whom he has fallen in love. Ben Lyon and May McAvoy are cast in the featured roles.

E. Bruce Johnson, manager Foreign Department, First National Pictures.

Advance stills from "Men of Steel," the First National Special starring Milton Sills and directed by George Auchainbaud under the supervision of Earl Hudson.

"The Viennese Medley" Will be A Special

"THE Viennese Medley," one of the two big specials of First National's program, was made on the coast under the supervision of June Mathis, who also wrote the continuity from a story by Edith O'Shaughnessy. The direction was in the hands of Curt Rehfeld assisted by Charles Woolstenhulm.

The cast reads like a who's who of Film-land with important roles being played by Conway Tearle, Anna Q. Nilsson, Mae Allison, Ian Keith, Lucy Beaumont, Nigel de Brulier, John Sainpolis and Edward Earle. A tremendously moving and spectacular production is promised in "The Viennese Medley." It has as its background the aristocracy of Vienna, before, during and after the war. The two central figures are Fanny Von Berg, played by Anna Q. Nilsson and Count Von Hartig played by Conway Tearle. Fanny's family is thrown into consternation when she innocently becomes involved in a scandal forcing the postponement of her marriage to the Count. After a period spent on a farm allowing the scandal to subside, Fanny returns to Vienna where the populace is suffering from the inroad of war profiteers. She does everything in her power to relieve the distress of those in want.

It is doubtful if any picture dealing with war and post-war developments in Europe has painted in such realistic colors the suffering of those caught in the maelstrom. There is a vivid personal story in the development of the lives and characters of the people met in "The Viennese Medley" and behind it all is a graphic presentation of what the war has meant to Europe. Months have been spent in the perfection of every detail that would contribute to a correct picturing of the incidents utilized in the unfolding of the story.

"TWENTIETH CENTURY UNLIMITED"

SIR PHILIP GIBBS is the author of "Heirs Apparent" which is being produced by Edwin Carewe under the title of "Twentieth Century Unlimited." The period is four years after the war in England, a time of recklessness and cynicism and discontent with mid-Victorian morality.

Because they returned home intoxicated after a rather unconventional party, both Audrey Nye and Julian Perry are expelled from the schools they are attending at Oxford. When Julian's car in which they have started for London, breaks down they decide to walk to the city. In the course of their hike, which takes a couple of days, they are obliged to stop at inns where they are seen by friends of both their families and when they reach home they find that damaging reports have preceeded them.

Julian is the son of the editor of a popular jingoistic journal and the girl is the daughter of the vicar of an Episcopal parish. It soon transpires that Julian falls violently in love with the young wife of an army officer.

The gay and somewhat dissolute life of the younger set in London is depicted in realistic detail as the story weaves itself around the tangled lives of these pleasure-mad and hectic descendants of a conservative generation. In the end they are led to see the folly of their extravagances.

"THE RECKLESS LADY"

ANOTHER Philip Gibbs story included in the First National program is "The Reckless Lady" produced by Robert T. Kane, with Belle Bennett in the title role. This story was originally entitled "The Eternal Hazard."

Colonel Fleming of the British army in India, leaves his wife and child when he discovers that his neglect of her because of professional duties has driven her to take a lover. She has gone to Italy with her two children and supported them by secret gambling. Fifteen years later, the Colonel, now dismissed from the army, wants to see the children and makes an arrangement whereby his former wife moves to London where the father is living. The daughter, Sylvia, marries a wealthy young furniture manufacturer of Grand Rapids and is enabled to support the family.

Moving to Grand Rapids, she finds her European temperament out of accord with mid-west conventions. To relieve the monotony a little, she flirts with a young Frenchman employed in her husband's factory. He takes the affair seriously and ends by shooting himself, causing no end of scandal in the gossipy community. The story closes with an optimistic note when the young wife discovers that she is going to have a child and appears ready to make the best of quiet domesticity with her faithful husband. "The Reckless Lady" is a beautifully appealing story with the mother love theme paramount.

Scenes from "Irene" a First National picture presented by John E. McCormick, and starring Colleen Moore. An adaptation of the musical comedy of the same name.

"Irene" A Colleen Moore Starring Vehicle

"IRENE," reported to be the finest picture Colleen Moore has ever had, with its spectacular effects and its humorous and dramatic values, is completed. It is an adaptation of the musical comedy by James Montgomery which is known the country over. The theme in this instance is "Clothes Make the Woman." The locale is New York and the time is the present.

Irene O'Dare, a beautiful girl of the slums, is transformed into a lady and becomes a member of New York's smart social set. Her chance comes when Donald Marshall, who is interested in boosting a continental modiste recently arrived in New York, decides to use Irene as an advertisement for the modiste's gowns. Irene is passed off as a lady, a role she is able to fill as the result of long experience in imitating women of fashion in the store where she had worked. Her sweetness of character wins many friends and eventually she makes permanent her social advantages by marrying Donald. There are many striking and beautiful sequences in the picture, notably the fashion show shown in color through a new photographic process.

"MISS NOBODY"

IN sharp contrast to "Irene" will be Miss Moore's second production for the new season. It is entitled "Miss Nobody" and has as its central character a girl, Barbara Brown, whose father has deserted his wife and child to roam the Southern seas. The mother's death leaves Barbara at sixteen, homeless and penniless and New Year's finds her taking refuge with the mistress of a luxurious residence provided by a millionaire patron. Barbara's fresh, young beauty attracts the covetous eye of the aged rove by the name of Hardiman and eventually she is forced to flee, adopting the disguise of a tramp. She finds a protector in a fellow tramp who saves her from various perils. In time Hardiman suffers a change of heart and provides Barbara with an adequate home. It turns out that the tramp who has befriended the girl is a son of the millionaire.

There are ample opportunities for comedy, pathos and romance in "Miss Nobody" which provides a characterization unlike any of Miss Moore's previous portrayals.

JOHNNY HINES' PICTURES

JOHNNY HINES will start off the new year with "Rainbow Riley," based on Thompson Buchanan's well-known play "The Cub" in which Douglass Fairbanks starred on the stage a number of years ago. The story concerns a cub reporter, Steve Riley, who is despatched to the Kentucky mountains to cover a feud. He meets Alice Renlow, a beautiful mountain girl, daughter of the leader of one of the factions and Jessie White, also a mountain girl, who chances to be the daughter of the leader of the opposing faction. Despite her lack of charm, Jessie makes a play for the young reporter. This triangular romance helps to complicate matters considerably and there is a chase over the mountains in which Riley is pursued by both clans. He is finally trapped in a cabin surrounded by clansmen. Alice Renlow and her brother gain entrance through an under ground passage and help the prisoner to escape. In the meanwhile Riley has managed to send reports of the feud to his newspaper and when he returns is lauded for his brilliant work.

The story has snap and action all through, is filled with humorous incidents and the character of the reporter is just the sort of thing for Johnny Hines.

Another vehicle for the C. C. Burr star is "The Brown Derby," based on the musical comedy by S. S. Merlin and Bryant Marlow. The locale is New York's east side and the theme has to do with a promising pugilist suffering from an inferiority complex, although he is successful in amateur bouts. This pugilist, Battling Bertie as he is called, is made the objective in a bet between a wealthy young sportsman and a fight promoter, who is certain any capable man can be made a success once he is imbued with confidence in himself. Bertie is made to wear a brown derby which is supposed to bring luck and success to the wearer. The plan works perfectly in giving the small time pugilist sufficient confidence and he sweeps all before him, including the girl he loves.

"PALS FIRST"

"PALS FIRST" is an adaptation of the play by Lee Wilson Dodge, which had a long run in New York and was popular on the road.

It is a comedy-drama, the story having to do with the unexpected return to his home of a young man who is supposed to be dead. Danny Rowland and Dominie, two vagrants, are welcomed by the colored caretaker of an old mansion near Nashville because he believes that Danny is the young master, Dick Castleton, who has been away for two years. Between Danny, who has escaped from jail, and Dominie, who has also served time, there is a strong bond of friendship and the latter is anxious to get away from the estate, fearing that Danny will be exposed.

Leon Errol in scenes from "The Lunatic at Large," a First National picture adapted from the story of that title by J. Storer Clouston.

Leon Errol In "The Lunatic At Large"

LEON ERROL will follow his success in "Clothes Make the Pirate" with a comedy interpretation as the leading figure in "The Lunatic at Large," adapted from the novel by J. Storer Clouston. Dorothy Mackaill and Kenneth McKenna are in the cast directed by Fred Newmeyer.

Sam Smith, exponent of the easy life, and a man with no home or object except simply living, is tricked into a private sanatorium for the wealthy feeble-minded, where he is believed to be a rich patient who was expected there. He meets Bill Carroll, who has been railroaded to the asylum by a twin brother who is insane, but who wants to wed Beatrix Staynes, who is already betrothed to Bill.

They are so much alike that Beatrix cannot tell the difference and is going on with the wedding, not knowing she is marrying an insane man.

Bill enlists the aid of Sam who escapes and makes his way to Beatrix's home where a party is being staged to celebrate the wedding which is to take place in a dirigible right after the party. Guards arrive to get Sam who escapes again. Sam reaches the aviation field in time to grab a dangling ladder from the dirigible. He climbs aboard and succeeds in stopping the wedding. The dirigible is wrecked and lands in the yard of the asylum where Bill is waiting for Beatrix. In the crash, Henry is hit on the head and regains his mind.

Bill and Beatrix are married and all ends happily.

"THE SECOND CHANCE"

"THE Second Chance" is from a story by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, directed by Lambert Hillyer at the West Coast studios. It is a society drama with a racing atmosphere in which sixteen-year-old Caroline Logan is sentenced to a reform school by a young judge, Clay Jeffries. Years later, after being released from the reformatory, Caroline goes to Europe and transforms herself into a charming young woman who marries a British officer and is left a widow when he dies. She is introduced to the smart set of New York where eventually she meets and falls in love with the judge who sentenced her. Both of them become involved in a race track scandal, and there are many complications before their innocence is proven.

The story has a distinctly smart atmosphere and offers ample opportunities for character development. The cast includes Anna Q. Nilsson, Huntley Gordon, Charles Murray, Mike Donlin, Dale Fuller, Sam De Grasse and Corliss Palmer.

"MEMORY LANE"

THE Louis B. Mayer-John M. Stahl contribution to First National's program will be "Memory Lane," an original play by Mr. Stahl and Benjamin Glazer, with Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel featured in the cast. Other players are William Haines, John Stepping, Eugenia Ford and Frankie Darrow.

The locale is in a New England village where Mary and Joie are sweethearts planning a future together but unfortunately the parents of Mary arrange a matrimonial alliance with Jimmy whose financial prospects appear bright. A year after the marriage, Mary is stirred by the news that Joie has returned to town. True to her marriage vows, Mary decides not to see him but she dreams of Joie as an ideal lover who during the past year has achieved success and wealth in New York.

It happens that Joie is invited to Mary's home by her husband and instead of the fascinating man she had pictured, she is appalled by the appearance of her former sweetheart. He wears a checkered suit, paste diamonds, showy tie, a derby set at a vicious angle and carries a cigar in the side of his mouth—altogether a repellant picture to the idealistic young woman who thereafter is content with her husband.

Pictorial episodes from "Just Suppose," in which Richard Barthelmess is starred. It is an Inspiration production adapted from the play by A. E. Thomas and released by First National.

Scenes from the Earl Hudson production "Too Much Money," a First National picture adapted from the story by Israel Zangwill.

Norma Talmadge to Star in "Kiki"

FOLLOWING her great achievement in "Graustark," Norma Talmadge will be seen in "Kiki" in the Spring of the new year. This is an adaptation of the famous Belasco stage success in which Leonore Ulric starred two years ago. It is being given an elaborate production by Joseph M. Schenck under the direction of Clarence Brown. Included in the cast are Ronald Colman, Gertrude Astor, Marc McDermott, George K. Arthur and Frankie Darrow. Hans Kraly made the adaptation.

"Kiki" is a street gamin of Paris, ungoverned but withall a fascinating little person with no respect for either reputations or conventions. Determined to become a dancer, she gains entrance to a manager's office by a ruse. Her naive replies to the manager's questions and her general devil-may-care attitude intrigue his interest and he allows her a try-out.

The irrepressible Kiki offends the star of the production thereby starting a feud around which much of the action of the play centers, as the street gamin reveals unexpected resources of feminine shrewdness, in time outwitting her rival. Kiki is an extraordinarily inspiring part for Norma Talmadge affording ample scope for this talented star to run the gamut of drama, comedy and pathos.

"THE FAR CRY"

PRODUCTION of "The Far Cry," based on the successful play by Arthur Richman, was completed at the West Coast Studios several weeks ago under the direction of Balboni. Numbered in the cast are Blanche Sweet, Jack Mulhall, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman, John Sainpolis, Dorothy Revier, Matilda Comont and William Austin.

"The Far Cry" is a society drama illustrating the social unrest of the present generation. Claire Marsh is the daughter of an American mother who has drifted away from the conventional moral code of her country from sheer slackness and inertia and is living in Paris. Claire, herself a social rebel, although still little more than a girl has already married and divorced a dissolute Frenchman.

At the time of the play, her ardent admirer is Dick Clayton, a young American studying art in Paris. There enters a wordly-wise Count who makes a play for Claire thereby arousing the jealousy of Dick. After a series of misunderstandings, the young people are content to patch up their differences and abandon the gay life of Paris and return to America.

"SILKY ANNE"

AN original story by Edward Clark temporarily titled "Silky Anne" has been selected as the next starring vehicle for Constance Talmadge for the First National program, according to an announcement just received from the office of that company.

The screen adaptation of "Silky Anne" is being made by Raymond L. Schrock and Edward Clark. Sidney Franklin will direct.

Miss Talmadge has been peculiarly fortunate in her last few pictures, notably "Her Night of Romance" and "Her Sister from Paris" and it is probable that she will continue for the time being to give portrayals in a similar comedy vein. The story in preparation now profits by the colorful atmosphere which provides such an appropriate setting for Miss Talmadge.

"MOLASSES"

PUBLISHED in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "Buccandeers of the Bahamas," a story now called "Molasses" will be produced by M. C. Levee. Kenyon Gambier is the author.

Jim Duane's father is rich and crude, and when Jim falls in love with Roderica Vallender his father is a serious handicap, for Roderica's mother, though poor, is proportionately proud and considers the younger Duane inferior and ineligible. But the Vallenders do need money and their uncle Jason has left them four million dollars worth of real "paducah" rye in Nassau, Bahamas, for which four million may be had if bootleggers will honestly transport the rye to the "dry" United States.

How to find an honest bootlegger is now the problem of Mrs. Vallender. She gets Jim to enlist the services of his capable if crude parent. The scene shifts to Nassau, where Jim meets Rosamond Fair, a clever, pretty girl of no social pretensions. She saves his life and uses her influence to prevent his getting into the lawbreaking tangle. Jim's father perceives that the Vallenders are double-crossing his son, and merely waiting to get the money from the rye.

An English lord, of impoverished estate, also bootlegging, has turned up and won Roderica, who, however, pretends still to be betrothed to Jim. By a ruse which is effective if ungentlemanly, Duane, senior, shows up Roderica's "devotion" to Jim and heads his son toward Rosamond Fair who is obviously the right girl. Roderica is to wed the lord, but a reckless bootlegger abducts her and she comes in for all the notoriety and sensationalism she and her aristocratic mother have unscrupulously sought to avoid by using the Duanes.

A group of scenes from "The Reckless Lady," a Robert T. Kane production of the story of that title by Philip Gibbs and distributed by First National.

"Memory Lane" is a John M. Stahl production to be offered by First National. The above scenes are taken from the picture.

Corinne Griffith in "Mlle. Modiste"

CORINNE GRIFFITH'S first production for the new season will be "Mlle. Modiste," a version of the celebrated musical comedy by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert in which Fritzi Scheff won renown on the stage some years ago. The play has been given a sumptuous production under direction of Robert Z. Leonard. The cast supporting Miss Griffith includes Norman Kerry, Rose Dione, Willard Louis and Dorothy Cummings.

Fifi, a salesgirl in Mme. Cecile's Parisian millinery shop, has ambitions to become a great singer, so she rejects an offer of marriage from Gaston, Mme. Cecile's worthless son, and, also, an offer from Capt. Etienne, nephew of the Count de St. Mar, because she knows the uncle would never consent. Hiram Bent, a wealthy American, loans her money to leave the shop and embark upon her musical career.

A year later, she is a sensational success in London, repays Bent and returns to Paris. Here she is scheduled to sing at a Charity Garden Party, given by the Count St. Mar, but he discovers who she really is and forbids her to see Etienne. Hiram Bent brings about a meeting between her and Etienne, however, in which they both admit their love for each other, but she still declares she will not marry him until the Count asks her to do so. She sings and the Count, not being able to see her, is charmed by her voice and invites her to dine with him. She comes; he recognizes her again and is won over, pleading with her now to marry his lovelorn nephew.

"ASHES"

FOLLOWING "Mlle. Modiste," Corinne Griffith will produce "Ashes" by Reginald Good. The theme concerns itself with mother love and a stage career. The mother in this instance is torn between her professional ambition and her duty to the young child forced to travel about the country on one night stands. She is induced by her husband, who is something of a rotter, to place the child with relatives while they continue the tour.

Five years later, on the eve of the actress' sensational debut in New York, word is received of the death of the child by drowning. Of course, she is distracted but continues the performance. Presently she discovers that her faithless husband has fallen a victim to the charms of her youngest sister. After proving to this sister that her husband is little more than a cad, she divorces him and in the end is free to marry a friend who has been faithful to her through all her tribulations. There are many emotional possibilities for Corinne Griffith in the role of the actress.

"TOO MUCH MONEY"

A NEW version of the love triangle is found in "Too Much Money" based on the story by Israel Zangwill in which Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson are featured, under the direction of John Francis Dillon, supervised by Earl Hudson.

Robert Broadley, immensely wealthy, is devotedly in love with his wife but instead of leading a contented life together there are repeated clashes due to too much money, according to Dana Stuart, a club man who is a friend of the family. Stuart suggests that the solution is for Broadley to pretend that he has lost his fortune thereby forcing a simplified manner of living.

The couple move to an apartment in the Bronx, the husband pretending that he is seeking work. Meanwhile, Stuart seeks to win Annabel but without success. He plays his trump card when he converts all of Broadley's assets into negotiable securities and tells Annabel that he is going to Europe, exposes Broadley's trick and begs her to go with him.

"THE DANCER OF PARIS"

ROBERT KANE offers a Michael Arlen story in "The Dancer of Paris" directed by Alfred A. Santell with Dorothy Mackaill, Conway Tearle and Robert Cain in the cast.

The plot concerns Sir Roy Martel, English diplomatist who has met Consuelo, fabulously wealthy American girl in the United States. In their brief affair he has been in earnest and she in fun.

They meet in Paris quite some time after. Sir Roy is attached to the British Embassy. Consuelo is the rage of the bright places of Paris. Noel Anson, friend and co-worker of Sir Roy, meets Consuelo and falls madly in love but makes little headway with her.

Sir Roy breaks down from overwork. One night he calls at the apartment upstairs to ask for a little quiet. He faces Consuelo. Her presence has a magic effect. Sir Roy immediately passes the long awaited crisis. But it is not Sir Roy that Consuelo eventually accepts. Noel Anson wins out.

HARRY LANGDON

Comedian Has Meteoric Rise

When Mack Sennett announced that he had a new comedy find in the person of one Harry Langdon, a vaudevillian and ex-cartoonist, the "wise ones" of the industry waited to be shown. They had heard of comedy "finds" before.

And the surprising thing was that Langdon did "show" the wise ones in short order. His very first comedy, "Picking Peaches," clicked immediately in the theatres, and in succeeding releases the critics and the public discovered a new comedy luminary on the horizon. Such pictures as "Flickering Youth," "The Cat's Meow," "The First Hundred Years," "The Luck of the Foolish," "All Night Long," "Boobs in the Woods," "Feet of Mud," "The Sea Squawk," "His Marriage Wow," "Lucky Stars," "Remember When?" and "The White Wing's Bride" speedily established him as an expert in the coaxing of the chuckle and extraction of the hearty laugh.

All of this led to his new contract with First National, under which he will be given the opportunity to outdo all his previous efforts in the comedy field. His productions will now be brought up to full feature length, the first to be "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," now in production. Few comedians have made the grade in this type of production, but those who know Langdon and his work have no doubts whatever of the fresh triumphs that await him in the feature comedy field.

COLLEEN MOORE

Vivacious and Appealing Star

Although Colleen Moore will perhaps always be thought of as "The Flaming Youth Girl," her work since that time has displayed a depth of range, a versatility and a brilliance such as few of the younger stars can boast of.

Born at Port Huron, Mich., and educated at the Convent of the Holy Name, Tampa, Fla., Miss Moore embarked upon a picture career at an early age. During a period of four and one-half years she played featured roles and leads in no less than thirty-two productions before she was rewarded by stardom, but she clung tenaciously to her faith and confidence in herself, firm in the belief that her efforts would one day bear fruit.

Such productions as "The Perfect Flapper," "Flaming Youth," "Painted People" and "Temperament" established her as the incomparable delineator of flapper characters.

It was "So Big," however, that really established the fact that she was entitled to consideration as one of the first-rank actresses of the screen.

"Sally" presented her in a glittering extravaganza of comedy, drama and beauty, which will be paralleled in her current production, "Irene," also based upon a musical comedy success. "We Moderns," which just preceded it, provided her with a super-flapper role, plus some real, dramatic moments. "Miss Nobody" will be next.

CORINNE GRIFFITH

Star of Brilliant Appeal

This blue eyed daughter of Texas occupies a screen niche which may be well called unique. Her appeal combines a delicate and wistful beauty with an aristocratic refinement and poise.

Her current production is "Mlle. Modiste," which should afford an unparalleled opportunity for the sort of fashion display and luxurious lavishness expected in the Corinne Griffith vehicles. "Mlle. Modiste" will be followed by "Ashes." Her previous picture, "Infatuation," is now playing its first run engagements and receiving the usual popular acclaim accorded her productions.

Miss Griffith started her career with Vitagraph on the West Coast, after a brief term as a professional dancer. She was with Vitagraph for several years, appearing in such well remembered pictures as "Thin Ice," "The Climbers," "The Garter Girl" and others. "The Common Law" for Selznick and "Six Days" for Goldwyn followed.

Her first picture for First National was Frank Lloyd's production of the famous novel, "Black Oxen," in which her portrayal of Madame Zatyany won instant appreciation and made her one of the most talked of figures on the screen. Other successes have followed in rapid succession, including "Lilies of the Field," the picturization of a popular stage play, "Single Wives," "Love's Wilderness," "Declasse," "The Marriage Whirl," and "Classified."

JOHNNY HINES

A Real "Live Wire"

Johnny Hines had a somewhat varied but always successful career on the stage and screen, which eventually brought him under contract to First National, where he is starring in a series of C. C. Burr productions. Hines' first under this contract was "The Live Wire," and his second, "Rainbow Riley," has just been completed. He is about to start "The Brown Derby."

Hines is a native of Colorado, where he was born in Golden. He is of a theatrical family, his older brothers and sisters having appeared on the legitimate stage and in vaudeville for a number of years.

Johnny is a graduate of the College of the City of New York, and it was not long after his graduation that he started a theatrical career. He was a talented dancer and after a short stay in vaudeville and the legitimate he went into musical comedy, where he scored his first big success.

Gradually Hines drifted into pictures exclusively and he has been winning an exceptionally wide following ever since. Among his earlier pictures were "Miss Petticoats," "Tillie Wakes Up," and "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Then came "A Scrap of Paper," "Neighbors," "Hearts of Gold," "The Little Intruder," and "Eastward Ho."

The Torchy Comedies followed for Educational, and then Johnny was seen in such pictures as "Sure Fire Flint," "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," "Luck," "Little Johnny Jones," "Conductor 1492" and "The Crackerjack."

ANNA Q. NILSSON

Established Screen Favorite

The youthful grace of dainty Anna Q. Nilsson is something which always attracts the beholder's attention at first sight and to the average citizen it would seem impossible that this star of filmland could possibly be classed as a veteran performer of stage and screen. Yet veteran she is, though not in point of years as compiled by the census-taker. For as a mere child she trod the Thespian boards in Sweden, where she was born and received a stage-training so thorough and efficient in its results that she brought to the silver sheet a perfect technique.

Coming to this country in the days when the picture industry was beginning to show signs of its future strength as an entertainment factor, Miss Nilsson, who had already established herself as a foot-light favorite with the American public, was quickly lured away from the "legitimate" to the silent drama. A perfect screen type, her rise to fame in the new branch of art was rapid and certain. The leading picture companies all wanted her badly and vied with each other in bids for her services.

Her excellent work during last year in Paramount's "The Top of the World"; First National's "One Way Street," "The Talker," "Winds of Chance," and "The Splendid Road," bears eloquent witness to the little actress's versatility. She will soon be seen in "Too Much Money," a forthcoming First National release.

LEON ERROL

Inimitable, Popular Comedian

Few comedians have been dearer to the heart of Broadway than Leon Errol—he of the famous jelly legs—and now, thanks to the silver screen, that popularity is rapidly become nation, and even world, wide. His style of comedy is unique without being forced, funny without being vulgar and his sense of humorous values is such as comes only from long experience.

He first made his bow to cinema audiences in "Yolanda," where he gave indication of what was to be expected of him in this field, but it was in "Sally," in support of Colleen Moore, that he had his first real opportunity to "do his stuff."

As a result of this, Sam Rork persuaded him to undertake the leading role in "Clothes Make the Pirate," where his antics created nothing short of a sensation. His style of comedy showed to splendid advantage in the story of the meek little tailor whom pirate clothes turned in to a roaring, fire-eating buccaneer, leading him, on his return, to assume his rightful place in his home.

So great was his success in this super-comedy special that First National promptly signed Errol as a star, as the result of which he will be seen in "The Lunatic at Large," included in the forthcoming group from this company. In this picture he has been given every advantage in the way of direction and story to bring back out his unique talents.

LEWIS STONE

Brilliant and Popular

It was a clear case of "the stage's loss and the screen's gain," when Lewis Stone forsook the "legitimate" field for the broader domain of motion pictures. Among the many brilliant successes he achieved before the footlights, his unforgettable performances in "The Misleading Lady," "King, Queen, Jack," "Bunny," "Nancy Lee" and "The Bird Of Paradise" loom up brightly.

Metro was the first company to secure the services of this talented actor, whose appearances in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Scaramouche" at once established him firmly in the good graces of the picture fans. Stone's pantomime is of the subtle type that is so peculiarly effective in swaying an audience without resorting to ranting methods. In emotional roles he rises to spectacular heights by dint of sheer personal magnetism, in domestic drama his freedom from artificial constraint and perfect ease of manner have an unfailing audience appeal. And, to crown all, he possesses that keen sense of humor which enables him to get the full value out of any comedy situation.

One of the most active performers on the screen to-day, Mr. Stone last year was featured in Metro-Goldwyn's "Cheaper to Marry"; First National's "Inez from Hollywood," "The Lost World," "Fine Clothes," "The Talker," "The Lady Who Lied," "What Fools Men." He will next be seen in the same company's "The Girl From Montmartre."

DORIS KENYON

A Star of Many Talents

Ever since she graduated from Columbia University, Doris Kenyon has divided much of her time between the legitimate stage and the screen. She was all popular on Broadway before she made her debut on the screen. The stage won her back at times, but picture fans throughout the world were so insistent that she at last decided to cast her lot entirely with pictures. First National signed her to a contract which will make her adhere to this decision for some time to come.

Miss Kenyon is an exceptionally talented girl, whose ability is not confined to acting. In fact her literary work has won her considerable recognition and her name was mentioned for honor in "Who's Who In America."

Miss Kenyon's first part was in the late Victor Herbert's "Princess Pat" in New York. Then she turned to the films playing opposite George Beban in "The Pawn of Fate." She spent three years in pictures after that, then returned to the stage.

Among the more recent pictures in which Miss Kenyon has appeared are the late Thomas Ince's "Idle Tongues" and Samuel Goldwyn's "A Thief in Paradise." The first picture under her First National contract was "If I Marry Again." This was followed by "The Half Way Girl" and "The Unguarded Hour." She will next be seen in "Men of Steel," just completed by First National.

SAM RORK

The Showman of the Screen

No quality is more essential to the motion picture producer who would hit the bullseye of public taste than that intangible something that constitutes showmanship—a trait more often talked of than found. One producer, at least, who possesses that quality in liberal measure is Sam Rork, whose experience in the theatrical field before entering pictures runs the gamut from program boy to Broadway producer. Not alone in New York was his legitimate stage experience, however.

During the past season he contributed to the First National schedule that remarkable comedy success, "Clothes Make the Pirate"—a showmanlike answer to the insatiable demand for genuine comedy, in which he brought together a strong story, a splendid comedian and a staff which brought the most from both. Now, in association with Rork, Marion Fairfax is producing "The Desert Healer."

Leaving a position as Mack Sennett's personal representative, some years ago, Rork entered production with "The Thunderbolt," starring Katherine MacDonald and Thomas Meighan. Four other pictures with Miss MacDonald followed. Then, in affiliation with Selig he made "The Rosary" and a splendid series of two-reel dramas. "The Spoilers," in association with Jesse Hampton, came next. Three box-office successes through First National, "Ponjola," "Inez from Hollywood" and "The Talker" followed.

EARL HUDSON

A Successful Producer

Horatio Alger never conceived a career that surpasses that of Earl Hudson, who although still a young man has reached heights in the film world that many struggle years to attain. He is supervisor of one of First National's Eastern production units, and has made some outstanding successes.

Standing out among his greatest achievements are such picture as "The Lost World," "Sundown," "Flaming Youth," "The Perfect Flapper," "Her Temporary Husband," "Men of Steel," "So Big," "The Half Way Girl" and "Chickie."

Born in Elgin, Ill., he started his career working in a watch factory. From that he went into newspaper work, then into trade journals in the motion picture field, and then into the publicity game in motion pictures. When First National decided to start their own productions Hudson went to California as business manager of a unit. Success was so instant that he was given charge and produced box office knockouts.

Then he went East to New York and took charge of the production units of First National there for a year, making "Chickie," "The Halfway Girl," "The Making of O'Malley," "The Knockout," "The Scarlet Saint," "Too Much Money" and others. He is now finishing "Men of Steel," which is to be one of the biggest specials of the year. Then he will devote his entire time to one producing unit making four pictures a year with his hand constantly at the helm.

AL ROCKETT

Prominent Producing Executive

Al Rockett's business career began in the service of the American Smelting and Refining Company. But the lure of the screen exercised an irresistible fascination for him and both he and his brother, Ray, forsook their native state of Missouri and fled to the home of the silent drama in California. In the fall of 1914 Al became assistant director with Balboa Company. Two years later he became purchasing agent at Universal.

After five years with Universal Rockett and his brother, Ray, formed their own producing organization and made several feature pictures including "Truant Husbands" and "Keeping Up With Lizzie." Meanwhile he and his brother had been planning to make a picture showing the life of Abraham Lincoln, so after making several pictures they turned to "Abraham Lincoln" and the result was a picture which was widely acclaimed as one of the best yet made. Photoplay Magazine awarded the brothers a gold medal for producing the best picture of the year.

Then Rockett went with First National as assistant to General Manager Richard A. Rowland. Later he was made business manager of the Eastern production units of First National in New York. And when Rowland decided to change his production policy in the East Rockett was made a production supervisor making four pictures a year. His first picture under the First National banner will be "Puppets."

CHARLES C. BURR

An Experienced Producer

C. C. Burr, producer of the Johnny Hines starring vehicles for First National, went to the production side of the industry through the mill of the newspaper.

His entrance into motion pictures was with employment in the business department of Paramount, following which he became advertising manager and was later advanced to the office of assistant general manager. He resigned in 1920 "to get out on his own," which resulted in his signing of Johnny Hines and the production of the famous "Torchy" comedies. Twenty-six of these were made with signal success which prompted Burr to inaugurate a more ambitious production schedule for his star. This resulted in Johnny's first feature-length comedy, "Burn 'em up Barnes," which proved an instantaneous hit. Following "Burn 'em up Barnes" came "Sure-Fire Flint," "Little Johnny Jones," "Conductor 1492," "Speed Spook," "Early Bird" and "Crackerjack." These were so successful that they attracted the attention of First National, who secured Burr's services and that of his star.

"The Live Wire," the first of the C. C. Burr-Johnny Hines productions proved Johnny's tremendous drawing power, and established him permanently as one of the big First National money-making stars. The latest production completed for First National by the Burr-Hines combination is "Rainbow Riley," an adaptation of Thompson Buchanan's play, "The Cub."

C. GRAHAM BAKER

One of Leading Scenarists

Backed by an experience that takes in every phase of the art of picture making, C. Graham Baker has long held a high place among the best-known scenarists of the industry. A comparatively recent acquisition of Inspiration Pictures, he has already worked on "The Beautiful City," "Just Suppose," and "The Kid From Montana."

Graduating from the newspapers as special writer and cartoonist, Baker started his picture career at Vitagraph, and the greatly-improved type of pictures during the last two years of its life, was due to Baker's guidance of its editorial destinies. Hutchinson's "The Clean Heart," Booth Tarkington's "Pampered Youth," and Sabatini's "Captain Blood," were titled and edited by him; and his were the picturizations of Morgan Robertson's "Masters of Men," George Barr McCutcheon's "The Man From Brodney's," and Emerson Hough's "The Man Next Door." Such notable financial successes as "Pioneer Trails," and "The Midnight Alarm" were originals—he also directed Agnes Ayres in a series of short subjects. Included among Baker's other picturizations were those which headed Corinne Griffith toward the top,—"The Broadway Bubble," "What's Your Reputation Worth?" "Love Watches," "The Whisper Market," "The Garter Girl," "Moral Fibre," "The Fortune Hunter," "The Ninety and Nine," "The Little Minister," and "Her Lord and Master."

MARION FAIRFAX

Leading Author Becomes Producer

An important figure for some time in First National's production activity, Marion Fairfax, screen author extraordinary, has now turned producer and in association with Sam Rork is filming "The Desert Healer" for First National release.

Prior to "The Desert Healer," Miss Fairfax supervised "Clothes Make the Pirate," the Sam Rork comedy sensation. Just before that she was editor-in-chief of the First National units at the Biograph studio.

Among the many flawless continuities which she has prepared were those for "The Lost World" and "The Perfect Flapper." In association with Holman Day she wrote the titles for "Flaming Youth." Productions made under her editorial direction at First National included "Single Wives," "For Sale" and "Flirting with Love." After coming East she edited "The Lost World," "If I Marry Again," "So Big" and "As Man Desires."

Her earlier career in pictures, which has been varied, included association with Famous, Goldwyn and Marshal Neilan.

Miss Fairfax brings to her important work in pictures a rich and varied background of experiences that embraces both the stage and screen worlds. Before turning to the silent drama she was the author of a number of Broadway play successes, including "The Talker," which was picturized by Sam Rork, "The Ways and Means," "The Builders" and "Mrs. Boltay's Daughter."

HOWARD HIGGIN

Has Had Rapid Rise

Director Howard Higgin, who recently completed "The Reckless Lady" for First National, started out in life as an architect but his love for things theatrical led him into that field of endeavor, first as designer of stage settings on the Pacific Coast for John Cort, next as property man for Cecil De Mille. The latter engagement decided his destiny. It was a case of development by rapid periods, such as when he forsook the property-room atmosphere for the wider range of scenario-writer and adaptor, turning out, in collaboration with Sada Cowan, hits like "Fashion Row," "Don't Doubt Your Husband," "Smouldering Fires," "Broken Barriers," "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," "To-Morrow's Love," "Changing Husbands" and "The Lighter of Flames."

Next he leaped in as an art director and production manager, among the results of his activities being "Whispering Chorus," "Old Wives," "Male and Female," "The Affairs of Anatole." When he was loaned to Famous Players he worked on Mary Pickford's "The Little American," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Stella Maris," and "The Little Princess"; Douglas Fairbanks also enlisting his services in the making of "Knickerbocker Buckaro." So much for past history! In more recent times "The New Commandment" and "In the Name of Love" stand out as screen winners and testimonials to the ability of this director.

SIDNEY OLCOTT

A Leader Among Directors

Sidney Olcott has perhaps had as wide experience in the direction of pictures as almost any director in the industry, for he is one of the real pioneers. An actor in 1906, he was Kalem's first salaried director when he made for that concern "From the Manger to the Cross." He has made a large number of successful productions since then.

Olcott was only recently signed by Inspiration Pictures and his first release through First National for that company will be "The Kid From Montana." It will be followed by "The Amateur Gentleman," a picturization of Jeffrey Farnol's novel.

Among the pictures which first established Olcott with the leading directors of the industry was "Timothy's Quest" and later he was assigned to the direction of "Little Old New York," which resulted in a real triumph.

"The Green Goddess," in which George Arliss created a sensation on both the stage and screen was directed in the picture version by Olcott. He followed that success with another equally as great, "Monsieur Beaucaire," and then came "The Humming Bird," in which Gloria Swanson scored so heavily.

As a director with Paramount, Olcott made among other successful ones during the past year "Not So Long Ago," and "The Best People," both adapted from successful stage plays.

J. BOYCE SMITH

Inspiration's General Manager

J. Boyce Smith, General Manager of Inspiration Pictures, Inc. was born and educated in New York City and comes of an old New York family. After graduating from one of the public schools he prepared for Columbia College at the Collegiate School. He studied for seven years at Columbia University, graduating with honor from the College and the Law School, being awarded four degrees, and being elected to Phi Beta Kappa and to the Editorial Board of the Columbia Law Review. In addition to his scholastic achievements he was a successful athlete and a leader in undergraduate activities.

In 1904 he began practicing law in New York City and before entering the motion picture field had become the head of the firm of Smith, Schenck & McDavitt in the Equitable Building, 120 Broadway. He was one of the original incorporators of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., in May, 1921, and served as its Secretary and Counsel. In the re-organization in October, 1924, he became Vice-President and General Manager and has since served in these capacities. He has made a thorough study during the past five years of the legal, financial and practical aspects of motion picture production.

J. Boyce Smith is a nationally known figure in the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity and organizer and treasurer of the Theta Delta Chi Club of New York.

BEN LYON

He's Always in Demand

Although just out of his teens, Ben Lyon is nevertheless a veteran in stage and screen experience. Seven years ago he began playing boy's parts with the World Film Company when he was almost as much an infant as the industry. Leaving the screen for the stage he played in thirty-two stock productions and played leads in such successes as "Mary the Third," and "Seventeen."

He first came to the attention of First National when he played the role of Boris in "Potash and Perlmutter" and was promptly engaged for "Flaming Youth," which was followed by his signing a long term contract with First National.

Always a prime favorite for leading roles opposite the screen's feminine stars, he rarely has a chance for rest. It is just one picture after another. A glance at his pictures of the past year bears out the contention that he is one of the hardest worked leading men in films. "The Necessary Evil," "The Pace That Thrills," "The New Commandment," "Bluebeard's Seven Wives" and "The Reckless Lady" represent his year's work. And he is now playing the featured male role in "The Savage" which is being made under the supervision of Earl Hudson for First National.

Among Ben's past outstanding pictures are "Flaming Youth," "Painted People," "The White Moth," "Wine of Youth," "Wages of Virtue," and "Lily of the Dust."

LLOYD HUGHES

Gifted Screen Player

The statecraft of the late Thomas H. Ince in discovering and acquiring new talent for the screen was never better exemplified than when he drew Lloyd Hughes from his secluded life as a student at the Polytechnic Institute in Los Angeles and enlisted him as a moving picture recruit. It didn't take long for the "regulars" to admit that a natural-born actor had appeared among them.

His first big hit was scored as leading man with Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country." That established him as a gifted exponent of straight drama, but it was quickly to be seen that he was an actor to whose expert hands any kind of a role could be safely entrusted. An "all-around" player, in the true sense of the words, he was, and is always in demand. During the season of 1923 he was featured in seven productions; 1924 registered him in six leading parts; and during the past year his name shone prominently in the casts of First National's "If I Marry Again," "Declasse," "Sally," "The Lost World," "The Desert Flower," and "The Half Way Girl."

In his last picture for First National, "The Scarlet Saint," he shared the dramatic honors with Mary Astor, with whom he was co-starred, giving a performance which elicited warm praise from critics the country over.

LAMBERT HILLYER

Able and Versatile Director

Lambert Hillyer, still in the sunny thirties, started to tread the literary trail early in life, beginning as a newspaper reporter in his native state of Indiana and graduating into the fiction field, where he became well known as a brilliant writer of short stories. Then the theatre called him and there followed several years of successful endeavor in stock and vaudeville. From the stage to the screen was an easy transition in his case, and in the days of the Paramount-Artcraft organization the name of Lambert Hillyer became known to the fans as associated with their Western idol, Bill Hart. For the latter Hillyer directed twenty-five pictures, all big money-makers, thereby winning assured reputation as a successful producer of open-air adventure melodrama. Later he diverged into other lines and proved conclusively that his skill as a dramatist was not confined to Western stuff.

A glance at the releases sponsored by Hillyer for First National during 1925 is sufficient proof of the director's versatility, including "I Want My Man," "The Making of O'Malley," "The Knockout" and "The Unguarded Hour." Each of these pictures deals with totally different phases of life, but all are noted for the dynamic force and swift action which distinguished his early productions. The Hillyer art gospel is a strenuous one, reflected in his work, as vigorous as the amusements he turns to in hours of relaxation.

and The Critics'

Announcements Regarding

"BLUEBEARD'S SEVEN WIVES"

"Ben Lyon gives a clever and often brilliant entertainment in the role of John Hart, a performance which should indicate to him and his producers that in this type of characterization lies the road to greatest screen glory."
Bill Colling in New York Morning Telegraph

"It's crackerjack entertainment, shooting laughs from beginning to end with the rapidity of a machine gun in action. Ben Lyon enacts the name part. He does the best work of his screen career in a role that fits him beautifully."
Dorothy Herzog in New York Daily Mirror

"It's a knockout!
 Ben Lyon as the hero of this amusing tale, does the best work of his career. In fact, Ben is quite amazing. Having seen him play the role, we can't imagine any one else doing it quite as well. Mr. Lyon's air of utter helplessness throughout the picture enlists your sympathy. As the bank clerk he is fine; as the movie hero excellent. In fact, his is a perfect characterization."

Regina Cannon in the New York Graphic

"It is the best of entertainment. Ben Lyon can be an excellent comedian when he has the chance. It is bright and constantly amusing. The Strand audience liked it and other audiences are going to get their full quota of hilarity from this film of the movies, by the movies and for the movies."
Palmer Smith in New York Evening World

"Ben Lyon is fine both as the dashing romantic star and as the hum-drum spec-tacted bank clerk. His feminine fans are due for a revelation when they see him as a bum with several days' growth of beard."

JOHN M. STAHL

Creates Successful Films

If one were asked to define exactly wherein the directorial talent of John M. Stahl lies, it would seem fitting to ascribe it to the possession of a sort of sixth sense which enables him to accurately balance the entertaining values of comedy situations and dramatic appeal. His productions in the past have been chiefly remarkable for the subtle fashion in which delicately adjusted shades of humorous suggestion blend with emotional urge, and the gradual building-up of plot material into an effective crisis.

Early in his picture career these characteristics of the Stahl judgment and execution were widely noted by the critics as distinguishing the work of this director from that of his contemporaries. From the beginning he was never conventional, originality was, and has continued to be, his fetish, nor has he had cause to regret his departures from the beaten path.

A believer in quality rather than quantity, Mr. Stahl has proceeded deliberately in his self-imposed task of turning out first-class screen entertainment. You can't rush him, for in his opinion one extraordinarily good picture, produced with painstaking care, is worth a score of hastily turned-out features that merely strike an average mark. And that is why "Husbands and Lovers," "Why Men Leave Home," of 1924 vintage; and "Fine Clothes," released last year all under First National's banner, registered as joint commercial and artistic successes.

VICTOR McLAGLEN

Reaches Top in Year

Seldom has an actor come to the screen with such a unique record of experiences as Victor McLaglen. Born in London, educated in Christian College, South Africa, McLaglen left home at the age of fourteen and joined the King's Body Guard. At sixteen he was a silver prospector in Canada, two years later he was a professional boxer. He distinguished himself during the World War, being promoted to the rank of Major in the British Army and appointed Provost Marshal of Bagdad.

After the war McLaglen entered pictures in England where his progress was rapid. Less than a year ago he came to America to play the title role in "The Beloved Brute." His work stood out in this picture as that of a finished actor and he established himself as an immediate success. He followed this with one of the featured roles in "The Unholy Three."

Then came McLaglen's big opportunity. Frank Lloyd cast him in the prize role of Poleon Doret in Rex Beach's "Winds of Chance." McLaglen proved to the picture world that his place is in motion pictures with his performance in this picture. His work was so impressive that it resulted in First National signing him to a long term contract.

He is now playing one of the important roles in "Men of Steel," the big steel "special" which is being filmed under the supervision of Earl Hudson.

DOROTHY REVIER

Actress of Beauty and Charm

Dorothy Revier, who will appear in "The Far Cry" under the direction of Balboni, through the courtesy of Columbia Pictures, to whom she is under contract, started her professional career when still very young as dancer in a Russian ballet. Following this she appeared in legitimate stage productions in the East and the West, with considerable success. Later she became featured dancer in one of the leading hotels of San Francisco. It was here that a motion picture producer recognized the screen value of her personality and put her in her first picture.

Small parts and bits in productions made by the various leading motion picture concerns followed, and attracted the attention of producers through her consistent work.

She appeared as leading woman in a considerable number of independent productions, including "Supreme Test," "Do It Now," "Marry in Haste," "The Martyr Sex," "The Sword of Valor," "Down by the Rio Grande," "The Other Kind of Love," "The Call of the Mate," "The Virgin," "The Wild West," "Border Women," and others. She also appeared in "The Rose of Paris" and First National's "Just a Woman." For Columbia she has appeared in important roles in "The Fate of a Flirt," "Enemy of Men," "When Husbands Flirt," "The Danger Signal," "Sealed Lips" and "Stepping Out."

JOHN FISH GOODRICH

Well-Known Scenarist

John Fish Goodrich, one of the best-known scenario-writers, was born in Delavan, Wisconsin. He was still very young when his family moved to Keokuk, Iowa, where his boyhood was spent. He graduated from Cornell University and started his working career in the Chicago Stockyards. From there he went to Texas and sold land. He then became engaged in a farm mortgage business in the Southwest.

He had ideas and took them to A. J. Mason of the firm of Hoover and Mason, big steel construction engineers. Mason took Goodrich in and he was soon designing labor-saving appliances.

When the World War broke out Goodrich joined the British army, was wounded four times and came out a Lieutenant. On his return to America, he turned to Hollywood and scenario writing, with the result that he became known as one of the leading picture authors on the West coast, supplying original stories as well as adaptations. Among his original tales that have been screened are: "Capital Punishment," "Daytime Wives," and "Thundering Dawn." Pictures now current for which he wrote the adaptations include "Faint Perfume," "My Lady's Lips" and "The Triflers."

He is now preparing the continuity for two forthcoming First National pictures, "Men of Steel," and "Puppets"; and is also adapting "His Partner's Wife."

HARRY

Favorite hero of the untamed west in

"Driftin' Thru"

When Harry Carey rides and fights in a Western feature there is excitement for all.

He epitomizes the old brave West,—quick to help the weak, ready to battle the strong, staunch as a rock, cool as a glacier when the bullets are flying, hard riding, warm hearted, the cowboy of cowboys.

No wonder the public likes him, wants to see him!

Now presented in his newest and greatest picture, with thrill, fight, heart interest and pathos. The Carey fans, who are legion, will eat it up. And it will make many new friends for him.

It's twice as good as anything he's yet done!

TYPE DISPLAYS

ON this page we are reproducing several type displays sent in by Advertising and Publicity Manager Kelly of the Finklestein & Ruben theatres in St. Paul, as examples of the excellent work which is being done in the field of type-set ads by a "young man in our office," as Mr. Kelly puts it.

A perfunctory inspection of the displays here is sufficient to convince the ad man that the young man to whom Mr. Kelly refers is indeed accomplishing some remarkable results.

To begin with, the general layout of the ads here reproduced are notable for their simple arrangement and effective display composition. Even the small, single column ads on "The Best Bad Man" and Harold Lloyd, possess the quality to attract attention, deliver the message with crisp effect, and when appearing on the page with other displays, fight off competition of the other ads.

When it comes to handling fancy rules, there seems to be a rather general failing on the part of most layout men, to develop a sort of "border obsession"—some lure about them apparently driving the designer to concentrate on "borders" to an extent which ultimately results in a defeat of the true purpose of the device—which is simply a frame for the display and subordinate to it. This "hurdle" the F & R ad man seems to have cleared nicely, and he gets effects with his rules which many artists making hand drawn displays would regard with justifiable pride.

The "Multi Feature Bill" ad, used in one column, shows a clever adaptation of a neat idea of featuring a group of items. To achieve so effectively with rules the signal flag design is indeed a credit to the man who did it. The display for "Clothes Make the Pirate," the only one of the group by the way which uses an illustration cut, is another neat arrangement for featuring more than one entertainment item. The triangular spot for the Kiddie Revue gives that number an excellent display without detracting from the force of the photoplay feature. As a matter of fact, the device makes a virtue of necessity, as it were; for the converging lines of the triangle draw the eye directly into the title of the feature picture, which is excellently balanced by the action cut and the theatre name plate. Even the very unobtrusive—so far as affecting the balance of the layout is concerned—"next week billing" reaches the reader before his eye leaves the "picture," for Errol's eccentric knee and pirate-booted foot carry the eye to this speck of type.

The "Kiss for Cinderella" ad is probably the best of the lot, for here is "display" of the finest sort. The smart contrast between the deep black of the type and the gray effect of the rules, gives punch and pep to the copy, and surely the reverse cut for the theatre name cannot be missed.

A good deal the same principle is applied in the display for "The Splendid Road." On a page carrying many black toned layouts, which are in the majority so far as amusement displays are concerned, this would gain as much display as the "Cinderella" arrangement. But in general the latter is perhaps, the superior, though the "Splendid Road" ad is a long way from being mediocre. And dispensing with the "framing," the ad is far from mediocre. Here again, there is a very clever device to separate the current attraction from the coming bill. Bigger than average display, evidently, was desired for this particular "next week" attraction, and the problem was expertly solved by the rule which connects the two words "now" and which forms an adequate partition for the two elements of the display.

One of the most commendable, of many highly commendable features of this young man's work, is the manner in which he keeps his copy down to a minimum. When you read the copy in the "Cinderella" ad you have the whole story. Even the "seasonal" appeal is there: "Make the children's Christmas complete—Bring them to see Betty Bronson The 'Peter Pan' Girl in 'A Kiss for Cinderella' J. M. Barrie's Miracle Drama with the $1,000,000 Cinderella Ball. Next—'The Splendid Road.'" A total of about 34 words, and yet every salient sales angle has been covered, and the coming bill announced in the bargain! This same virtue is to be found in all the displays we show here, and which, we think, can be emulated with pride and profit by many theatre advertising men.

SELLING THE THEATRES ADS

AD COPY that sells the theatres advertising is a form of institutional good-will and confidence builder which can be used effectively and profitably by theatres.

This course was adopted in a two-column display down the entire page, used in Waterloo, Ia., by the Frank Amusement Company, for the advertising of the Plaza and Rialto Theatres. The copy is in the form of a personal message signed by Alexander Frank, president of the company, and the following excerpts from the ad will illustrate best the basic idea and the method of execution of this institutional ad, which is under the heading "Regarding the Plaza and Rialto Theatres! Obligation—Inspiration."

"There is nothing that holds one so rigidly to a definite course as public avowal of purpose. . . . It places every action in the broad daylight, subject to instant recognition of the slightest error or digression. . . . But also it is an inspiration. Knowing that every move is under public gaze, one takes great pride in doing each task well. . . . And therein lies the primary object of our advertising. It is designed as a public commitment, an invitation to scrutiny and a challenge to challengers, in order that each man in our own organization may feel a great responsibility placed upon him. . . . The carefully planned entertainments in every theatre operated by the Frank Amusement Co., are our answer to the unusual demand that they know our publicity has placed upon them. Every item on our programs is secured with the thought 'This must be worthy of the high claims made for us.' . . . That is what our publicity is planned to accomplish. It is published not to lure a patronage but to secure our patrons. . . . Let every advertiser thus view his published claims as public espousal of a sacred trust and 'The New Order of Things' will some day come to be no longer a Frank Amusement Co. service but a common practice for the common good."

FRED RICE'S PARTY

ALL the kiddies under 12 years of age of Warsaw, N. Y. and vicinity were the guests of a Christmas party of the O-At-Ka Theatre on the morning of December 224, when Fred A. Rice, owner and operator of the theatre, acted as host—a complete and generous host, as the following account of the affair, sent us by Mr. Rice, indicates.

The party was held at 10:30 A. M. There were five reels of comedy. A 2 reel Gang Comedy "Official Officer" a single reel Comedy "Super Huper Dine" showing an Xmas tree and the trouble Father had getting it home in the street car. A two reel Comedy "Royal Raz."

"Santa Claus" came before the party was over. There was a radio set on the stage near the screen and between each reel the radio was worked to find where Old Santa Claus was. Messages came at different times and were read so that the effect was that they were coming over this radio. The children were very much interested in this part.

After the last reel Santa Claus all dressed up with a red Santa suit, and sleigh bells came down the aisle to the tune of Jingle Bells played on the organ. Santa told the children stories, by the way, there were about 415 children present, and had them all sing Jingle Bells with him. Then Santa went through the audience and gave every boy and girl a candy cane, after which they all came out in front of the theatre and had their picture taken.

APPEAL TO SPORTS FANS

AS A MEANS of interesting the sports fans, Manager J. M. Franklin of B. B. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario—who found that the ice hockey matches and other sport events were a formidable competitor—hit upon the plan to counteract the effects of this counter attraction, by a special advertising campaign.

Mr. Franklin has been using considerable display space in the newspapers to announce the fact that sport results are being announced from the stage of the Keith Theatre and by the use of screen slides. The advertising display carried the information that football results were to be announced at certain afternoon performances and all games in the National Hockey League between Ottawa and New York, Boston, Pittsburgh, Toronto and Montreal would be announced score by score at the theatre on the nights that they take place. For the Federal and municipal elections, Manager Franklin also had a wire service that enabled him to make announcements regarding vote results.

Manager Franklin has found that, as a result of his service, those who cannot attend the sport features come to the theatre to enjoy the show and also to hear the sports scores.

NOVEL CO-OPERATIVE STUNT

ONE of the novel co-operative stunts which were evolved for "Lightnin'," and which is worth remembering since several means will suggest themselves in the future for its application to other pictures, through titles, etc., is the "Lightnin' Hour" sales idea which proved so successful in Toledo. The stunt was done by the W. L. Millner Company, one of the leading Toledo department stores, in conjunction with the showing of the Fox picture at the Temple Theatre in that city.

The story advertised at special prices only during certain hours of the day. The opening of the sale on these special articles was indicated by the lighting of an electric lamp over the counter where such goods were displayed. The lamp, which resembled a flash of lightning was moved to the various counters as the scene of the sale changed. The idea used was that lightning struck certain locations at certain intervals. This was used for an entire week. The department store manager wrote a letter to Fox exchange manager Ward Scott, saying that he had never put on anything so successful as his "Lightnin' Week" and said he would always be in line for further co-operation with the theatre.

Children entertained at a Christmas party given by Fred Rice at his O-AT-KA theatre, Warsaw, N. Y., Christmas Eve morning.

Stern Bros. Adopt New Policy

Announce Only Series of High Class Comedies Will be Produced—Century Name is Dropped

A NEW production policy under which only series of high class comedies will be made by the company has been announced by the Stern Brothers, producers for the Universal release schedule. Hereafter the pictures will be known as the Stern Brothers Comedies, the former output—Century Comedies—is to be discontinued.

There will be at least five series of first-class comedies on the 1926-1927 release schedule of the Stern Brothers Comedies. An extension of the present Buster Brown Productions will form the nucleus of the new schedule.

Another new series of two-reelers, already in the making for next season's release by the Stern Brothers, is "What Happened to Jane," a high-class situation comedy series starring Wanda Wiley. The stories are being written by Roy Evans.

Al Ford has been engaged to appear opposite Miss Wiley in this new series. The remainder of the supporting cast is of unusual strength, including Hilliard Karr, the fat comedian, Eleanor Leslie, well known character actress and others of equal prominence.

The Stern Brothers are now considering several story series of national importance as vehicles for their stars.

"Our unprecedented success with the Buster Brown Comedies convinced us that the market is ripe for more high-class comedies," say the Sterns, discussing their change in production policy.

"A close analysis of the comedy market has also proven to us that series pictures are more in demand than week in and week out releases, however good those releases may be.

"The foregoing two phases of the comedy situation were the determining factors in our decision to confine our production activities from now on, to series comedies.

"We have reorganized our production facilities, and increased our studio personnel, as well as adding a number of higher grade technicians and writers to our staff. We are now in a position to turn out comedies without equal in the industry. That is our goal."

Pathe Presented Programs for Poor Kiddies

Co-operating with the New York Evening Graphic, Pathe presented screen programs for poor kiddies in New York and Brooklyn during the holidays. Harold Lloyd, "Our Gang" and other Pathe comedies were furnished gratis for the entertainment of thousands of youngsters at Keeney's Bedford Theatre, Brooklyn, on December 29th, and at the Gotham Theatre, New York, on the same date.

On assuming his new office President Fleischer said:

"Our production schedule embracing the original 140 featurettes is to continue. From time to time we expect to increase our distribution facilities and also to take on for release special and timely subjects, both foreign and domestic."

The eight series already well on the way are: Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes, Out of the Inkwells, Gems of the Screen, Marvels of Motion, Searchlights, Reelviews, and Film Facts, thirteen in each issue, and a series of twenty-six Animated Hair Cartoons by Marcus, New York Times cartoonist.

Scenes from Chapter seven of the Pathe serial, "The Green Archer"

Four Comedy Subjects by Pathe

Widely Varied Program of Releases for Fourth Week of Laugh Month

PATHE has included four comedy subjects on the release schedule for the fourth week of Laugh Month starting January 24th. Mack Sennett and Hal Roach are represented by two-reelers, while the balance of the program is made up of "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables," a chapter of the serial, "The Green Archer," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a Pathe Review and two issues of Pathe News.

Hal Roach's contribution is "Charley, My Boy," starring Charley Chase, with Katherine Grant playing opposite the comedian and Walter James, William Courtright, Fred Kelsay and Sidney D'Albrook in the supporting cast. Leo McCarey directed.

Mack Sennett produced "Whispering Whiskers" with a cast that includes Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Madeline Hurlock and Kewpie Morgan. Del Lord directed. Paul Terry's "Aesop's Film Fable" is titled "The Little Brown Jug."

"The Uprising Generation" is a timely release of the Grantland Rice series of "Sportlights." This subject demonstrates the fact that the uprising generation is an active, vigorous lot of youngsters because all seek some form of athletics to reach the goal of good health. J. L. Hawkinson is the producer.

"The Cottage in the Woods" is the title of the eighth chapter of the Pathe serial, "The Green Archer" adapted by Frank Leon Smith from Edgar Wallace's novel of the same name. Allene Ray and Walter Miller are featured in a cast which includes Frank Lackteen, Burr McIntosh, Dorothy King and Walter P. Lewis. Spencer Bennet directed.

Pathe Review No. 4, features a trio of entertaining subjects: "Workers Under The Earth," another microscopic study of "The Magic Eye" series produced by L. H. Tolhurst; "The Harvest Fleet," showing scenes of reaping time in the great Western wheat fields; and interesting scenes at Rutgers College in Pathecolor.

Educational Gives Radio Talks

Representatives Tell of News Reel and Comedy Making Through Boston Station

REPRESENTATIVES of Educational Pictures have been conducting a series of radio talks on short feature pictures from station WBZ in Boston, as a stimulant to the Laugh Month campaign, now at its height.

A. S. Moffat, local Kinograms representative, gave the first of these talks on Wednesday, January 6th, on the subject, "How a News Reel is Made." He focused attention on the Educational news reel for a fifteen minute period.

Taking the Shenandoah disaster as an example, Moffat gave a thrilling outline of the experiences of the Kinograms cameramen in covering this assignment, from the time they first were advised of the disaster until the finished reels were run off on the screens of picture houses in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Albany, Syracuse and Rochester, a little more than twenty-four hours after the crash.

Immediately after this talk there followed a screening right in the studio of the current issue of Kinograms, and as the scenes were being shown, Moffat talked interestingly about them.

The response from the radio fans who communicated direct with the radio broadcasting station was so great Moffat was asked to give another talk on the news-reel in the near future.

"Buster's Bust-Up"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IT would be hard to figure how these Buster Brown comedies, produced by Stern Brothers, could be improved upon. In Arthur Trimble as Buster and Doreen Turner as Mary Jane they have a very capable pair of youngsters, but in Tige, the dog, they have a real comedy star. It is no reflection upon little Miss Turner nor Master Trimble to say that this dog stars seems to realize the comedy situations fully as well as they do.

The trio seems destined to become more popular with the release of each picture if the stories and situations are as good in the future as they have been in the past. In this one there is an abundance of material and the situations and by-play are taken full advantage of. It is an improvement even on those that have gone before.

The Cast

Buster.....Arthur Trimble
Mary Jane.....Doreen Turner
Tige.....The Dog

The Story—Buster and Mary Jane have a falling out, during the process of which Buster becomes entangled with a painter's ladder and gets his face spattered with paint just at a time when a smallpox epidemic is raging. His mother, thinking him a victim of the malady, puts him to bed, from where he escapes with the assistance of Tige. Discouraged, they sit on a girder, not knowing it is about to be hoisted to the top of a lofty building. They eventually land unharmed with the aid of a parachute and are welcomed back by Mary Jane and Buster's mother.

Summary—This is a splendidly acted comedy with a good story and some lively situations. It is replete with action of a pleasing variety and will be appreciated in any type house.

"My Stars"

(Educational-Tuxedo—Two Reels)

HERE'S a first rate two reel comedy with Johnny Arthur as the star and it certainly ought to prove entertaining to the average audience. The story concerns Johnny's efforts to win his lady love who has a movie star complex. Some clever burlesque work is pulled by Johnny Arthur in his impersonation of several well known stars. The story and the direction is by William Goodrich and the photography by Byron Houck.

The Cast

The Boy.....Johnny Arthur
His Mother.....Florence Lee
The Girl.....Virginia Vance
The Butler.....George Davis
The Gardener.....Glen Cavender

The Story—Johnny is the son of a domestic manufacturer of "Imported" gowns and as all dressmakers have a dummy, his mother has raised her son to be one. Johnny has a lady love and his efforts to win her everlasting affection is sorely handicapped by the fact that she gets her big thrill from looking at the photographs of prominent movie stars. She tells Johnny that if he could only make love in the manner of her heroes, that there might be some hope. He then dons a sheik costume, practices some real heavy love stuff and again presents himself to his fair one. However, by the time he arrives, the postman has already delivered a photograph of another star and she has no further use for Sheiks. This time its Douglas Fairbanks and by the time Johnny has jumped thru several windows and accomplished other acrobatic stunts, the girl has received still another photograph—and this time it's Harold Lloyd. Johnny gets desperate and develops into a real stunt comedian, only to find out in the end that she "wants Johnny to be himself."

Summary—An amusing comedy with Johnny Arthur at his best. Does some clever burlesque of prominent stars. Rest of the cast do good work.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"A Honeymoon Squabble"

(Stern Bros.-Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is somewhat of a domestic tangle caused by an up-to-date young bride who refuses to be the "And Wife" on the hotel register. Miss Marian is the girl who is starred in the picture, a rather lively comedy whose humor is not aided any by the ridiculously overplayed antics of a rotund house detective. With a bit of toning down of that character it would be above the average.

There are some fairly good situations, which however are anything but new. Otherwise it is a knockabout and hokum which is injected to speed up the action, of which there is plenty. Miss Marian is a pleasing comedienne and this is the type of picture in which she is seen at her best.

The Story—Betty, with her newly married husband refuses to register at the hotel as "And Wife," but insists upon using her maiden name, which fact is shortly discovered by the house detective, who proceeds to make life miserable for them, as he also does for a reconciled divorced couple who take adjoining rooms. Eventually the detective ejects both young men from the hotel and upon sneaking back the situations become more complicated when they enter the rooms of the wrong wives. They are discovered by the detective and a long chase ensues, after which wives and huddies enter accusations against each other. It is all straightened out when proper marriage licenses are revealed and explanations made.

Summary—A fast action comedy with some good but often-used situations. Miss Marian is a pleasing comedienne who does her work well. An acceptable picture a trifle overacted in spots.

"What's the World Coming To?"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

A CLEVER idea that is not so fantastic as it may seem, has been worked out in this two reeler from the Hal Roach studios. Most everyone is aware that the ladies have gradually been coming into their own and of their tendency toward masculinity. This shows just what is apt to happen one hundred years hence—when the blushing groom instead of the bride—is led to the altar. Clyde Cook is starred as the shrinking little violet, Katherine Grant, the manly bride and Martha Sleeper is the pursuing villain.

The Cast

The Groom.....Clyde Cook
The Bride.....Katherine Grant
The Villain.....Martha Sleeper
Father.....Jimmie Finlayson
Family Friend.....Laura De Cardi

The Story—Let's all take a hundred years jump ahead of the procession. Instead of the girl's wearing 'em up around the knees, they've entirely discarded dresses and taken to trousers. Bobbed hair, smacking of too much femininity, has been supplanted by a close-crop—cigars, pipes and swagger sticks are very much in vogue. And then on the other hand—the males have blossomed forth in the latest Paris creations and their actions suggest the modest little damsels of bygone days. And now for a plot—we have with us, little Clyde who is trembling on the brink of matrimony and Jimmie, his father who after a heartrending scene finally consents to give his son in marriage to his manly sweetheart, Katherine. The wedding day is set, the moment arrives and the ceremony gets under way. But on the side lines, hovers the villain Martha Sleeper who manages to whisper to the nervous groom "that she'll get him yet." Martha is an old admirer of Clyde's. The couple take up their abode in Katherine's home where little Clyde is ruled with an iron hand. Domestic difficulties arise that often bring the tears to Clyde's eyes and though his father Jimmie comes to offer comfort, it is without avail. In the meantime, the villain Martha still pursues her old time sweetheart, endeavoring to break up the home.

Summary—A delightful, first rate comedy that is built around a clever idea. The cast is fine and the direction excellent.

"Hot Cakes for Two"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HERE is very fair comedy entertainment that stars Alice Day but as in a two reeler previous to this one, it does not seem as though just the right kind of a story has been chosen or a fair chance been given to this clever comedienne to display the best of her wares. However, it's a Mack Sennett production and that counts. It carries thru with the usual Sennett snap. Alf Goulding did the directing.

The Cast

The Girl.....Alice Day
The Actor.....George Beranger
Boy-Friend.....Marvin Lobach
Movie School Man.....Joseph Young

The Story—It's hard to keep 'em down on the farm these days, particularly when the movies paint the many allurements of the big towns. So, little Alice leaves her cornfields to answer the ad of a movie school that promises to make a shining star out of her in record breaking time. Alice arrives at the school—they get her bank roll—and immediately start in to see the way she registers in front of a camera. She is ordered to shed a few tears and the result is a lot of laughs and giggles. A few more trials and she is turned out a finished actress. A diploma is handed to her with the advice to call on the big producers at once. However, in the meantime Alice has to eat and takes a job turning pancakes in one of a well known chain of restaurants. At a studio, she meets a rich actor and tells him that she is the daughter of the restaurant proprietor. They fall in love but Alice nearly loses him when, after seeing her in the window, he decides to visit her table. Her boy friend from the country also has movie aspirations and is on her trail. Many complication follow.

Summary—Fair comedy entertainment but this one hasn't the number of laughs that generally come from Sennett productions.

"Hot Dog"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

ARTHUR TRIMBLE is the featured player in this one-reeler, which is typical of those of the series that have gone before. It provides the usual rivalry between Arthur and Eddie for Betty. Arthur takes Betty to the hot dog party in a horse-drawn vehicle, where Eddie takes her from him in his smart roadster. Eventually the trio arrive back at Betty's house to learn she has forgotten her key. Arthur climbs through a top window, overturns furniture and bric-a-brac and all but wrecks the house. When he reaches the front door he finds a note from Eddie saying he and Betty have gone for a spin. It's a fair picture for the neighborhood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Fighting Tailor"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

An amusing Celtic-Hebrew comedy with East Side and ring atmosphere, in which Abie, son of a Jewish tailor, suddenly turns "box-fighter" and substitutes when a pug fails to show up for a fistic engagement. It's lively entertaining stuff, with a bit of romance sandwiched in, and the glove-scrap, funny as it is, doesn't lack for real honest-to-goodness thrills. The character-sketching throughout is excellent, the Irish and Jew types as comic as they make 'em, thanks to the good work of the whole cast, with Barbara Luddy and Georgie Harris scoring heavily in the leads.

The Cast

The Boy.....Georgie Harris
The Girl.....Barbara Luddy
The Prizefighter.....Frankie Adams
The Boy's Father.....Sidney Franklin
The Girl's Father.....Walter Perry
The Girl's Mother.....Anna Hernandez

The Story—Abie's father, a tailor, is opposed to "box-fighting," but the son sees visions of wealth in wielding the padded mitts, and when he is offered a chance to substitute for a fighter who fails to appear for a ring engagement he grabs the opportunity. He is further stimulated by the fact that the promoter is his sweetheart's papa. The Irish and Jewish ring-followers crowd the club to see the scrap between Abie and his Mick opponent, and the girl is there. After a hot struggle the bout is declared a draw and the opposing factions congratulate each other. Abie's father finds a ticket in the street and attends the show. His wrath changes to admiration when he learns that Abie is six hundred dollars ahead of the game and he asks enthusiastically—"When do we fight again?" The girl too is satisfied, and all ends well.

Summary—Fast action all the way through, comedy brisk and snappy, story has human interest touch. Good entertainment for any audience.

"The Whirlpool of Europe"

(Fox—756 Feet)

A fine scenic, with sombre interest attached to it, for it shows the actual starting point of the World War—Sarajevo in Bosnia, now Jugo Slavia; where Archduke Ferdinand of Austria met his death from an assassin's bullet, an occurrence which plunged the entire civilized globe into a bloody chaos. The views begin right on the corner where the Archduke was killed, and scenes in Dalmatia, now also Jugo Slavia, follow, showing the cockpit of Europe where Caesar's soldiers fought and conquered, and Venetian and Turk grappled to the death. A picture of intense interest to the student of history and sure to appeal to the average fan.

"Wide Open Faces"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

GOOD comedy entertainment is offered in this Mack Sennett two reeler directed by Lloyd Bacon. Ralph Graves is featured and plays the role of a dentist who longs to fill some of the wide open faces of a Western town where there is an open season on the followers of his profession. Graves is ably supported by Thelma Parr, Eugenia Gilbert, Marvin Lobach and Leo Willis.

The Cast

The Dentist.....Ralph Graves
The Girl.....Thelma Parr
The Vamp.....Eugenia Gilbert
Bad Man.....Leo Willis
Prominent Citizen.....Marvin Lobach

The Story—Ralph Graves, as Bob Bridger the dentist, decides to settle in a Western town where a vacancy has occurred in his particular line. The reason for the lull in Bob's profession is that all of his predecessors have been forced to leave town by the village bad man who resents any attention to his sweetheart, even though she is by nature a vamp and does most of the love-making. Undismayed by several warnings from prominent citizens, Bob opens his office and Eugenia, the vamp, immediately starts in to ensnare him despite the fact that Bob's affection leans toward Thelma who is a regular girl. The vamp's actions again provoke the wrath of the town bad man who attempts to chase Bob out of his office. However, Bob turns the table on the villain with the aid of some laughing gas and his psuedo-bravery wins him the girl and the esteem of his fellow townsmen.

Summary—Good entertainment and the cast is a strong one. Should please everywhere.

"Brotherly Love"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

CONSIDERABLE action, slapstick and an assortment of time worn gags make this fair entertainment and for an audience that does not hesitate to laugh over stunts that they have already seen several times, this one will get by. The story concerns two couples that have made dates at the same place in a park. Thru a series of incidents they become estranged and switch partners. A free for all tumble in a dance hall finally lands them all back in their original places.

The cast includes Cliff Bowes as the star. Zelma O'Neal, Helen Foster and Howard Esary. Jess Robbins did the directing and the photography is by Ben White.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Reelview A"

(Red Seal-Urban-Kineto—One Reel)

NOW they make pottery in the Orient is shown in this single reeler and while the methods are crude, the natives seem to get away with their trade in very good shape. It's an ideal country for the grown man—the children do all the hard labor—such as mixing clay, hauling the scarce water, etc. The men perform the lighter tasks that require more skill. What happens when nature shows her wrath makes up the balance of the reel. Fighting the elements, ice covered ships and the effects of fire fighting in winter time, storms and floods are shown.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Pathe Review No. 1"

(One Reel)

ANNETTE KELLERMAN is featured in this first of the 1926 series of Pathe Reviews and her work is very fine. This is her second appearance and there is much more action than in the preceding subject. A process camera is used and a lot of interesting shots have been obtained of a variety of fancy diving and under water swimming. "How to make money," scenes in a French mint and another of the "American Wild Flower" series in Pathecolor with a time-lapse camera, complete the reel.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Pathe Review No. 2"

(Pathe—One Reel)

ANOTHER chapter of the Arcturus Oceanographic Expedition is shown in this Review and as in a preceding reel, is exceptionally fine. Beyond question, these chapters cannot fail to interest—and it is the belief of this reviewer that all exhibitors should get in on them. Studies of babyhood in Pathecolor and the method of gathering sticky dates from the tall palm trees are also shown in this reel.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Ta-Ra-Ra-Boom-Der-E"

(Red Seal-Ko Ko Cartoon—One Reel)

Here is another old time tune for the audience to sing while Ko-Ko goes thru his antics. This time he jumps from "Ta" to "Ra" and finally ends up on "Boom" in a tragic manner. Max Fleischer has put this cartoon over in the usual entertaining way.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Ko-Ko Steps Out"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

KO-KO, that strange creation of Max Fleischer's, has also fallen for "The Charleston." Mr. Fleischer coaxes the clown from his lair and with the aid of a banjo induces Ko-Ko to try out a few steps. The clown's feet do not seem to be able to negotiate the intricate twists and kicks of the dance, so he asks for a partner. This partner gradually fades out and takes the form of Miss Ruth Fleischer, a charming professional dancer. "And CAN she Charleston—yes, she CAN Charleston!" All the difficult steps are shown—and then by a trick of the camera, Ko-Ko takes the place of Miss Fleischer and steps out at full speed. With the popularity that this particular dance enjoys at the present time, this number ought to go over well.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Felix Kept On Walking"

(Educational Cartoon—One Reel)

PAT SULLIVAN imported this one from London where he was presented with some handkerchiefs which were decorated with a cat's head. The cat's whiskers were of silk and failed to pass the custom officials thereby causing considerable difficulty. This is one of the stops that Felix made during his wanderings in search of the horizon. Felix caught the inspiration for this extended tour from the lines of a poet who promised much to any one who reached the goal but after many thrilling adventures in his tour around the earth, finally reaches the spot from where he started forth and proceeds to vent his wrath upon the poet. EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Pathe Review No. 3"

(One Reel)

TWO parts of this review stand out as real interesting subjects. The first shows a chapter of the Knud Rasmussen Expedition in the Arctic region and the second part another chapter of the "Makers of Men" at the West Point Military Academy. The scenes of the Arctic are characteristic of that vast expanse of icy waste and the many difficulties that befall those who seek its traverse. At West Point, the Cadets are shown at gunnery practice and also the finishing touches that are put on America's future military officers. A study of seagulls in Pathecolor completes the reel. EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"Three Blind Mice"

(Pathe—One Reel)

CARTOONIST Paul Terry made this one for "Laugh Month" and has turned it out in the usual entertaining style. The story concerns the activities of "three blind mice" who are not nearly as blind as they wish to make the other animals believe. But the cat—always a notorious character in these series of fables—is of the opinion that the mice are blind and sees a chance to put one over. The mice turn on him and he gets a terrific beating.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Fate of a Flirt

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—5793 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN ENTERTAINING picture promising good box office possibilities as a program attraction. The comedy strain predominates, offering a lot of farcical situations and serio-comic thrills keyed up to the speed limit, and there's a satisfactory romance developed from a wager made by Sir Gilbert, young Briton, that he can win the American girl upon whom his heart is set without relying on his title's glamor to help matters along. So he goes to work for Mary's folks as a chauffeur, and needless to say, is successful in his quest. Of course the course of true love doesn't run smooth, in fact a bewildering number of complications spring up to enliven the game, such as a blackmailer who endeavors to pass himself off as Sir Gilbert and the escapades of the heroine's Uncle John, all of which add to the merriment and interest. Dorothy Revier is saucily captivating in the feminine lead, Forrest Stanley a likeable hero: support excellent.

THEME. Comedy drama. Sir Gilbert, British peer, wagers that he can win a certain American girl, while in chauffeur guise, and succeeds after various adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of Dorothy Revier, Forrest Stanley, Thomas Ricketts. Identity complications. Snappy action and surprise finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up idea of hero voluntarily hiding title so as to win girl on merits. Bill as amusing comedy, but stress romantic side. Feature Dorothy Revier and Forrest Stanley.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money as a program attraction.

SUMMARY. Will appeal to majority of fans. Comedy inclines to farcical humor, gets the laughs, love affair interesting. Well directed and acted.

THE CAST

Mary Burgess.....	Dorothy Revier

PRESS NOTICE

COMEDY and exciting romance are combined in equal quantities in "The Fate of a Flirt," listed as the leading screen offering at the Theatre on _____. A villain tries to blackmail the lovers, but his plans are defeated and pretty Mary becomes the bride of the erstwhile chauffeur, who turns out to be a titled nobleman with money to burn.

Fascinating Dorothy Revier scores a great hit in the heroine role, with Forrest Stanley as hero and Thomas Ricketts, Phillips Smalley and other popular players in support.

Mike

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—6755 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

REAL entertainment for the masses! Director Marshall Neilan has utilized the old reliable formula of broad comedy gags, slam-bang action and a melodramatic windup. Result—a picture that rocks the fans with laugh-explosions, puts over a double thrill wallop at its close and sends them home more than satisfied. There's no pretense of making this anything more than an amusing film with straight elemental appeal, and it surely fills the bill in those respects. A good attraction for any house, even the so-called highbrows can't fail to get a humorous "kick" out of it. There are some very funny sequences in the old caboose home, with Sally O'Neil, her sweetheart, convivial dad, and infantile brood she mothers, all contributing to the merriment.

THEME. Comedy melodrama. Heroine, nicknamed "Mike," lives with father and kids in old caboose. She and sweetheart are instrumental in capturing train bandits.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where vision of colored elephants cures father and pal of drinking. "Mike's" domestic developments. Romantic and comic appeal. Fast action. Runaway car rescue.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up broad comedy stuff and thrills at finish. Bill as one of season's most amusing and exciting films. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in any house.

SUMMARY. Has straight audience appeal, ripping action, love interest, good comedy gags, hurtles into bully melodramatic climax.

THE CAST

Author and Director, Marshall Neilan.

SYNOPSIS. Patsy, known as "Mike," lives with her two little brothers, sister and father, Clancy, in an old freight car on a siding in the desert. She enlists the aid of a circus manager from the nearby town to cure Clancy and his pal of drinking. Both swear off after they see visions of colored beasts. Patsy learns of a plot to hold up the Limited. She and the children narrowly escape death when the freight car runs wild down grade. She tells her sweetheart of the bandits' scheme, the authorities are notified and the outlaws captured.

Mike (Metro-Goldwyn)

PRESS NOTICE

IF you are feeling gloomy, blue or cynical, go laugh it all off at the _____ Theatre on _____, when that sidesplitting comedy, "Mike" is flashed on the screen. Nobody has yet figured out how many laughs there are to a reel in this picture. "Mike" in this case is a girl, daughter of a section boss, who lives with her little brothers and sister in a home-like freight car, bosses the roost, has a sweetheart and cures her old man of drinking.

There's a couple of red-hot melodramatic punches at the close, one a thrilling rescue, the other a pursuit of train-robbers. Sally O'Neil, the heroine, a great supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

She wore overalls, lived in a freight car, bossed her father, brothers and sisters; and they called her "Mike." A heroine you will love, a comedy melodrama alive with mirth, speeding to an exciting finish.

William Haines who is a featured player in "Mike," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

Too Much Money

(First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

IMAGINE Lewis Stone clerking in a kosher emporium bundling up salami and counting out herring; also picture him as an ashes-covered janitor in a tenement. Yep, that is what you'll see in this picturization of an Israel Zangwill play that has been transplanted to the screen by John Francis Dillon. The story is a very ordinary one and rather poor material on which to waste the talents of a Lewis Stone. The picture opens with some elaborately staged scenes in the home of Robert Broadley, consisting of boudoir scenes, a pajama breakfast party and other lavish interiors. There is some humor in the sequence in which the movers cart away the furnishings of the mansion. Many may find merriment in the store scenes where Stone does his stuff as a clerk, but this sequence would be better if cut down, in fact the whole feature needs trimming. There is some suspense in the climax in which the husband overtakes his supposed friend fleeing with the former's wife and fortune and recovers both after a battle royal.

THEME. Modern society drama in which a husband has to arrange to pose as a poor man to awaken wife to fact that he'd like more of her company.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Interruption of weekend party by the movers. Scenes in tenement district. Lavishly staged interiors.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson. Use title as theme of tie up with loan associations, banks, etc. Fill money bags, borrowed from bank, with paper, and pile them in lobby with suitable reading matter.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of stars may draw. Don't promise much.

SUMMARY. Not up to the standard of former Lewis Stone releases but may provide entertainment for some. Too long. A weak role for a talented star. Well staged and has some humor.

THE CAST

Robert Broadley.....Lewis Stone
Annabel Broadley.....Anna Q. Nilsson
Dana Stuart.....Robert Cain
Deruck Glynn.....Duke Masters

SYNOPSIS. To curb his wife's social activities Robert Broadley acts on suggestion of friend Stuart, deeds property to latter and tells her he is broke. Stuart subsequently persuades the wife to flee with him, but she previously tips her husband off, he catches up, fight follows. Meanwhile wife abstracts securities from Stuart's bag and throws it overboard, having substituted paper for the valuables. Stuart leaps after bag. Husband and wife begin new honeymoon with regained fortune.

Anna Q. Nilsson, featured in "Too Much Money," a First National release.

Too Much Money (First National) PRESS NOTICE

"TOO MUCH MONEY," with Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson in the principal roles, will be the attraction at the Theatre, commencing _____ "Too Much Money," tells of a husband, who disgusted with the continual social engagements of his wife with whom he is much in love but whom he rarely sees, decides to accept a friend's suggestion and deed all his property over to him and declare himself a poor man. Then the couple move to a cheap apartment. While the husband works the supposed friend seeks to get the wife to elope with him. Told of the hoax she agrees, but in reality does so only that the man may be captured. A second honeymoon begins.

CATCH LINES

This husband had to work as a janitor to bring his social-mad wife back to earth.

Lover's Island

(Associated Exhibitors—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

BECAUSE of the "names" in the cast, this one will do quite well for the smaller houses for which it evidently was intended. It is a fair program picture, laid for the most part against artificial backgrounds and telling a story not overly convincing. Among its assets, however, are James Kirkwood, Hope Hampton and Louis Wolheim, as well as Flora Le Breton, the delightful little English actress and Flora Finch. There are several good fights during the action of the plot, especially the one at the close between Kirkwood and Ivan Linow. The latter, by the way, and Wolheim, are two of the most villainous looking types imaginable. There are some rather risque scenes showing the shapely Hope enjoying a cooling plunge a la Mother Eve. There may be some who would wish the water was clearer. But be that as it may it all ends satisfactorily and may please the class of patronage for whom it is intended.

THEME. Romantic drama, waif of fishing village wins member of "400" as husband.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The storm scenes and fights. Sequence when Johnson attacks Clemmy. Avery's escape.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up James Kirkwood and Hope Hampton. Tie up with jewelry stores on Hope Hampton pearls, cosmetic, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses, and small community theatres.

SUMMARY. A good attraction for the house that changes its bill several times a week. A good cast, but only a fair story, artificial settings too obvious at times.

THE CAST

Clemmy Dawson.....Hope Hampton
Jack Avery.....James Kirkwood
Capt. Joshua Dawson.....Louis Wolheim
Sam Johnson.....Ivan Linow

Clemmy learns Avery is engaged to another. She leaves. Avery follows, to find her about to wed Johnson. There is a fight, with Johnson on the loser's end. Clemmy and Avery wed.

Hope Hampton, star of "Lover's Island" an Associated Exhibitor's release.

Lover's Island (Associated Exhibitors) PRESS NOTICE

HOPE HAMPTON and a fine supporting cast, including James Kirkwood, Louis Wolheim, Flora Le Breton, the vivacious little English beauty who has recently won much favor in American on stage and screen, Flora Finch and others, will appear on the Theatre screen, commencing _____ in "Lover's Island," based on the Smart Set magazine story by T. Howard Kelly. The picture is filled with tense scenes, opening with some remarkable realistic storm scenes aboard a fishing schooner and followed by some honest-to-goodness fistic battles. Miss Hampton, as usual gets opportunity to wear some stunning gowns for which she is famous.

CATCH LINES

A romance of the seacoast in which a nameless little waif tangles up two lives and a whole village in one of the most exciting stories ever written.

The Palace Of Pleasure

(Fox—5467 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

GOOD direction, acting and some remarkably handsome settings combine to make "The Palace Of Pleasure" an attraction that will please a majority of fans and draw well in the average house. Emmett Flynn has handled a not too original plot with skill and dexterity, deftly dressing up some old situations in new clothes so to speak, and weaving them together so neatly that the continuity never breaks, suspense is early developed and speedy action maintained. A dashing hero sought by a Government which has set a price upon his head always enlists fan sympathy, and exile Ricardo Madons, who woos and wins actress Lola in such masterful style, is no exception to the rule. The romantic adventures of the pair, flashed against colorful backgrounds, hold an audience's interest, which reaches high-tide mark in the scene where Lola is nearly slain when she stops a bullet intended for her lover. Ancient stuff, but well done, Edmund Lowe and Betty Compson acquitting themselves creditably in the leads, with good support.

THEME. Melodrama. Royalist leader sought by Portuguese Government, abducts and weds actress who afterwards saves his life and escapes across border with him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Ricardo baffles Premier's guards. The abduction. Adventures in castle. Lola's sacrifice for lover. Sunshine finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as sensational, colorful romantic melo. Boost story's love interest; feature leads. Disregard supposed "historical values," as the real Montez flourished in entirely different era from that shown in film.

DRAWING POWER. Good box office attraction for average house.

SUMMARY. Romantic melo with plenty of suspense and thrills. Handsomely mounted, well acted, skillfully directed. Has good cast and general audience appeal.

Memory Lane

(First National—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

JOHAN M. STAHL knows life: Therefore when he begins to paint it on the screen he usually accomplishes something decidedly worth while. And "Memory Lane," his latest contribution to the silver sheet is going to strike a responsive chord wherever it is shown. It is clean, wholesome entertainment all the way through. The girl's schoolday sweetheart goes away to "make his fortune." But he forgets to write and in the after years another boy comes into the girl's life. Then, on the eve of her wedding the other boy returns and the girl finds she still loves him. But, rather than hurt her fiancé, she weds him. Later the boy of memory lane days, realizing that it is up to him to make the girl happy with her husband and baby, returns and disillusion her by acting the part of a smart Aleck. It is a tale that tugs at the heart strings and Eleanor Boardman is immense in the leading feminine role, while Conrad Nagel and William Haines do exceptionally well as rival suitors. Like all Stahl pictures this is artistically mounted.

Rocking Moon

(Producers Distributing Corp.—6000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE air of realism and novelty which pervades this picture is one of its most attractive qualities as a drawing card. It could scarcely be otherwise, seeing that it was filmed in genuine Alaskan surroundings, shows for the first time on the screen a view of the largest fox farm in the Northwest, where blue foxes are bred for the market to furnish forth the rare furs so much in demand by feminine fashion stylists; and remarkable shots of religious rite dances by the Indian tribes, with weird totem pole ceremonies, and other doings strange to civilized eyes. The story is also altogether out of the ordinary, melo-dramatically powerful and possessed of considerable romantic charm, so that the feature as a whole can be listed as an attraction of unusual merit. There are rare beautiful photographic effects in evidence. Lilyan Tashman is a graceful, appealing heroine; John Bowers plays the lover with true heroic energy; Rockcliffe Fellowes registers as a forceful villain and the support is excellent.

THEME. Melodrama. Girl owner of fox ranch on island is tricked by unworthy suitor who steals pelts, casting suspicion on her lover, but latter clears himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Unique atmosphere. Indian religious rites and dances. Melodramatic action, well developed romance. Fight between hero and villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bookstore tieup on novel from which picture is adapted. Boost as big novelty film and exiting melodrama. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in all classes of theatres.

SUMMARY. Something widely "different" here. A well directed, cleverly acted melo, with bizarre settings, filmed in Alaskan locale. Shows curious Indian rites and dances, has strong melodramatic and romantic lure.

Hearts and Fists

(Associated Exhibitors—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is a crackerjack action picture that may be classed as as one of the best program offerings in recent months. It is a red-blooded tale of the northwest lumber camps from the pen of Clarence Budington Kelland and Lloyd Ingraham, who presided at the megaphone, has caught the spirit of the tale and translated it to the screen in most acceptable manner. The picture is set for the most part in the outdoors. The scenes during the cutting down of the giant timber, riding of the "High Line" across deep gulleys, capturing of the enemy's train, blowing up of the bridge, and the final success of the hero in getting his logs to the mill, are all shot mid towering timber. As for fights, there are some in this one that will recall to many those in "The Spoilers." John Bowers gives a fine portrayal in the leading role, while Marguerite de la Motte is good in the principal feminine part. Alan Hale is an acceptable heavy, while Dan Mason injects some fine comedy moments. The climax sure packs a punch.

THEME. Melodramatic romance of lumber country. Youth puts his father's rundown business on its feet, beats enemies and wins girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful natural backgrounds. The scene in which Larry beats up rival. Fight between Bowers and Jack Curtis. The collapse of bridge. Riding the High Line.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost John Bowers and Marguerite de la Motte. Bill as thriller, play up fights.

DRAWING POWER. A good attraction for program houses.

SUMMARY. An example of what an excellent little picture can be made when there is a good story to start with and a good director handling it. Fine acting, settings much better than usual in pictures of this class.

The Price of Success

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS society drama deals chiefly with an intrigue between the married hero and a lady of commercially flirtatious propensities, with the wife conducting an inside campaign to win back hubby, and succeeding in the long run. It isn't a film for juvenile consumption and exhibitors catering principally to the family trade may deem it too daring a theme for booking purposes, but so far as sex suggestion goes the average adult won't find anything to resent; Director Tony Gaudio has handled his subject with good taste and judgment. For those who like these domestic mix-ups, "The Price of Success" will probably pass muster as pleasing entertainment. The cast is excellent, Alice Lake doing very good work as the injured but wily spouse, Lee Shumway giving a polished performance in the role of the philandering Harden, Alma Bennett a wickedly alluring siren and Gaston Glass contributing a neat character sketch of Wally Van Tine. No drag in the action, settings attractive, photography O. K.

THEME. Society drama. Finding a vamp luring her husband, wife determines to fight for her own, schemes successfully and wins him back.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where wife, vamp, and husband meet in Plaza. Dinner, where Ellen shows knowledge of intrigue. Events leading up to reconciliation.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up idea of wife refusing to submit to fate, and means by which she wins back hubby. Bill as fascinating society drama of intrigue, and luxurious atmosphere. Feature Alice Lake, Alma Bennett, Lee Shumway.

DRAWING POWER. Depends on your patronage. Good, if they like this kind of picture.

SUMMARY. Well produced, has good cast, married man intrigue theme a bit daring, but subject delicately handled. Cleverly acted and maintains interest.

Blue Blazes

(Universal—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

NOTHING new in plot material, but an agreeable program Western just the same, calculated to please all who pine for the hard riding, fast shooting stuff, with thrills galore and the necessary love element well to the fore. The picture is very well photographed, offering many fine rugged scenery shots, and the cloudburst-flood episode which winds up matters and disposes of the villainous crew, puts over a satisfactory big punch finale. Pete Morrison a likeable chap as well as an athlete of uncommon prowess and does very well in the role of Dee Halloran, putting up a couple of swirling action seraps and is all to the good in his horsemanship feats. Les Gates plays the villain well and Barbara Starr registers pleasingly as heroine Grace Macy, with Dick La Reno, Jr., scoring in the part as her youthful brother. Capable support is given the principals by other members of the cast, Western types are colorful, direction is adequate and there is no let-up in the action, which moves rapidly from start to finish.

THEME. Western melodrama. Girl seeks money concealed by murdered grandfather in lonely cabin, suspects wrong man, but unmasks real criminal with hero's aid.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clever riding stunts, well staged fights, romantic glamor, colorful atmosphere. Big cloud-burst and flood scene at close.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as brisk Western melo, play up Pete Morrison's riding and fights with villain. Mention Barbara Starr. Stress, cloud-burst episode.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever Western melodrama is in demand.

SUMMARY. A likely program picture. Pete Morrison at his best as hard-riding, athletic hero. Story follows familiar lines, but breezy action and thrills keep up interest from first to last reel.

THE CAST

My Lady of Whims

(Arrow—6089 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S no plot worth mentioning here, merely a medley of loosely connected episodes thrown together in haphazard fashion against a jazzy background, and rather futile comedy enveloping the adventures of a foolish flapper who hangs around Greenwich Village and resents the interference of an agent hired by her anxious papa to prevent her from going the limit. It is obvious from the start that heroine Prue will eventually go to a lovers' clench with her trailer, pending which she leads him a heck of a time in and around Hobohemia. The humor is forced and largely of the horseplay variety and nothing in the film seems likely to win favor with critical audiences. As an attraction for the smaller houses "My Lady Of Whims" may get by O. K. Clara Bow is always a fascinating figure and plays the part of Prudence with her customary sparkle and energy. Donald Keith registers as a peculiarly wooden type of lover, but can plead in excuse that the role didn't give him much chance to be anything else. A second-string love affair between Carmelita Geraghty and Lee Moran also ends happily.

THEME. Comedy. Hero hired by wealthy father to chaperon wild daughter is led a merry chase by girl, whom he wins at the finish.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Clara Bow's acting. Greenwich Village settings. Masque ball. Pursuit of yacht down bay. Interrupted wedding. Slapstick touches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the jazz and Greenwich Village atmosphere. Tell patrons it's a wild flapper yarn with plenty of laughs. Feature Clara Bow.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for daily change and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. A loose-jointed comedy. Has some jazz, slapstick appeal and thin plot. May do business where patron's aren't particular as to story values.

Discovering that Bartley is her father's agent, Prue snubs him continually and leads him an awful chase. Sweet Adeline

(Chadwick Pictures Corp.—6000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PLEASING picture and likely box office attraction for the average house. It presents Charles Ray in the sort of role in which he first won recognition as a star, that of a good-hearted, whole-souled country lad, kept down by an inferior, but never relinquishing an ambition to become "somebody" in the world and winning success in the end. It's mostly comedy, with an occasional bit of pathos thrown in on the romantic and human interest side, the plot is easy enough to anticipate but doesn't get monotonous at any time, Charlie Ray's rustic characterization wins hands down and keeps an audience on the broad grin. The title has drawing power, as the old popular ditty it is taken from is known all over, and the hero's rendition of the song neatly worked into the climax. Besides the star, there's excellent acting by Gertrude Olmstead as the pretty heroine, Jack Clifford plays the scheming brother Bill well, and the support is adequate. Photography O. K. at all stages.

THEME. Village lad has vocal ambitions, is given worst of it by elder brother, also his rival in love. He finally makes good as singer and wins girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Star's good acting, competent direction, smooth work of supporting cast. Breezy comedy situations, heart appeal. Climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up as a genuine old-time Ray picture, with star in role fans like best. You can promise lots of laughs. Arrange song tieup.

DRAWING POWER. Should win wherever Ray is popular.

SUMMARY. A typical old-time Charlie Ray film, offering star in sort of role that made him famous in past. A pleasant picture, good rustic characterizations and atmosphere, gets the laughs and has sentimental seasoning.

Cleveland

THE Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association has set Monday, February 1st, as the date of its annual jamboree. This one is to be a dinner dance. It is staged to take place at the Music Box, and the tax is $5.00 per couple. Anyone connected with the motion picture industry is eligible to attend. The party is not confined to Cleveland film men alone, but it is hoped that film folks from the nearby towns will take enough interest in the social functioning of the association to make reservations for tables. Just write to W. J. Banks, secretary of the association, enclose five bucks, and he will do the rest.

A recent communication from Sam Robinson of the Angella Theatre on Buckeye Road, Cleveland, discloses the fact that Sam is starting off the New Year by doing a lot of dolling-up on his theatre. In Defiance, where he owns the Rivoli, and in Clyde, where he owns the Harkness he is a dyed-in-the-wool exhibitor. But in Cleveland, he's a member of the sales staff of the Progress Picture Company, with northwestern Ohio as his special field of endeavor.

Albany

NOW that the Pro-Dis-Co. drive has ended, Bob Mochrie, local manager, is expecting word almost any day that he has won the trip to the West Coast. In fact Mr. Mochrie has gone so far as to wire his New York tailors for a new suit. The local exchange has worked hard to win first honors, Mr. Mochrie having been out on the road a good part of the time calling on exhibitors, while lights burned at the exchange far into the night. In fact the office force worked all last Sunday in winding up its part in the drive, and then repaired to one of the local hotels for a dinner that was set up by Mr. Mochrie.

As the weeks pass, the film building being erected on the outskirts of Albany for such exchanges as care to change from their present headquarters, assume more definite shape. The building will be ready for occupancy by May 1st. Up to the present time six of the exchanges in this city are sure of locating in the building.

Quite a number of exhibitors were in town during the week. John Augello, who is erecting a new house in Utica, was booking for the theatre, which will have the same name as the old one, "The Family." Bill Smalley was up from Cooperstown. Walter Hayes of Buffalo was in town but spent his time at the new house being erected here by the Strand interests.

Arrangements have been made so that Edward Hochstim, also a salesman in the F. B. O. office, will look after Mr. Filkins territory as well as his own for the time being.

Matthew Moran, who runs a house at Coxsackie, added to his holdings the past week when he acquired the house in New Baltimore that has been operated by Donald Baine.

Ted O'Shea, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange here, remarked the other day that his office was something in the nature of a training ship, explaining by saying that within the past four weeks, no less than four student salesmen have been sent here for training.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Buettner and Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Shearer of Cohoes will leave the latter part of the month for a trip to the West Indies and the northern sections of South America. The party will be gone for a month. Mr. Buettner and Mr. Shearer constitute the Cohoes Amusement Company with theatres there and in Hudson Falls.

J. H. MacIntyre, manager for Paramount here, was in New York last week. Herman Vineberg, manager of the Albany Theatre in this city, will observe his sixth wedding anniversary on January 25th.

Gardner Hall in Troy, one of the Rose chain of houses, is now being handled by W. H. Rose, formerly of Gloversville and a brother of the owner. Harry Rose, another brother, is handling the Bijou in Troy. The house is now boasting new stage settings and other improvements. Stanley Secor is handling the Rose house in Kinderhook, which is opened Saturday evenings only.

Elmer Griffin, who has been handling one of the residential houses in Troy, and who was recently operated upon for appendicitis at one of the hospitals in that city, is now on the road to recovery. Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold in Troy, who has been confined at a hospital near Boston, is also recovering and will be back on the job in a few days. Harry Carr, an operator at the Palace Theatre in Troy, who has been at the Albany hospital suffering from blood poisoning in one of his hands, has recovered and is back at work.

Harry M. Brooks of Troy, president of the M. P. M. O. in that city, was much pleased at the opening of the New York State Legislature on January 6th when he found a floral horseshoe on his desk from his associates. Mr. Brooks was elected to the State Assembly last November.

Abe Stone, owner of the Arbor Hill Theatre in Albany, and who announced sometime ago that he has bought a site for a new house, stated this week that he was having plans drawn and that building would get under way in the early spring.

Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose Theatre in Troy, was last week elected as vice-president of a furniture company in that city. He will continue to devote the greater part of his time, however, to his theatre.

Arrangements are now under way for a series of bowling contests between teams from motion picture theatres in Troy and Schenectady. Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, will captain one of the teams, while the Schenectady five will be headed by Claude Fish, owner of the American in that city.

The Troy Theatre is splitting its receipts this week with the Iran Grotto of that city.

Joe Kallet, owner of the Strand in Rome, is erecting a new residence in that city which will be ready for him early in the spring.

John Garry, manager of the Empire in Glens Falls, was in New York City during the past week. Bob Pierce of Iliou as well as Nate Robbins of Utica, are in the big town this week.

Workmen are busily engaged these days in repairing the damage done by fire to the Academy of Music in Newburg, one of the famous Players houses. It is expected that the theatre will be in shape for reopening in the near future.

C. J. Rose, district manager for the Schine Brothers, was in Carthage the past week, in a swing to several of the theatres under his control. Osmyn Brownell, who has been connected with the Schine organization for several months, has been made manager of the Carthage house. He will also handle the theatre publicity.

William Benton of Saratoga Springs and Mike Kallet of Oneida, both well known exhibitors, were confined to their homes the past week with hard colds.

A thirty-foot section of the roof on Proctor's new theatre in Schenectady fell during the noon hour the past week but without injuring anyone as all persons had left the house during the lunch hour.

The opera house in New Paltz has just been taken over by Walter Seaman who also operates motion picture houses in Marlboro, Highland and Milton. The house will be extensively remodeled and renovated.

An important deal in motion picture circles in Northern New York took place the past week when Attorney Thomas E. Shean of Massena sold out his interest in the Rialto to his partner, Frank Kuras.

Suffering a nervous breakdown, Harold Filkins, a well known salesman for F. B. O. out of this city, will be off the road for a few weeks.

Between doing the booking at the Universal exchange and looking after a sick dog, which is the pride of his heart, C. R. Halligan of the Universal exchange has a pretty full week.

Canada

AFTER a season of baseball, several of the moving picture exchanges in Toronto, Ontario, are now interested in the sport of hockey. An ice hockey team has been organized to represent the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Regal Films, Limited, and Famous Lasky Film Service, Limited, and the club is playing in the Toronto Hockey League a couple of times each week. The manager of the team is John Matheson of Famous Players.

Manager Donat Paquin, proprietor of the Laurier Theatre, Hull, Quebec, is making a regular practice of the presentation of two comedies on every bill of the theatre, having found that these short subjects form a splendid attraction. The International News is also shown, along with the feature, and there are also orchestra numbers.

George McComber of the Royal Theatre, Fort William, Ontario, has taken charge of the Strand Theatre at Calgary, Alberta. The manager of the Strand was formerly Pete Egan, who has become house manager of the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, which is under the supervision of John Hazza. Mr. Egan was at one time a prominent exhibitor of Winnipeg, Man.

Don Romanelli, conductor of the Empire Theatre, Toronto, has been gaining considerable attention recently because of musical achievements and mention has been made of the fact that he comes of a family in which the father and four sons are all theatre orchestra directors. One is Luigi Romanelli, conductor of the Tivoli Theatre Orchestra for many years and director of the King Edward Hotel band. Both Luigi and Don Romanelli have played before H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, Baron Byng of Vimy, Lady Byng, and other celebrated persons.

Events have been moving rapidly for H. E. Wilton, a well-known exhibitor of Hamilton, Ontario. Some time ago he was manager of the Strand Theatre there until the Savoy opened as a "big time" moving picture house with performance twice daily. The Savoy has closed again, however, and Mr. Wilton is once more manager of the Strand, the policy of which is to change programmes three times each week.

An interesting arrangement has been made by the exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, with the two daily newspapers for the publication of reviews each week on current attractions, the criticisms being written by representatives of the newspapers. The managers interested include J. M. Franklin of B. F. Keith's Theatre; Leonard Bishop of the Regent Theatre; Don Stapleton of the Centre and Mr. O'Regan of the Imperial.

This is the first time in local annals that the newspapers have consented to publish regular reviews on picture presentations on a permanent basis.

A recent visitor in Ottawa, Ontario, was J. C. Kennedy of Toronto, former manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa. Mr. Kennedy was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Kennedy, who was for some years cashier of the Regent before her marriage last summer. They were given a warm welcome by the local moving picture men.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Tells How To Establish Good Will For Theatres

"Easy To Get" Says Regge Doran In Address to Student Managers

THAT Goodwill—most precious institutional asset of motion picture theatres—is so easy to get that it is often overlooked by exhibitors, is the statement made by Regge Doran, director of the Pathe Department of Public Relations, and widely recognized as an expert in that field, in an address before the Publix Theatre Managers School in New York City, on Thursday, January 7th.

In summing up the situation as faced by the average exhibitor seeking to build prestige and goodwill for his theatre, Miss Doran drew upon a vast experience in that work. She was identified with the West Coast Theatres in California, and established the first Public Relations Department for that large theatre chain, before joining Pathe to organize and administrate a similar department for this distributing company, the first to institute a special department of the kind as a service to exhibitors.

The address which Miss Doran delivered before the student managers follows:

"Goodwill is the most precious possession that a motion picture exhibitor can have. To spend all his energy in getting the trust and esteem of his patrons is the best investment he can make for himself, his theatre, and for the industry. And this public friendship is so easy to get. So very easy, in fact, that many exhibitors quite overlook it. Like most other members of the human race they seek out the most difficult road to success, and try that first. I think that they do this unconsciously, for the public, strange as it may seem, figures rather vaguely in their daily work.

"I have said that it is easy to get this goodwill, and it is. The first thing that a good exhibitor realizes is his indebtedness to his patrons, and the fact that he is a public servant. He is never a good exhibitor until that fact is clearly established in his mind. Then he teaches this truth to every single employee of his theatre. This education of employees is simple too, and can soon be accomplished by a staff meeting called once a week. At these meetings everybody learns something, and sooner or later everybody teaches something.

Then knowing where he stands in relationship to his patrons, the motion picture theatre manager should get to know as many of them as he can, and that means a large percent of them. Of course, I do not say that this is possible in the large first run theatres. It is not, but then there are so few of these in comparison to the smaller community houses.

To know his patrons the exhibitor just has to stand in the lobby of his theatre while they are coming in. I do not think that there could be a more friendly group of people than motion picture fans, and all he has to do to keep them fans and to add to their ranks is to learn to smile and say how-do-you-do? By practicing this amiability he makes a most valuable discovery, namely, What his Public Want. He learns their whims, and many changes of mind and if he is at all alert his program keeps pace with their varying humours.

This is all true of the adult, but to my mind there is a much more important patron to be cultivated, and that is the child. He is the fan of today whose decision of tomorrow places the motion picture industry fifth or first on the list of all industries in the world.

In regard to him, however, most exhibitors miss the biggest bit they have, and I think that is simply because they do not appreciate the ticket selling value of advertising, and especially of word-of-mouth advertising. Yet we all know what great talkers children are, and if the figures are true which were made public recently at a federal investigation seventy-five per cent of the daily attendance at movies is under twenty-four years of age. Of course we hear on all sides that the motion picture is adult entertainment, and that the younger generation should not be allowed to go at random.

It is, and they shouldn't. So what is the exhibitor going to do? Take one performance a week, one regular performance, and book it with Young America in mind. That too is the easiest thing in the world to do in the suburban theatre.

Don't try however, to put anything over on this junior patron, because he knows more about our industry than many of us do who are in it. There are loads and loads of our adult entertainment pictures that are not only fit for children but should be seen by them. The screen being named "the greatest medium of education" is

A MAIN thoroughfare, for eleven miles, has had its general aspect, at night, changed. This important traffic artery runs thru town after town, all suburbs in a sense of a large city.

This very apparent change has been in greater brightness and cheerfulness—the result of motion picture theatres and their lavish use of light. Each town or business center now presents at least one alluring display sign and inviting lobby entrance.

A great difference. Only three years ago one could traverse this same eleven miles and not have attention drawn by a single commanding display—unless it was found among the unusual activities of the Saturday night bustle.

But the most significant phase of this enormous increase of electric display is that these attractive fronts are not by any means exclusively those of new theatres. At least half belong to theatres that were there three years ago.

Light is synonymous of gayety and entertainment, of beauty and emotion. Exhibitors to-day are more generally appreciating the psychology of light—and are employing it to far better advantage, both for exterior and interior use. Light often has been the main agency in placing a mantle of charm over an otherwise common place theatre. To-day it is one of the exhibitor's best friends.

Yet, for all the versatility and effectiveness of light it requires, in a degree, the knowledge of a few scientific principles for its proper application. Here, often, is where exhibitors encounter trouble. However, there are booklets published on theatre lighting that are sufficiently complete to serve as a guide to the uninitiated. Also, manufacturers of incandescent lamps render free lighting recommendation services. With these data and engineering services available any exhibitor who neglects his lighting problems is losing step with the parade. Light is now one of the main features of up-to-date theatres.

P. M. Abbott.

Methods Of Establishing Goodwill For Theatres

trite, but nevertheless true. By establishing this Junior Matinee—for the performance to be most effective has to be a matinee and has to be on Saturday afternoon—just think what a great amount of goodwill the exhibitor is getting. In the first place he is automatically silencing many objectors to pictures. He is getting his house talked about favorably. He is building up a new audience for the future. But what is more to the immediate point he is increasing his Box Office Receipts tremendously. Every time he runs a Junior Matinee he is turning out hundreds of ardent advertisers, who have paid to become such,—and who are just so many ticket sellers for his theatre, not alone at their own performance but all during the week. Doesn't it stand to reason that if the child is so pleased that the parents, uncles, cousins, and aunts will want to be pleased too.

"A little child shall lead them" has been proved often and often. Those who are so led come to the every day performance, and led come to the every day performances, and many of them so led have never been there before.

"All they have to do is prove that the children were right in their ardor and your army of fans is increased."

Kunsky Houses To Open New Bills Mondays

To Accommodate the new Publix Theatre Corporations shows, which start at John H. Kunsky's Capitol theatre, Detroit, on January 25th, announcement has been made that new programs at the four Kunsky theatres in downtown Detroit will be opened Mondays instead of on Sundays.

The new "Jazz" policy which has been inaugurated at the State, Kunsky's new, $2,000,000 house, has proved such an unusual success that it will be maintained for several weeks at least.

Enlarging Stage of the Allen Theatre

THE Allen Theatre, Cleveland, is the scene of building activities when there's no regular show on the screen; carpenters are busy making a new stage, putting in all necessary lighting effects and arranging things so that all the big stage effects may be secured. This is preparatory to putting on big specialty numbers at the Allen theatre. Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio theatres, of which the Allen is one, said that it will be the policy of the Allen to present a big specialty act each week.

This policy was introduced early in the season with great success. Among the big acts offered then at the Allen were the Leviathan Band, Edna Wallace Hopper, Rae Elinor Ball and her Brother. These artists, however, were handicapped by the limited stage facilities of the Allen. Now that the management knows that the public likes these big acts in addition to their screen fare, the necessary changes are being made in the stage accommodations, so that these big acts will become regularly a part of the Allen programs. No advance in admission prices will be asked.

Warner's Circle in Cleveland Switches to Pictures and Vaudeville

THE Circle Theatre, Cleveland, O., operated by Warner Brothers, will switch to the combination picture-vaudeville policy, starting either January 16th, or January 23d. Negotiations were completed last week between Warner Brothers and Alexander Pantages of Los Angeles to introduce Pantages vaudeville at the Circle. Feature pictures will continue to be shown, and three performances will be given daily, starting at 1 p. m. and closing at 11 p. m.

The Warner management, in making the announcement of this change of policy stated that it was yielding to the increasing popular demand for the variety show and that it was appealing to the college student body which lives in the vicinity of the Circle theatre.

Cleveland will be Pantages' first stop east in a proposed inroad into twenty-five prominent eastern cities. The circuit has thus far been confined to western towns, which now include forty-one in number. The cities nearest to Cleveland where Pantages productions are shown are Toledo, Detroit and Indianapolis. George Dumond, general manager in charge of the Warner theatres, has been in Cleveland for the past several weeks, during the negotiations for this change of policy. He will remain there until the new policy is in operation. Although nothing authentic has been said on the subject, it is rumored that Warners are contemplating putting a combination policy into all of their houses throughout the country. Cleveland has been selected in which to try it out.

Roxy Theatre to Have Permanent Chorus, Kurt Schindler Will Direct

AMONG the musical features which are to be presented at the new Roxy theatre, now being built at 50th Street and 7th Avenue, New York City, and which will be conducted by S. L. Rothafel, will be a permanent chorus of 100 trained voices, according to an announcement made last week by "Roxy."

Kurt Schindler, director of the Schola Cantorum and prominently associated with choral activities in New York, has been engaged to direct the Roxy chorus.

According to Mr. Schindler, "This chorus will function sometimes alone, sometimes with the orchestra, so that many works both of oratorio and opera will be available. One of the unusual features and a wish I have always hoped to see realized," Mr. Schindler continued, "will be the performance of choral music with dancing, thus opening an entirely new repertoire of music. In this way we shall be able to present for example the folk dances and songs of Spain, Russia and the Balkans in their original form, and no end of choral and dancing novelties."

That the work of the large chorus under Mr. Schindler will be one of the outstanding features and among the novelties which Rothafel is planning for his huge theatre, is indicated by the elaborate preparations which are being made to facilitate the work of the singing organization and its director.

One of the structural novelties of the Roxy theatre will be a choir chamber, hidden from view of the audience. The chamber will accommodate 100 singers. The singing organization, combined with the symphony orchestra of 110 pieces, consoles for a duo-organ—which will be installed high above the stage—and a twenty-piece jazz orchestra for dancing numbers, indicates the emphasis which Rothafel will put on music as a leading feature of a form of entertainment which it is expected will mark a new departure for a theatre devoted to "pictures and."

Mr. Schindler predicts that within a short time his chorus will function with the precision and skill of an orchestra and as Mr. Rothafel has assured him that no music is too good for his theatre, he promises wide and unlimited scope in his programs. The plans of the new Roxy theatre are on an incredibly sumptuous scale including for Schindler's branch of endeavor perfect rehearsal rooms, ideal conditions to foster all that is finest and noblest in music and perfect equipment for the individual comfort of the artist, says the announcement.

Sunday Song Contests at the Liberty, Seattle

Following their tremendous success last season, Manager Leroy V. Johnson of the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, has again inaugurated his weekly Sunday morning song contests, arranged by Oliver Wallace, concert organist, and offering $20 in prizes to members of the audience who receive the most applause in renditions of the songs selected each week. The contest is a tremendous business-getter for Sunday morning performances, which are usually poorly attended.

Palace, Seattle, to House Pictures and Vaudeville

Manager Joseph Muller of the Palace Hip Theatre, Seattle, has announced that he will soon inaugurate a new policy of motion pictures and vaudeville at his house, which has housed the Will King Musical Revues for the last several seasons. First-run pictures will be used, and a change of program will be offered twice weekly, according to reports. This policy was used for several months at that house once before the King shows opened their engagement.

Metropolitan, Boston Now Running Longer Show

The new Metropolitan Theatre in Boston, has lengthened its program from a two hour show to two hours and twenty minutes. This gives ample opportunity to give even the longest features without interfering with the additional numbers on the program while, if the feature is short, it permits an added comedy reel.

Manager, Majestic Theatre of Hornell, N. Y.

EVERY THEATRE caters to a specific clientele and has its own following or else two or three theatres could not exist in the same block. Therefore each, and every theatre must have its individual problems, of how to attract the transient passerby as well as their standard patron. To do this at the least expense for the greatest value has always been my personal hobby, for where you could spend a thousand dollars in one theatre with ease, ten dollars in another theatre would be an excessive sum.

Back in the old days, when music cue sheets were unknown and your "pianist" who could put in the "plunk plunks" for comedy and "Hearts and Flowers" for tears was a "wiz" and talk of the town, we all "sold our goods" with our fronts, so to speak. There were invariable and almost uniformly observed rules. For example, the war pictures—which were plenty—called for guns, a cannon and cannon balls and a few flags.

Anything to attract attention was the main idea of these frontal displays. I recall of a time when I was an assistant manager, a theatre using a real live cow as a "bally" for some pastoral picture. It was summertime and oh, the mess we got into. The cashier quit as did one of the porters and we got the laugh from all the "legit" houses in town—who were just itching to get something over on the "movies." And once I had a house artist do a set of icicles for the marquee border at the opening of the summer season. They were done in rigid Beaver Board, painted visible on both sides and were made to repeat the following seasons by repainting. My managing director kicked. He wanted the same effect on oil-cloth—"so they would wave or move in the wind and attract attention." Now who ever heard of waving icicles? Yet in the latter item there is food for much thought and considerable argument.

But things, you will admit, have changed since those days, and now the theatre manager faces the problem of making displays which appeal to the particular type of patronage to which he caters, and where the ballyhoo type of frontal display is the proper and profitable idea for one theatre, for another it is not.

The continuous use of circus tactics creates the Fire Sale effect and tends gradually to dislodge your solidified patronage for a transient throng of Thrill Chasers, who leave you for the next man who flings out a red banner down the street.

Yet the transformation of your front for specific occasions widely spread throughout the season certainly is good medicine, par-

This article by G. B. Odlum is the second of a series of discussions by exhibitors on the subject of lobby displays. The first, written by A. G. Stolte, managing director of the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines, appeared in the December 26th issue of Motion Picture News.

The author of the accompanying article is a veteran showman, and has a reputation as an expert on picture theatre publicity and exploitation. He is a native of Richmond, Va., and was educated in music and art. His first association as a theatre manager was with the C. W. Bennett Theatres in Hamilton, Ontario, in the "nickelodian" days of the picture business. Later he managed several vaudeville and picture theatres and was connected with the Small chain of houses in Canada. He then organized a group of six houses of his own, selling out in 1918. After which he was connected with Charlie Hayman at Niagara Falls, the Michaels Bros., Buffalo and the Palace Theatre, Olean. He is now manager of the Majestic Theatre, Hornell, N. Y., operated by the Maple City Theatres, Inc.

ticularly during the summer season—while writing of the summer season it seems common sense to say that larger and more vivid displays are necessary in the summer as many of your passers-by are in automobiles and a "Flash" is therefore necessary.

A cheap litho by the cutout process and a few adroit lines of color properly mounted give a finish not obtainable with crinkly mussy posters. A color scheme individual to each presentation—I mean for cards, posters and art panels—creates a uniformity of detail which is impressive; showing organization of detail. Soldiers would not be half so impressive all dressed in different colored uniforms.

In my opinion for a standard modern Main street house, there is no display more effective than the hand painted poster—sometimes with cutouts from one—three or six sheets or oftentimes color designs. These panels can be washed off and re-done.

G. B. Odlum

A studio for this specific work can be maintained well within the quota of any city of 40,000 or better. The writer has had panels on a theatre front which were the continuous topic of conversation on the street, splashy and effective attention arresters which people used to come especially to see—and look for the new Art display. This of course was exceptional but can be duplicated anywhere you can secure an artist quick in action and in comprehensive grasp of the subtle story underlying the title.

These displays can be completed one full change period in advance and displayed inside—for we must not forget the outgoing patron who has just seen your presentation and should be in a susceptible mood for the "Come again" idea.

For the inside of the lobby, if it is spacious at all—four or six inset panels on the sidewalls properly illuminated both from front and from the back (to enhance cut-out effects). Panels should be framed for a 42 x 28 inch card which is obtainable in very effective colors. Two of these can be used for current attractions and two or four for coming events or all for coming attractions as the desire may be. These cards if done artistically can be arranged for outside showing during current run.

The space just over the inside of the entrance doors should not be neglected, for an effective advance display for the outgoing crowd (usually slow moving). This space is high enough for the fellow back of you to see over your head as he exits and oftentimes forms the basis of conversation long after your theatre has been left.

It must be remembered at all times that your "Front" is your show window—if you are catering to a 10c crowd, display accordingly and if you are playing to 50c or $1.00 patronage your front as well as your interior must be furnished accordingly.

The Gorgeous Downtown Department stores with their artistic window displays are a symphony of art and color—yet the 5 and 10 just across the street with its garish display also does a thriving business. It would be just as much out of focus for Macy's, Wanamaker's or Eaton's to dress their window a la 5 and 10 as for you to have your ushers in tuxedos and put on Shoot 'Em Up Western thrillers, or your front in shining brass and glittering crystal and expect your patrons to be in overalls.

Neatness and orderly array are particularly desirable even in the cheapest theatres and next to cleanliness is an earmark of how your show will be presented, for after all "The Show Is The Thing."

West Coast "Ideas" To Be Circuited

"Gold and Pearls" is the title of the Fanchon & Marco "Ideas" presentation staged some time ago at the West Coast Theatres' houses. The number was in three episodes, as shown in the photos above. A dance and tableau featured the opening episode, which was followed by an ensemble scene with an acrobatic interlude. The final scene showed the "living curtain"—shown in the photo on the right.

WEST COAST THEATRES is understood to have in preparation a plan to circuit throughout the large cities in the East and West the West Coast presentations, under the supervision of Fanchon and Marco. Sol Lesser, of the West Coast company, now in the East, is preparing to visit cities where these stage numbers will be shown, according to an announcement from the organization.

The circuiting arrangement will give the troupes many months engagements in addition to the eighteen weeks California time which they now have at West Coast theatres.

The "Fanchon and Marco Ideas," a few of which are shown in photos on this page, have gained a national reputation. Loew's Theatre, San Francisco, is at present the base of operations for the presentations. Marco's idea—and his stage acts are thus called—is that the numbers should go to the other extreme of the theme of the picture. For example—if the picture had a South Sea Island atmosphere, Marco would stage "Ideas of Geo. M. Cohan" as a stage attraction.

An "Idea" presented at Loew's State, Los Angeles, in which Victor Herbert's music was featured in a number of solo and choral singing and specialty dances.

A number specializing in Spanish effects, with dancers and a Marimba band, staged by Fanchon & Marco for West Coast Theatres, Inc., is shown above. At opening the musicians were seated on the stage, and following solo song, lattice effect in centre opened and revealed two dancers. At start of dance, musicians left stage and took their positions in frame of back drop, as shown in photo at right.

The remodeled Keith-Albee theatre that was recently reopened. This house is located on St. James St., Boston and is now one of the finest houses in that town.

Keith-Albee Adds Another First Run House to Boston

With the opening of the St. James Theatre on Huntington avenue, Boston, the Keith-Albee interests have completed their second remodelling job within a single year and have added another first run motion picture and vaudeville house to Boston. Within the year three new first run houses have thus been added to Boston, the Metropolitan, the Keith-Albee New Boston, and the St. James Theatres.

As in the case of the New Boston Theatre, the St. James Theatre was a remodelling task. The New Boston was constructed within a building once used as a department store, but a modern building in every respect. The St. James Theatre was a stock theatre, before being purchased by the Keith-Albee group but the work of remodelling, once started, was almost as extensive as in the New Boston.

Probably the most important engineering difficulty which was surmounted was the construction and location of the projection booth. This booth or room is 42 feet long and 12 feet in width, is supplied with running hot and cold water and toilets, and is equipped with three projection machines, two spotlights and a stereopticon. It is virtually a separate building in itself, strapped to the wall of the structure and supported, in addition, by steelwork. Exclusive of equipment, the steel booth weighs sixty-two tons.

Because of the construction of the building in which the St. James Theatre is located and because a large dance hall in the same building is built with its main support from the roof timbers, and to avoid any vibration which might result from the dance floor when in use, the engineers decided to strap the projection booth to the wall. This has been done so cleverly, however, that even an expert would not believe that it was not built into the theatre when the building itself was erected. There is not the slightest indication but what it is an integral part of the theatre.

To lighten the projection booth as much as possible, the framework was constructed of steel, the walls of gypsum block and the floors of poured gypsum, making it completely fireproof and yet eliminating all excess weight. The walls of the booth form the attractive background to the spacious balcony.

The St. James Theatre is advertised as "The Intimate Theatre" because the matter of size has been sacrificed to comfort and hominess. The management wants the patrons to come again and again. It does not particularly cater to transients but to the community, the Back Bay of Boston, in which it is located. It has a seating capacity of approximately 2,000 and presents first run features, Fables, Topics, Comedy and News besides five acts of vaudeville. There is both orchestral and organ music.

The rebuilding process commenced in July, first planned to be on a small scale. When once the work got under way, however, it was determined to make it typically a Keith-Albee Theatre. This meant additional changes. A new front and marquis were constructed, the lobby was entirely rebuilt and refinished, even to the carved crystal chandeliers. Marble flooring was laid and recessed rubber matting laid. From the foyer new marble stairways were constructed and the walls were refinished in the rich, warm tones which characterize Keith houses. No greater change was made anywhere than in the rest rooms, lounges and toilets, which were practically completely rebuilt. The ladies' suites on both the main and mezzanine floors are now models of beauty with a combination of colors at once magnificent and pleasing. The walls are in cerise silk with ivory trimmings. There are individual toilet tables in the cosmetic room and there is at hand complete fittings for any taste in all cosmetics. The toilets are new throughout. The men's lounge and smoking rooms are finished in a rich cream with furnishings upholstered in brown leather. One is at once impressed by the spacious rest and toilet facilities of the theatre when one considers that the seating capacity is slightly less than 2,000.

With such extensive changes, one can well imagine the changes made in the auditorium itself. The old theatre auditorium was panelled. This panelling was all removed and there is now one big arch at each side of the house, gracefully blending with the lines of the new proscenium arch. Formerly this was square. Now it forms a graceful arch which was built on the old one making it six feet lower, yet giving fully as much height as other theatres. Even the old boxes, three in number, were ripped out and replaced with the Keith-Albee style boxes, two in number on each side.

Back stage the work was equally complete. The dressing rooms are all in tapestry, three bathrooms have been installed and two shower baths. A trunk lift raises the trunks to all dressing rooms where formerly they were hauled over the stairs.

New box offices were installed, a ventilating system was built which is operated by a ten horsepower motor and a fan located in a new fanhouse on top of the auditorium while heating is now done by the mushroom system. There are concealed aisle lights in both main floor and balcony. The stairways and floors are newly and richly carpeted. In fact, an entirely new theatre has been built where once the old St. James existed.

Theatre Building Continues Active In New England Territory

NATHAN YEAMANS' new theatre in Fall River, Mass., which is located on North Main street opposite the Plaza theatre, is rapidly nearing completion and will probably be opened before the end of the month.

Two new theatres are under construction in Wollaston, Mass., one to be run by Fred Murphy, who operates the Quincy and Alhambra theatres in Quincy, Mass. It will have a seating capacity of about 1700.

Abe Spitz, owner and manager of several theatres in Greater Boston, has this week broken ground for a new theatre to seat about 1500 in Wollaston, Mass., next door to the Masonic building. Foundations will be put in during the winter so that construction work may go forward rapidly in the spring and the theatre be opened next fall.

The Colonial theatres, Inc., of Bristol, Conn., have had plans prepared and are soon to receive bids for a new theatre to be known as the Colonial theatre, with seating capacity of about 1800, to be built in that town. A site has already been purchased on Main street in the business center.

Excavations have been started at Hancock and Beals streets, Quincy, Mass., for a new theatre for W. Wilson of the Wollaston Palace theatre. The structure will be of brick and cast stone and will be 200 by 60 feet. Plans were prepared by Tuck & Co. of Roxbury, Mass. The theatre will have a seating capacity of about 1600.

The Liberty Theatres Co. has been incorporated at Boston with a capital of $25,000. Philip L. Markell is president of the company; Samuel M. Katze of Lawrence, Mass., is treasurer and Charles Morse is clerk of the corporation. The new corporation has acquired the Liberty theatre on Blue Hill avenue, Boston, formerly owned by William London and operated by L. M. Bowes.

Manchester, N. H., is to have a new theatre but the name of the owner is at present withheld.

Michael Shea Announces New Suburban Theatre

The Kensington section of Buffalo is to have the largest neighborhood house in western New York, according to an announcement by Michael Shea, head of the Shea Amusement company, who says that the new building, leased from the Bickford Realty company for a term of 20 years, will be located at Bailey and Kensington avenues, which point is fast becoming one of the busiest corners in Buffalo's great east side. The new house will be known as Shea's Kensington and will be completed by September 1, 1926. The building will have a seating capacity of 1,500 and will cost approximately $500,000.

"The plans submitted by the Bickford Realty company," said Mr. Shea, "promise the last word in theatre construction. Stores and office building are a part of the plan. The Kensington district is growing at a rapid pace and in this new house, residents of that part of the city will be given the same pictures booked at the downtown Shea houses, with their accompanying presentations. A Wurlitzer organ of the latest type will be installed and every modern convenience will be adopted in its construction. In point of beauty and comfort, the new house will be one of the most luxurious."

Carrier Engineering Merges With Air Conditioning

The Carrier Engineering Corporation which has long specialized in the field of Air Conditioning Engineering has recently acquired all of the capital stock of the Atmospheric Conditioning Corporation of Philadelphia, Pa.

The entire Air Conditioning business of the latter company will be continued by the Carrier organization, while the Air Washer Business which the Atmospheric Conditioning Corp. formerly conducted has been recently purchased by Strandwitch & Scott, Inc. who will continue to manufacture and install Webster Air Washers with the Webster Dewpoint Control.

John F. Hale, president of the Atmospheric Conditioning Corp. has accepted a position as Representative and Engineer for the Aerofin Corp. with headquarters in Chicago.

H. A. Terrell, Treasurer of the Atmospheric Conditioning Corp., will have charge of a construction force for the consolidated Carrier Engineering Corp. and the Atmospheric Conditioning Corp. and will be located at Newark, N. J.

E. Nesdahl, former Chief Engineer and S. C. Bloom, Engineer in the Chicago office of the Atmospheric Conditioning Corp. will continue with the combined companies.

Fort Wayne, Ind. to Have Combination House

Plans are being completed for the erection of a million dollar theatre building to be erected on site of the old Trinity English Lutheran Church, Wayne and Clinton Streets, Fort Wayne, by the Keenan Hotel interests. The new theatre will be a vaudeville and movie house and will have a seating capacity of 3,100 persons. Architects drawing the plans of this new theatre are Charles R. Weatherhogg of Fort Wayne and Howard E. Crane of Detroit.

Inquiries and Comments

Caught! B'Gosh

O E. P. Tinkham, (we hope the name is spelled correctly) Lake View, Maine, goes the enviable honor of having solved the question of where Vivien P. Baughn dug up that brain racking series of questions which he so recently shot at us without the slightest warning.

It appears that Friend Baughn copied them. Yes, indeed he did, so now he will have to stand the gaff of pitiless publicity. Serves him right for trying to high-hat us.

We are certainly glad that the astute Tinkham put us wise because, to be perfectly frank about it, we were secretly afraid that Baughn might come back with another batch. But we shall be fully loaded and waiting for him next time, so beware.

Having no books of our own to sell we can fearlessly stand forth and publish the name of the volume from which these questions were copied. It is contained in Friend Tinkham's letter which is as follows:

"Have just finished reading the Projection Department article of the News for the week of November 14th. In regard to brother Baughn's letter and questions I wish to say that I have located all of his questions as, no doubt, some of the other projectionists have.

"All of the questions asked and answered in the News may be found in a small book (price $1.00) published by the Technical Book Company, New York City, and written by James R. Cameron. The title of this book is 'Examination Questions.'

"If you will obtain a copy of this book and turn to page 39 and examine questions 12, 18, 39, 47, 61, 63, 66, 69, 70, 72, 91, 95, 107, 114 and 128 you will find they are the same as those answered in the News.

"I notice, however, that the answers are not to be found in the book."

Not Fair

Well, Friend Baughn, we should say that the drinks were on you.

Immediately upon receiving Tinkham's letter we started hunting for a copy of the above named volume, which we knew was somewhere about the premises, and after a search of about an hour or so, brought it to light.

Sure enough, there were the questions, so that cinches that.

The sad part of this entire affair—and it has a sad part—lies in the nature of some of those questions. We do not doubt but what the author of the booklet was guided by the best of intentions and really believed that he was acting for the best interests of the projectionist by getting him to use his gray matter in solving the answers to the questions.

For the most part, they are all right, but many, too many, of them are "catch questions," pure and simple, and so can serve no other purpose than to utterly confuse the student. Catch questions, as such, have but little practical value and their solution is rarely, if ever, an indication of the answering person's intelligence, or even his knowledge.

No Indication of Intelligence

A rapid solver of cross-word puzzles, is not, necessarily, a brilliant person. There are many people on this earth who take great delight, and spend much time, unraveling puzzles, but who, when confronted with a real emergency that requires quick thinking and instinctive action, go into a blue funk.

The real test of a person's intelligence is this "What will he do when confronted with an emergency?" There is then no time to pick out a quiet, cozy, corner and maul over the pros and cons of the situation in an effort to find the best method of approach.

Action is the thing that is required and the way a man acts when placed in such a position is a measure of his brain power. It is this thing which distinguishes the leader from the follower.

Wars are never won by arm-chair military critics but by practical men doing practical things in a practical manner in the face of almost certain death.

Wherein the Good?

What difference does it make whether the primary of a transformer is connected in series or in parallel in the feeder circuit? For what matter who cares? As a matter of fact, it can be considered as being either in series or in multiple whichever way one wishes to look at it.

It is enough for the projectionist to know that when the primary terminals of a transformer are connected to the feed wires, current can be drawn off the secondary terminals in inverse proportion to the ratio of number of turns on the two coils. Thus, if the primary has ten times the turns of the secondary the current in the latter will be approximately ten times that of the former and the voltage across the secondary terminals will be approximately only one-tenth that applied to the primary.

If he knows that, he knows plenty because he can then figure out for himself what the secondary voltage will be for any given applied voltage. Furthermore, knowing the secondary voltage for any given applied voltage, and dividing one by the other will give him the ratio of turns, which is constant.

Proper

The question involving the burning out of the neutral line fuse in a "balanced" 3-wire circuit at first thought appears irrelevant but a moment's reflection shows it to be a fairly proper one. If the projectionist has any idea at all of what a "balanced" 3-wire system is, he should immediately know that it is impossible for the neutral fuse in such a system to burn out for the simple reason that no current returns to the generator through this fuse. The answer is contained in the very meaning of the word "balanced."

No Meaning

Aside from the catch questions contained in this booklet, there are a number that, probably due to typographical errors, possess no meaning.

For instance, the number of "volts" that a No. 6 wire will "carry" is indeed a moot question and one which could well torture the best brains of the country.

Frankly, we have no means of telling just how many volts such a wire will, when pressed, carry.

What Is Needed

Forgetting these questions for the moment and speaking in a purely general manner, with no one in particular in mind, we are again prompted to call attention to the fact that there is not a single volume written in any language that explains in a simple truthful manner the phenomena encountered in picture projection. It is, indeed, extremely unfortunate that the projection field is, apparently, so unattractive that this long felt need cannot compel the attention of persons possessed of all the information necessary to clearly and concisely describe to the projectionist the fundamental principles.

Proper Design of Projection Rooms Very Important

By J. H. Kurlander

The first consideration in the design of a motion picture projection room is obviously that of safety. This element of safety can be looked at in two ways. It is first necessary to render the projection room fireproof, so as to confine therein any conflagration that may originate in the room itself. This is taken care of by the physical construction of the room. The second requirement is that of panic prevention. The film now in use, the precautions taken in handling it, and the improvements in projector construction have all contributed to reducing the fire hazard to such an extent that film fires are now few and far between. When they do occur they are largely due to gross negligence on the part of the projectionists. The greatest danger, when a fire starts, lies in possible panic among the audience. For this reason it is necessary to close all of the openings in the projection room which lead into the auditorium.

A commonly used method of securing such control consists briefly of a master bar to which are attached the drop shutters by means of tapered pins loosely fitted in holes drilled through the master bar. These pins are held in place by turning the master bar a quarter of a revolution by means of a control lever which lever is then held in place by means of a fused master cord to which are connected all branch fused cords. The release of any one branch line will release the control lever, whereupon the weight of the shutters will rotate the master bar, permitting the shutters to drop.

Generally speaking, the average architect when designing a projection room, is all right until he comes to the matter of laying out the portholes in the front wall of the room. He then usually finds it necessary to fit the ports to meet the local conditions, such as avoiding beams, chandeliers, and the like. This is obviously “placing the cart before the horse” to use a new and original phrase. Despite the fact that projectors are built as to allow some leeway in adjustment for height and angle of tilt, the proper thing to do is to first lay out the projection room ports, and then make the local conditions meet these requirements, whatever they prove to be.

Considerations of comfort and efficiency on the part of the projectionist demand that sufficient side and head room be allowed for in the projection room. With this in mind we have a key to the problem of locating the ports. All “spot” stereopticon lantern and projector ports should be spaced 3 feet apart. When but one projector is used 8 feet should be allowed for it. Making due allowance for clearance between front wall and projector, and projector and rear wall a total width of 10 feet is recommended.

Projection Room Summary

1. Choose a suitable location for the room so that the projection distance preferably will come within the easy range of the common projection systems now on the market. The nearer the screen the better, keeping in mind that nothing less than a 4½-inch equivalent focal length projection lens should be used.

2. Place the room so that the center line of the screen will come midway between the two projectors.

3. Avoid heavy vertical projection angles, keeping in mind that the limit is 12 degrees for results which are fully satisfactory.

4. Be sure that no obstructions are in the path of the light beam after the location is chosen.

5. The projection room should be absolutely fireproof. Safety shutters should fit snugly in their grooves and be cushioned to prevent banging.

6. A ventilating fan and exhaust pipe leading to the open air and having a minimum free opening of 18 inches should be provided to insure good service.

7. All doors to the projection room should be of the sliding gravity type self closing.

8. Toilet facilities should always be provided for the convenience of the projectionist.

9. The artificial lighting should be adequate, and preferably of the totally indirect type.

10. The ceiling should be painted a light cream, the two side walls and rear a light gray and the front wall (toward the screen) a dark gray.

11. A firm foundation for the entire room should be provided. This is highly important.

12. The floor should be varnished or better still painted a dark gray. This precaution is necessary, since the top surface of the floor (usually covered with 1 inch coat of neat cement) will powder and injure the film and projector mechanism.

13. The projection room should be easy of access.

14. All wires of the electrical system should be enclosed in conduit.

15. Power service to the projectors should be placed in conduits beneath the floor and emerging directly under the lamp of each projector.

16. A strong bench and metal cabinets should be provided, either in the projection room or in a special room immediately adjacent to it.

17. House telephones and the necessary signal systems to the manager's office and orchestra pit should be provided.

These suggestions cover briefly the important points governing the design of a suitable projection room. If adhered to, we may confidently look forward to the early disappearance of those three species of projectionists now commonly encountered;—the “camel-backed projectionist,” “the submarine projectionist” and the “rubber-necked projectionist.”

New $500,000 Theatre for Hollywood, Cal.

William Allen, architect, is completing plans for the erection of a new $500,000 theatre building with a seating capacity of 2,500 to be built on site 150 x 290 feet on the east side of Vermont, just south of Hollywood Boulevard, according to Fred Miller, president of the Far West Theatre Corporation. The structure will be erected by Ralph B. Lloyd, who will lease the building for 25 years.
